INSURGENTS CUT WIRES SURROUND PINAR DEL RIO

Bridges of Western Railroad Blown Up, and Cuban Troops Unable to Penetrate to Rebel Territory.

Havana, Sept. 9.—The principal feat ures in the revolt Saturday were attempts by the Western Railway to get trains as far towards Pinar del Rio as possible, and the advancement of an armored train with machine-guns and recruits to the country now occupied by the insurgents.

The latter part of these movements is shrouded in mystery, as also is the situation of Col. Avalos' force in Pinar del Rio City, which, for the past two days, has been surrounded by Pino Guerra's insurgents. Wire communication repeatedly was cut further east to-night, and neither the railroad nor the government is able to communicate beyond Paso Real, 22 miles east of Pinar del Rio City.

The armored troop train, which returned to Palacios on Friday night, started to-day westward from Paso Real. Between La Herradura and Consolación del Sur. it encountered revolutionists, but aside from the fact that firing proceeded for some time, the result of the engagement is not known-It is thought, however, that the troop train got thru to Puerta Golpe, where two more railroad bridges were blown up to-day, and stopped there. Four hundred more reinforcements, consisting of mounted infantry and rural guards, left Havana to-day to co-operate with the Machine Gun Corps in an endeavor to reach Col. Avalos at Pinar del Rio, and another machinegun battery started for Santa Clara on Campaign Text Book Issued by

The Havana factories must, unless the war ends soon, suspend work next summer for a year or more, or until the crop planted a year hence is available, cured and assorted. The results to a city so dependent upon a single in-

The Western Railway to-night received a telegram from Paso Real, saying that the band commanded by the Paise Brothers, who are still holding up the armored troop train between Herradura and Consolacion del Sur, and firing was continuous. The despatch adds that Col. Avalos' troops in Piner del Pio City undoubtedly are sur

PALMA TIRED OF REVOLT ISSUES CALL TO CONGRESS

Havana, Sept. 9.—President Palma has issued a call for a special session of congress to convene Sept. 14, in order to consider the disturbed condition of the country and measures for ending the intolerable situation.

Bowmanville, Sept. 9.-(Special.)-A brutal attack was made last evening shortly after 7 o'clock on Richard Ford, who was returning from his day's work in town to his home, about three miles out. Ford works for the Bowmanville Foundry Co., and was returning home with his arms full of parcels, and when passing under the overhead bridge on the old track of the Grand Trunk Rallway two men sprang out, seized him and bound his hands in front with a rope, threw him on the ground and then covered his head with tar and punched and kicked him unmercifully unmercifully.

Ford is a good athlete and managed to defend himself, partially raising himself and using his feet. The ruffans then took to their heels. Ford pursued, but on account of his hands being bound he could not keep up with them.

He went to S. Allan's, a neighbor's, and had, his hands freed, and came to town and had his wounds attended to by Dr. Tilley.

Ford is an Englishman not long from the old land. He has a wife and two children living in an old house on the lake shore, owned by Erastus J. Bur.

REDUCTION MEANS DUMPING

The motive for the attack is unknown, as any one intending actual murder would have employed different methods. Ford had only 50 cents on him, which the assailants took. The opinion is that they live in the neighborhood, as during the attack they said they would not kill Ford if he would leave the country. Ford is a respectable man, and when he first arrived in the country worked for a farmer in the neighborhood, but left owing to some disagreement, and has lately been working in town and going and evening.

REIGN OF TERROR.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 9.—There can be little doubt that Russian terrorism will grow rapidly as a result of the government's extreme violence program which was announced on Thursday. Not one-tenth part of the story of murder, rapine and outrage of the past few weeks has yet been told and every day heaps horror upon horror's head

National opinion on the government's political program dwells almost exclusively on its administrative measures, and is wholly sceptical regarding the promises of legislation. All that the independent public recognize is that their existence is put under control of local authority. There is nothing to secure freedom of action to an active Liberal candidate for the net douma. He is as completely at the mercy of the local authorities as if he were a terrorist or a revolutionary.

Experience up to the present is that the jails are being filled with comparatively orderly persons who have been agitating for democratic reform while outright terrorists remain at large. In view of the inferior capacity and character of subordinate officialdom in Russia, it is a gloomy cutlook for the Liberal element that their actions are henceforth to be subject to the threats and black-their actions are henceforth to be subject to the threats and blackmail of underpaid officeholders.

All legal preliminaries toward securing serious trial are now set aside and the system of dealing with individuals by arbitrary administrative order, which has been the curse of Russia since the assassination of Alexander II., is re-emphasized.

The opinion of all parties on Premier Stolypin's legislative program concurs that his ministry has decided to continue along the old road of hursely existing the conscious transfer. the old road of bureaucratic routine. It conscientiously aspires to effect reforms, but in the same breath recognizes its powerlessness to do anything without the co-operation of national representatives whom it fears to face.

"If who want it?"
"Well, if it is needed. I am not sure but the board has the power to say whether the company can run the cars and settle it at once."

"We will submit one if we have to.

"Who is to decide whether a bylaw is necessary?"
"I suppose they must go to the attorney-general about that," thought the mayor, but he was not sure about the procedure. He was certain that a bylaw to authorize the cars would a certain the correction of the correction. carry by an overwhelming majority, and he was evidently inclined to the view that the railway board could place any interpretation they pleased upon the Railway Act.

John Brown, who brought the suit last July which caused all the fuss, said he had not yet received service of the decision of the board, but he or the decision of the board, but he had read a report in one of the papers. Mr. Brown has a Gilbertian sense of humor, and the situation appeals to him very strongly in which the railway board refuse to allow him as the act provides to take his case to the proper court, and at the same time admit their inability to give any ruling on the legality or illegality of the offence complained of.

Mr. Brown was very emphatic legal.

Mr. Brown was very emphatic last night with regard to his application. "I did not ask for a trial of the case.
I was simply applying for the right that every British subject has enjoyed for a thousand years of taking his case to the proper court for trial. I only came up to show my bona fides.
It was their place to put me right if I It was their place to put me right if I was wrong."

Mr. Brown sees nothing in the act requiring an appeal to the privy council. An appeal "shall lie" to the privy council, but that only means in due course after the ordinary appeals have been taken. Moreover, the sum must exceed $4000, in which an appeal goes to the privy council. to the privy council under the act. Mr. Brown has sued for a large sum in he aggregate, but these are made of separate sums of $400 in each of 101 different cases. As to the attorney-general collecting the fines he said:
"That is simply ridiculous. I would use a stronger word were it not so august a board. There is an absolute bar in the act to the attorney-general interfering without my consent. I won't say what I am going to do, but I will do it," he added, with the air of a mind made up. "I will make it a point to see the attorney-general to-
