

TENNIS SHOES

High and Low

Everywhere, everyone plays, and it's not style that wins, but the proper selection of comfortable and perfectly fitted footwear. It's the one game in which feet play such an important part.

Our Tennis Shoes are the same models worn by some of the greatest exponents of the game. High and low styles in leathers and fabrics, reinforced and mostly with rubber soles. Every model is smart in appearance, low in price and comfortable enough in wear to accelerate one's game.

ST. JOHN COUNTY MEETINGS; TEACH THE CANNING OF FOODS

Series Arranged—Instruction by Miss Bertha Boyer—Letter from
Secretary of Agriculture

When in Fredericton recently Warden McLellan and County Secretary Kelley interviewed W. R. Reek, secretary for agriculture, relative to a series of meetings in St. John county to instruct women in canning vegetables, etc. The following from Mr. Reek gives full information:

Department of Agriculture,
Fredericton, June 19, 1917.

Dear Sir:—I am enclosing the dates for the meetings in Saint John County, which will be held by Miss Bertha Boyer, of St. John.

I informed you by telephone that our division supplied all materials, but I have learned later that they expect the local people to supply these. While it is quite a long list, it is not a very formidable one.

I trust this information will be satisfactory.

Yours very truly,
W. R. REEK,
Secretary for Agriculture.

J. KING KELLEY, ESQ.,
Prince William street,
St. John, N. B.

'Ripper's' Werk Found on Body Of Ruth Gruger

Autopsy Shows Death Due To Crushing of Skull and Use of Long Knife

No Accomplice Suspected

Efforts Bent Upon Getting Cocchi
Back From Italy—Swann To Ask Wilson's Help—Police
Under Three Inquiries

New York, June 20.—An autopsy, made at Bellevue Hospital, proved that Ruth Gruger was the victim of a murder of the "ripper" type. A long knife wound was found in the abdomen, extending to the spinal column. This wound was inflicted, in the opinion of Dr. Otto H. Schultze, medical assistant to the district attorney, after the blow which had crushed the skull, but before death.

A thorough search of the basement of Alfredo Cocchi's bicycle shop at 542 West 127th street, made under the direction of Police Captain J. J. Coney, showed that, before digging the pit in which the body was buried, the murderer had started to excavate in another part of the basement, but had encountered solid rock at a depth of eighteen inches. A large locker was found, where it was thought that Cocchi hid the body until he completed the second pit in the basement. The body was probably in this locker while the police were questioning Cocchi on the floor above on Feb. 14 and when Cocchi was leaving the shop on the day before with her skates under her arm.

This statement by Cocchi is the strongest evidence against him from his own mouth, as the skates and the shoes to which they were attached were found yesterday in the pit from which the body had been removed. The investigation of the basement showed that Cocchi tolled desperately on the nights of Feb. 13 and 14 to cover the evidences of the crime which must have been plentiful in the basement at the time the police first interrogated Cocchi on the street floor. By the time the first investigation of the premises was made on the night of Feb. 15, after Cocchi had disappeared, the traces of murder had been so well effaced that the police saw nothing out of place.

Swann to Appeal to Wilson

District Attorney Swann has decided to go to Washington to see President Wilson to ask that a special and urgent request for the delivery of Cocchi be made to the Italian government, which has consistently refused to surrender men charged with murder, except on the stipulation that the death sentence should not be imposed. As a war ally of this country, it is believed that Italy will in this case grant the request which has been denied in other cases.

Mrs. Grace Humiston of 50 East Forty-second street, a lawyer, whose efforts were solely responsible for the finding of the body, made a statement appealing for a thorough investigation of white slave gangs in this city, which are alleged to make a practice of spiriting girls away. She said she knew of nine cases of missing girls which called for immediate inquiry, and that she knew of twenty-two basements in this city where girls had been trapped. When she was asked why she had not turned this information over to the police she replied:

"Because I was afraid if that were done, the girls would be spirited away or murdered."

Mrs. Humiston is convinced that Cocchi had accomplices and that they will eventually be found. It is said, however, that there is no instance on record where more than a single individual has been implicated in a murder of the "ripper" type.

The most recent of previous "ripper" crimes in this city were the killings of five-year-old Lenora Cohn at 370 Third avenue on March 19, 1915, and of Charles Murray, four years old, at 270 First avenue, on May 3, 1915. The murderers of these children were never caught. These crimes may be traced to Cocchi, as men addicted to crimes of this nature are extremely rare. Persons guilty of such acts are invariably those whose minds have been impaired by long depravity.

There will probably be three investigations of the failure of the police to make an adequate search of the premises where Ruth Gruger was last known to be alive. The grand jury will receive evidence against Cocchi today, and Assistant District Attorney Bohan said that it would be within its province, if the grand jury so desired, to investigate the case and make a presentment.

NO TROUBLE AT ALL

"May I trouble you to pass the H. P.?" How many times in one day does the simple request go round the tables of those happy people who have been acquainted with H. P. and know all its distinctive and good qualities.

It is no trouble at all to pass the H. P., provided that you know it will come round to you again—otherwise, a self-sacrifice not to be demanded of a man with a discriminating taste in sauces.

H. P. Sauce is thick, rich, delicious. Its flavors are the combined expressions of choicest Oriental fruits and spices and pure malt vinegar. Its name, borne out by the letters "H. P." and a picture of the British House of Parliament upon the bottle, is worth remembering by every man and woman who desires to taste, for the first time, a perfectly delicious sauce.

upon it. Corner Patrick J. Riordan said he had been, at his request, "to inquire into police delinquency, if there has been any." Police Commissioner Woods has announced that he would thoroughly sift the facts to establish why the police permitted Cocchi to escape and why they did not make an early search of the basement.

