OLD CANNON DAMAGES TOWN. Set Off to Rid It of Three Balls, It Hurts Them Through Waterloo, N. J.

Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Firing of a Civil War cannon in Lafayette Park at Waterloo to free the piece of three eight-pound balls that had been lodged in it, damaged two Waterloo residences, the Waterloo Hotel, and clipped several large limbs from intervening trees. School children and citizens on their way home for luncheon escaped injury only because the cannon was aimed above the street level.

For many months the cannon had been stuffed to its mouth with balls by mischievous boys, and the Park Commissioners have made several attempts to dislodge them. All were removed but three, and Charles Genung offered to do the job.

Pouring two ounces of powder into the hole, and using a fire cracker fuse, Mr. Genung touched off the piece. Ordinarily the amount of powder used would have been only sufficient to dislodge the balls, but evidently some powder remained in the gun from previous firing and the explosion was powerful enough to send the three balls soaring over the trees.

One ball plowed into the west side of the Genung home, cut through one of the upper rooms and lodged in a front wall. Another ball clipped several large limbs from tree in its path and ricocheted, landing in the yard of Charles Terwilliger. The third ball traveled nearly 5,000 feet and crashed through the second story of the Waterloo Hotel.

Powers were appointed to select the society representative on the official board.

Wilfred Dixon and Eddie Cunningham, who recently escaped from the Boys' Industrial Home, were captured at Hampton and returned to the Home by Constable Shortcliffe on Tuesday night last.

AFRICANS INDIFFERENT TO PURELY PHYSICAL BEAUTY

Natives Have No Word in Their Vocabulary Meaning Beautiful Exclusively.

The indifference of the African natives to human physical beauty, which practically amounts to its total elimination as a factor in the relations between the sexes, has often been commented upon, writes Hans Condenhove in "The Atlantic Monthly."

A native whose attention you draw to the handsome features of another native—either woman or man—always responds vaguely, indifferently, never emphatically, rather giving the impression that he does not quite understand what you mean.

It is significant that there exists in the Swahili language no word which expresses handsome or beautiful, exclusively. The word suri, the only one used in this sense, means "good" as well as beautiful, the first idea conveyed, when it is applied to a person, being always that of moral, rather than physical, excellence.

The incongruity which often exists between parties forming a union almost suggests the absence of even individuality as a factor in these relations. And yet it probably would be incorrect and unjust to explain the phenomenon by the preponderance of mere brute sensuality over all finer feelings, for it cannot be denied that natives are by no means devoid of a sense of beauty.

They admire it in animals, in flowers, in pictures, landscapes and music; they have clever artists, and their perception of what is ridiculous in expression or appearance is perhaps keener than that of the average European, notwithstanding their passion for the odd and the baroque.

One might say that their indifference to beauty is confined exclusively to sex relations or that their esthetic sense is in default only where these relations come into play.

IRENE WILL BE AT FAIR WITH HUSBAND. Reconciled Tremans Going With Fancy Horses to Syracuse.

Syracuse, Sept. 14.—Apparently the Paris divorce granted Irene Castle Tremman from Robert E. Tremman didn't "take." The graceful dancer and her horseman husband will be here for the state fair horse show, according to announcements.

Tremman has several of his horses here, including Lightning, Buckshot and Oak Ridge. Heretofore the dainty Irene has ridden the Tremman entries in the show, but this year "a well known New York society woman" will ride them.

Friends of the couple said that the reconciliation between the two is a fact. Only last week they were men-
