THE resemblance between a summer dog and a baseball catcher is easily stated—both wear muzzles and both snap at flies.

"How many of you are there?" asked a voice from an upper window, of a serenading party. "Four," was therepy. "Divide that among you," said the voice, as a bucket of dirty water fell like gentle dew from heaven on those beneath.

THIS is a boy's composition on girls:—"Girls are the only folk that has their own way every time. Girls is of several thousand kinds, and sometimes one girl can be like several thousand girls if she wants to do anything. This is all I know about girls, and father says the less I know about them the better off I am."

HE—"I beg your pardon, miss, but I don't admire your last name." She—"Great Heaven, man! Haven't I done everything in my power to change it? Must I knock a man down with a club?"

IT is the habitual thought that frames itself into our life. It affects us even more than our intimate social relations do. Our confidential friends have not so much to do in shaping our lives, as thoughts have which we harbor.

IT is not what we earn, but what we save, that makes us rich. It is not what we eat, but what we digest, that makes us strong. It is not what we read, but what we remember, that makes us wise. It is not what we intend, but what we do, that makes us useful.
