der' out of chaos ensues. So after the great political hurricane will Mr. Walter E. Foster, the then new premier, appear on the scene and set in order the effects of his new provincial household with the one great ideal in view—of bringing back to the province of New Brunswick its lost reputation and reconstructing its stability from every point of view, so that the country of our nativity, like its sister province which today is reflecting its purity upon the waters of the Pacific, may likewise reflect hers upon the waters of the Atlantic.

'Now, Mr. Chairman, this has been of necessity a very informal campaign, first because of the limited time available to us, and secondly because of the fact that our government friends, knowing when the election would be held, have already hired the few available authorities to then sprang the date for the election and then say: 'Come on now and pitch in.' As a result, they have been able to come from the public platform and through their newspaper medium, the Standard, to hurl insinuations, misrepresentations, and slander, with the fear of contradiction, into the hearing of all these addresses and newspapers articles and editorials until now I possess a full hand, and desire during the time at my disposal to set the record straight and to found and untrue statements.

Prohibition.

"First—the question of prohibition—I regret very much that the government party has seen fit to make a political football of this extremely important piece of legislation—one which is being either considered or adopted by about every country related to the British empire, to say nothing of the other countries that are at war. It is national sentiment, and it would be exceedingly un-diplomatic of any country not to be considering it in one form or other.

"In New Brunswick, however, the present government and legislature who are trying to make so much capital by misrepresentations of the decision, of both leader and all candidates seeking election connected with the opposition party, had never given this all important subject which was stirring this nation as well as that to the south of us to their very depths, when the opposition party in formulating introduced what at that time might well be denominated advanced legislation—a prohibition plank—so often referred to by the government candidates. As time went on, the plank was taken by the Opposition, the government was compelled to introduce some form of legislation. Had it not been for the Opposition, I have grave doubts in my mind even today of their having framed any legislation in the regard. So, after all, the Opposition is the source really, that the people of New Brunswick must thank for having any act in this regard today. It is the Opposition, the line of the opposition platform's formation, that at the time the government was forced to act, the tide of public sentiment had almost come to the full, and the government were perfectly safe, as any one in the country would have known.

power would have been, in bringing back today, without the limitation of an act such as appears on the face of the law, in which I have been led to understand that the government party today, are holding in front of them prohibition to the emergence people and (possibly due to these loopholes) behind them something to those who are employed in this traffic. The Standard newspaper of February 16, 1917, in an article headed "Dr. Roberts and Prohibition," when they were a year and a half after the opposition party is returned to power, be understood, and that I am making a foolish attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the temperance people of this province should I make any statement to the contrary. They are making malicious statements with the sole idea of influencing the temperance vote away from the party. Anyone with ordinary intelligence knows that if there is a law upon the statute books calling for the enactment of prohibition that, like all other laws, it must be enforced. This is manifestly positive, if such is necessary, by the signatures of the leader and every opposition candidate signifying that they have answered the three following questions: "Do you favor the enactment of the Temperance Federation of New Brunswick?"

"If elected, will you support the prohibition law now on the statute books?"

"2. Will you refuse to endorse any amendments likely to weaken same?"

"3. Will you use every endeavor to enforce same?"

"Now, Mr. Chairman, if any further proof is required to demonstrate my sincerity as to my disposition regarding the enforcement of said law on May 1, next, I am willing to make the bold declaration in your hearing that if the Opposition are elected at this time, and any May 1 next fail to put into action said law that I, regardless of what position I hold, will resign. Can I do more?"

Gentlemen, the only moral to be deducted from all of this newspaper platform talk by representatives of the government is that the only way to get the representation to detract from the candidates, of the status of whom they are becoming just a little bit afraid, and to get the representation to support the prohibition as I intimated before, for a political football and a medium for misrepresentation, then they will misrepresent every evergreen in the forest and be returned to you. IT LOOKS ON THE FACE OF IT THAT THEY ARE PRETTY HARD UP AND THEY ARE PRETTY HARD UP BECAUSE THE PROHIBITION RAPIDLY GROWING, and these are the people who would be so much for prohibition, and who are trying to depreciate those of the Opposition that are really sincere and whom they are really afraid of. I thank you for their having any legislation. They are the people whose political standard, the Standard, is one of the few honest ones. They are the people whose ticket have on it two gentlemen who voted against prohibition. They are the people who collected some $6,000 from the liquor interests to aid in fixing legislation favorable to these interests as against those of prohibition.

