

NOISELESS GUN LATEST WEAPON

Hull Chemist Invents Remarkable Machine Which Discharges Explosive Gases.

SUCCESSFUL TRIALS

New Invention Which Ignites Everything it Hits at a Distance of Five Miles.

LONDON, March 15.—A remarkable machine gun has been invented by Mr. Ernest Welsh, a Hull chemist. The gun, weighing about three hundred weight, is discharged by explosive gases, and it is claimed that it will send projectiles a distance of five miles, which will then ignite whatever they hit. The gun is not unlike a Maxim in appearance, and the mechanism consists in part of three generators which manufacture three distinct gases. In the stopper there is a small sponge saturated with a certain fluid, which also gives off a gas, while there is, further, a supply of oxygen and hydrogen inside the cylinder. The cylinder rests on a plate, and by the setting into motion of a small electric motor situated on the right-hand of the gun the gases are exploded, and the projectile is propelled through the muzzle. There is no report when the gun is fired. Mr. Welsh states that there is no recoil, and there is no pressure on the outside of the cylinder. All pressure is felt forward.

The nature of the gases is a secret.

which Mr. Welsh would not divulge, but he stated that the gun has been tested with satisfactory results to himself and all who witnessed the demonstration. He said: "It has taken me thirteen years to find out the different gases. The projectiles will ignite on water, and also I have made the stuff I have not found out as yet what will extinguish the flames they were in flames and were quickly destroyed. While experimenting with the gun the other day Mr. Welsh had a narrow escape. He had placed several grains of his secret explosive chemical compound in a test tube, and was putting it into an iron box, when an explosion occurred. Fortunately the explosive was outward and not upward, and Mr. Welsh escaped with injuries to his face and right hand."

THE SACRED LAKE OF LIFE

P. Amaury Talbot the First European to Gaze Into the Holy Waters.

LONDON, March 15.—In Southern Nigeria, Africa, there is a "Sacred Lake of Life," upon which, according to popular belief, depend the lives of 100,000 people. The first white man to look upon it was Mr. P. Amaury Talbot, a district commissioner, and Mr. Eakin, news of whose discovery has just been received. Heretofore the knowledge of the lake has been kept a jealously guarded secret from all Europeans, and not even the natives, with the exception of the high priests, had been allowed to approach the sacred water—the dwelling-place of the greatest deity of the race of the Ibibios, whose chief town is Ikot Obo. Access to the lake was through a sacred grove so cunningly contrived that a stranger might pass within a few yards yet never find the holy pool. Mr. Talbot and his party guided to the spot found that the water was full of great fish, on the welfare of which depended the life of the Ibibio race. The fish were so tame that they fed from the hand of the reigning high priest, the only native human being allowed to look upon the water. It is especially sacred as the dwelling-place of the most powerful deity—the Great Mother—Isu-Ma (the face of love), whose symbol is a holy rock facing the entrance. Near by the travelers found a second pool, in the centre of which is a palm tree, near which in the water are stationed a man, a girl and a boy, who bear the name of the goddess as they were granted to the parents in direct answer to prayer.

A Parable About the Bread Business

Two men are walking down the street. They are friends. They each draw equal salaries, yet one is prosperous, the other is not. One lives in his own home, with a fine lawn and garden. The other pays rent and is always hard up and borrowing money. What makes the difference? One word—MANAGEMENT. You can apply that little sketch to the Bakers of Toronto. Some have struggled along trying to keep up a 24-ounce loaf they didn't know how to manage at a profit, and to even up the loss have cooked up a little starveling loaf weighing only 12 ounces—one-half the regular size—and are asking five cents for it—as much as the public can get a big 24-ounce loaf for. My business has prospered until it is the largest single bread bakery in Canada. I have always given the best quality bread, and have always sold it on a close margin of profit. The reason I can undersell other bakers, and give even extra value, is that one word quoted above—MANAGEMENT.

Now Listen to This:

I buy the BEST FLOUR—anybody is at liberty to ask me what flour I use. I buy other things BETTER than other bakers will pay for. QUALITY gets more consideration in my bakery than any bakery I know of, and I have hunted around in bakeries all my life, learning things. I can refer to over 10,000 people in Toronto who will say they like my bread better than any other they ever used. You need not pay 6 cents a loaf for good bread. I will deliver my bread at your door at the wholesale price—5 cents—the price other bakers sell to the groceryman for. Those who buy my bread get the groceryman's profit, because I do not sell to stores. Every loaf comes direct—fresh—from my bakery—every day.
