Cures Children's Croupy Colds
At this season of cold, searching winds and changeable weather, children will catch cold, will contract croup, bronchitis and sore throat. The experienced mother knows of nothing half so good as a vigorous rubbing of neck and chest with Nerviline—rub it in well, and apply a Nerviline Porous Plaster. If the case is obstinate, give twenty drops of Nerviline in hot sweetened water every four hours.

This treatment is simply wonderful—swollen, inflamed tissues are soothed and healed, coughing is promptly allayed, hard, strong phlegm is loosened and every trace of cold and cough disappears.

Nerviline is so safe to use, so powerful, so penetrating—makes such a good all round household remedy that for nearly fifty years thousands of bottles are used every day.

NERVILINE
Remember the name Nerviline, and refuse any substitute that a druggist may ask you to take instead of Nerviline. Large bottles 25c each.

THIS WEEK AT THE THEATRES

At the Princess.

"Polly of the Circus," a three-act play by Margaret Mayo, in which Mabel Taliaferro appeared at the Princess last night, makes appeal for popular favor largely on the score of the novelty afforded in the glimpses given of the glitter and tinsel of the savadist arena. It is with a distinct sense of freshness and a departure from the ordinary that the audience view a convincing presentation of the exterior and interior of a typical domain of canvas, with the tinsel and spangles, the blare and bluster, and the familiar sights and sounds of the busy tent.

Miss Taliaferro, who was little known in Toronto, made a very favorable impression in the role of Polly, the circus rider, who, thru a misadventure while performing, becomes domiciled in a large parsonage, and who becomes attached with childlike simplicity to the Rev. John Douglas. When she is first introduced, she is unfeignedly, her talk the patois of the circus, but, with an underlying gentleness and a yearning for the better things of life, she is sure to win the sympathy of the audience.

The third act, with its circus atmosphere, is entirely satisfactory from a spectacular viewpoint, but events are hurried along too rapidly, and with too much that smacks of the melodramatic to do justice to the development of the last story, or chapter, as it were.

The circus tent interior scene, with its equestrian performer, its clowns and acrobats, is of striking character, and the succeeding tableaux, picturing the fading away of the gay avalanche, is an achievement in scenic effect.

Earl Rochester, who is strong, manly and altogether likeable, and excellent character work is done by Mattie Ferguson, Guy Nichols, J. B. Hollis, Joseph Brennan and others. Jamieson Cherry, as Deacon Strong, is inclined to invest the part with a touch of the sad man in a western, and there are several clever children, Burton Japels and Ethel Downie being prominent.

At the Grand.

One of the sweetest and simplest plays ever presented by any star is Israel Zangwill's comedy, "Merely Mary Ann." It was presented by Vaughan Glaser, Fay Courtney and their clever associates at the Grand Theatre last night, and the evening performance there were audiences that taxed the capacity of the theatre.

A more simple tale than the love experiences of Mary Ann, and the poor composer, Lancelot, could scarcely be more so. and the drama closes on a new beginning under better auspices.

George Lawcett as John Ganton showed himself to be a strong and thoroughly accomplished actor. Already favorably known in Toronto as Harlan in "The Man of the Hour," he gave a splendid interpretation of the head of the firm of Ganton & Co., who has worked upwards from the ranks.

Ostensibly devoted entirely to securing the continued success of the great business he has built up, he retains other and higher impulses. He does good by stealth in the name of his daughter, and those who know his history love him despite his ruthless determination to maintain his supremacy at all costs.

Mr. Lawcett was supported by a strong and well-balanced company. Miss Lauretta Taylor as May Keating proved herself to be an actress of genuine emotional power and fully shared the approval bestowed on the whole performance. Miss Jane Peyton gave an admirable rendering of the role of Mrs. Jack Wilson, and Miss Mary Cecil, as the daughter, was equally satisfactory.

The other parts were equally well filled and the scenery and stage setting completed a very satisfactory production, which altogether is one of the best and strongest presentations made in Toronto within recent years.

Ganton & Co. will be given during the week, with the usual matinees on Thursday and Saturday.

At the Gayety.
Billie Ritchie and Rich McAllister are hilarious in a genuine musical extravaganza called "Vanity Fair," at the Gayety this week.

The fun is fast and furious and yet there has been successfully eliminated the bareness of the farce which often ruins the average travesty.

The support given to these two famous comedians is excellent, so that the production does not fall down on necessary details.

The second act, wherein there is depicted "A Night at the Vaudeville Show," is wonderfully amusing.

Billie Ritchie, as the man in the box, and McAllister as Perkins, the bad boy, provoke much merriment in the audience. The antics of these two are nonstop refreshing.

Between acts the Musketier-Quartet provide entertainment of a capital nature, while the "The Physical Culture Marvel," does some hair-raising stunts in midair.

"Brown of Harvard," at the Royal Alexandra next Monday.