Handles Mr. Potts.

"There is another matter, of but very little interest to me, but which might indirectly be to some others. I have been advised that instead of two parties contesting this election there are three, the government, the Opposition, and the People. Mr. Potts, during one of his recent addresses, fell short of ammunition, so turned his attention towards 'the Coroner,' and I suppose it will be his duty, according to the dictation of the 'People's' newspaper, to come forward to immediately arrange to have made a post-mortem; but in this case we have better make an ante-mortem examination. Mr. Potts may say, 'What is the use of set for Feb. 28. Now, what is worrying Mr. Potts?' He feels that he has failed to get the Labor vote that he would like to have gotten, so in accordance with the motto of the 'People's' newspaper party with which he is so affiliated, he immediately begins to mis-

IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT

In the dead of night, when pain was severe and doctors distant, when someone loved one seemed to be threatened with serious consequences, have you ever caught up, with a start, the following words: "My favorite family remedy?"

We don't know what you consider your favorite family remedy, but if you had a family remedy that had been used so long that it had been successfully serving the humanity for more than 100 years, then it must be Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. For you use it for aches and pains, for you had, in Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, a preparation not only powerful and penetrating in cases of bad sprains, but also useful in cases of rheumatism, pain, or soreness, but also one you could safely and unhesitatingly administer inwardly for sore throat, coughs, and colds.

When necessary to have its wonderful healing and soothing qualities. It goes to the seat of an internal trouble. It is usually termed a "sovereign" remedy.

The dying man grasps at straw and may even introduce politics into the coronor's court where a jury of seven respectable citizens, over half of whom were Conservatives, were honestly endeavoring to arrive at a just and true verdict. The coronor, a man of the late Frederick Lisle, whose sorrow-stricken wife and children reside in Fairview, He claims to have been informed that the jury had been tampered with. The jury, had made pointed reference to the carelessness of the 'longshoremen about the ship, and the coronor thought they might have to do with the repeal of the Compensation act. The truth of the matter is this: The coronor's address was not given, and the jury were shown various pieces of evidence bearing upon the case. A coroner is not supposed to be a judge, and he is not to interfere that would have a tendency to influence the jury, but to state the facts as they occur and then say: 'Now, gentlemen, I leave you to do your duty.' If no such and such conditions obtained and from the evidence listened to and the facts stated, you can jury use in arriving at a verdict.'

when the computer read to them, that they were asking the special part of the verdict again, and that you use this clause. They then answered that they explained that the foreman was asking the clerk to see that all was right, and that they were asked for a few seconds was looking at the verdict. Mr. Chisholm, the true interpretation of the clause was that what really did take place—but this was not a question, it was not a trial. This was a question, and if I saw that any question was put to the jurymen in my mind as to why having answered the question, it was not a question, it was a statement, I would have said to the jurymen with me and if I had not been so sure of the statements that I had made, I would have said to the jurymen that I would have said that they would have saved the free and voluntary verdict which would be now, the people realizing that they were not to be asked to answer the question, but to answer the question.

lose. It pays to be above board and state plain bare facts.

The Public Health.

"Now, Mr. Chairman, as I have already intimated from this platform, one of the principal reasons for my permitting my name to go before the convention as a candidate was that I have had much to say in bringing in legislation that when spread upon the state books at Frederick would give rise to the question of the health of our cities, a public health act embracing all it will all of its many ramifications. I have had to go to the various departments have departments to control: mining, agriculture, crown lands, finance, and the like. I have had to convince, many other departments, but what about the most essential factor of the health of the people, the blood without which they are worse than miserable and their monetary value reduced to nothing?"