Adds to Mystery of Police

The examination of the basement made it still more difficult to understand how the police and even passers-by failed to notice suspicious activities on the part of Cocchi between Feb. 13 and Feb. 15, in which time he disposed of the body. A further search of the burrow in which he hid the body showed that, in addition to stuffing the grave with garments of all sorts, Cocchi had packed into it tablecloths, towels and blankets, which he had probably carried on several trips from his home at 55 Manhattan street across to his shop near 127th and Manhattan streets.

The investigation of the basement was carried on by a force of twelve laborers under Captain Gray and several detectives. After all of the tool boxes, machines and lockers had been moved from the basement, the evidence of the first excavation was discovered in the southwest corner of the larger basement room. A section of the board floor, about two feet by three, had been removed so expertly that only a thin line without a splinter to show where the sawing had been done. This section was nailed to two by four joists. After it had been removed the concrete under it was found to have been broken into small pieces and carefully replaced.

At this stage of the investigation the police thought they were about to find evidence to substantiate rumors and guesses that other bodies had been buried in the basement by Cocchi. A little digging, however, brought them to Cocchi a little more than a foot below the concrete.

At this disaster to his first plans, Cocchi had evidently gone steadily to work, though the body of his victim was probably only a few feet away, to fill in the hole and repair the floor with infinite pains. Then on the opposite side of the room he sawed up the floor, broke the concrete underneath and dug the hole which served his purpose. In their further digging yesterday the police found that this burrow, in which the body was laid, ran three feet beyond the point where the body was found. There was nothing but loose earth in this further extension of the tunnel.

A piece of the skull, three by four inches, which was missing when the body was disinterred, was not found in the minute search of the basement. This seems to be the only thing that lends credence to the theory that the body might have been committed elsewhere and the body moved to the shop.

An ice shopper with a wooden handle and a piece of steel four inches long at the end, with large, sawlike teeth on the blade, was found under a locker, and a piece of steel four inches long, used by Cocchi to dig the tunnel. The tool with which he smashed the concrete has not been found, and the police are trying to discover whether he borrowed a pickaxe in the neighborhood and afterward returned it.

A BUSINESS-LIKE SPEECH

(Fredericton Mail)

There have been a number of excellent addresses delivered in the legislature this session, but few will rank ahead of that delivered yesterday afternoon on the budget by Fred Magee, the junior member for Westmorland. Mr. Magee is one of a number of young men who rallied to the support of the Hon. W. E. Foster in the late election, and rendered yeoman service in the campaign which resulted in the overthrow of the most corrupt, incompetent and deceitful government that ever held the reins of power in this province. Mr. Magee is not a politician of the usual bucking type—so much in evidence in this province in recent years—but a brainy, energetic young man who has achieved success in his private business, and entered public life, not for the purpose of self-aggrandizement, but from a sense of duty to his province in which he has so much at stake.

The young member for Westmorland lays no pretence to oratory, but he has a good command of language and was not long in convincing the house that he knew exactly what he was talking about. He spoke from the standpoint of a broad-minded business man who has the interests of the province at heart, and he threw out suggestions for increasing the revenue of the province which deserve and undoubtedly will receive the serious consideration of the government. He stated what every business man knows to be a fact, that the financial condition of this province is serious and that drastic measures must be taken to restore the equilibrium between receipts and expenditure. He suggested that the shortage might be made up by an increase in the stampage, a tax on wild lands, a tax on theatre tickets and additional taxation on banks, insurance companies and public utilities.

It is certainly a reasonable proposition that if additional taxes must be raised to impose them on Crown Lands and public utilities rather than place them on the various municipalities, as was done under the Hazen and Flemming regimes, is a number of suggestions to support the government really furnish the only justification for taxing the people and it is decidedly in the public interest that the burden should be distributed as equitably as possible. We believe that the people of this province will readily respond to any reasonable demand made upon them, now that they know that the era of graft and incompetence is at an end, and they are assured that any money which they contribute will be honestly expended in meeting the requirements of the public service.

The Society of Wholesale and Retail Bakers of London announce an increase in the price of bread to eleven pence per 4-pound loaf.

MISSIONARIES SAFE, SO TURKEY REPORTS

Mission Buildings Are Also Said to be Intact—Armenian Relief Work

Boston, June 19.—Assurances from the Turkish government as to the safety of missionaries and mission property in that country were received by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions through the State Department advices from the American Minister at Constantinople.

A statement given out by the board tonight said that the Swedish Legation at Constantinople had learned from the Turkish Foreign Office that buildings of American institutions would not be occupied by the Turks, and "that it desired in everything to act as gentlemen toward the United States government." It was further announced that American workers in the interior provinces could come to Constantinople and that arrangements were being made for their traveling in groups.

The despatches further say that missionaries at all localities are reported safe and well. The colleges at Constantinople and Beirut are now open and at work again. Three of the American boards fifteen centres of work in Turkey, Harpoot, Tala and Brousa, are now abandoned and their staffs are at Constantinople or on the way to that city. Applications are pending for another missionary party to leave Constantinople, following the ones that have already safely arrived at Berne.

At the time the Berne despatches were sent, important plans were being made to continue relief work for Armenians in Turkey through helpers from the Swiss committee. It was said, however, that unless funds amounting to $100,000 a month could be assured, the work must soon cease, resulting in the withdrawal of all missionaries.

"Any rags? Any old iron?" chanted the dealer, as he knocked at the suburban villa. The man at the house himself opened the door.

"No, go away," he snapped, irritably. "There's nothing for you. My wife is away."

The itinerant merchant hesitated a moment, and then inquired: "Any old bottles?"—Tit-Bits.