"Why the man in the street is beginning to grasp the fact that it is his interest to have the government that should be healthy and for selfish reason if for none other he is therefore convinced that that not only of the future but that present attention but that money spent in this direction is money well spent. The principal reason for optimism in this regard is that the people themselves are awakening to the great importance of public health problems and are taking an active as well as an intelligent interest in their solution.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured until the inflamed portion of the ear is reached. There is no doubt that the hearing of the ear is impaired by the inflammation of the middle ear and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be lost. Catarrhal deafness is not a permanent deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. It is caused by the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

A Few of the Departments of Public Health.

"Compulsory medical inspection in public schools; arrangements made whereby new water supplies throughout our province be scientifically at once supplied; the establishment of a hospital for the treatment of typhoid infection examined, etc. The providing a first class laboratory under the supervision of one of the most able men procurable in our country; the establishment of a hospital for the arriving at absolutely correct diagnosis whether it be surgical or medical cases. This branch of the service is the most important to the community and is important to each and every individual citizen. We are well today but tomorrow our condition may be one requiring the medical attention of a specialist. With the above proposal you have at hand all that could possibly be provided at the largest medical and surgical centres. This same gentleman is a first class surgeon and a first class expert, thus aiding materially in the recovery of our province."

"The inspection of food and food supplies—their sources and their surroundings—is one of the most important of the duties of health houses because of the vast quantities of foodstuffs and storages of whatever variety."

"Even the roads receive attention from the health houses of public health. In fact, there are few agencies in civic affairs which do not directly or indirectly have some bearing upon this great question."

Medical Inspection in Schools.

"Some facts regarding medical inspection in schools are of interest to children alive at the age of six years and by specially arranged law are compelled to attend school, but while there are considerable numbers of children who may be subjected to a long period of illness and perhaps death. Medical inspection would prevent this. The child who is born with a defect is determined in childhood when tendencies to disease can be recognized and efforts by suitable treatment. Only by a well planned medical inspection can the latent pathological or hereditary conditions be detected, which if overlooked gradually become worse and as a result of this neglect the child eventually becomes much more seriously ill. The child loses much of sight or hearing or the development of some physical or mental deformity or as a weakening from a sickness. The child is exposed to great struggles without the red light of danger being exhibited, until finally he goes over the precipice of disease and death painlessly and without any warning. The compulsory for this child to have undergone a thorough medical examination before entering school these defects could be detected and the medical aid offered and the child's future be brighter, happier and more healthful one.

"Anything that tends to increase the value of the child's life, to increase his manhood and of the highest order of manship and or the highest order and worthy of a prominent place in the deliberations of our legislatures. Society pays a heavy penalty for its indifference as regards its children. Let us consult an authority on criminal statistics and it will bear me out in the statement that of the inmates of our various penal institutions of our country the majority are not there of their own adult choice but through circumstances the force of which they were unable to overcome through physical and mental defects and lack of training in the early days of their life.

"Equal stress might be laid on conditions found in hospitals for the insane, but it is sufficient for our purpose to merely mention in passing that a large part of this terrible affliction could be prevented by attention to the victims in their youth.

"Affliction of eyes, ears, nose and throat, says nothing of heart, lungs, glands and bones, are under this supervision, so that the child starting out on the race for his or her education does so without a severe handicap.

"Moral and physical reasons why medical inspection should obtain: the moral respect and of parents to their children, and to God, who would thus remove all impediments to a child's development."

all impediments to a child's highest development.

"I have changed and clothed and generally look after our children from every standpoint, but the one of most importance we neglect.

"To save the lives and promote the health of the people is sound economy to any country.

"Now, Mr. Chairman, our leader, Mr. Foster, has subscribed to the support and co-operation of such legislation for the purpose of the Opposition to the Government returned to power. This should mean everything to the families of our province, and remember to have same, it will be necessary to vote the whole ticket, and not only that, but to stand firm in returning the Opposition to power and have good government."
