AN ENGLISH VIEW OF LAURIER'S NAVAL POLICY.

"So, long as the Empire holds together such isolated action is, of course, unthinkable. If any portion of the British Empire is at war, the whole Empire will be at war." The foregoing is not quoted from a speech by Mr. Borden or any member of the opposition, but is an extract from an English journal, a recognized authority on naval matters, the Naval and Military Record of London; which in a recent issue discusses and unhesitatingly condemus the Laurier government's naval policy with its order-in-council method of assisting the Mother Country in time of war.

After reviewing the explanations given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier of his plan to retain control of the Canadian naval forces, participating in Britain's wars or remaining neutral as the council might decide the Participating processing the standard process.

In such a circumstance the British people might, on the same line of reasoning, declare it none of their concern and leave it to Canada to fight the issue out alone. "So long as the Empire holds together," says the Record in conclusion, "such isolated action, is of course, unthinkable. If any pertion of the British Empire is at war, the whole Empire will be at war. From the moment when the gage of battle is thrown down national feeling will be merged in imperial feeling, and the whole resources of the Empire must be employed to one single end. It is well that this point should be raised thus early, in order that the Imperial and Overseas Governments may consider it calmly before a period arises when Imperial consider it calmly before a period arises when Imperial sentiment will be put to the strain of war."

Years ago the press in Great Britain was wont to style the few public men of the day who had failed to grasp the Imperial idea, as "Little Englanders." The term has happily almost died out in the Old Country. When the Niobe arrives in Canada she is to be brought up the St. Lawrence River as far as Montreal, to show the safety of the St. Lawrence route for war ships. It might be well for the Niobe to know the creed that Canada would look after herself and the rest of the Empire could go hang.

clesiastical dictation similar to that in which France has been engaged for some years.

It was regarded as inevitable that this should occur as soon as the Clerical and reactionary government of Mr. Maura was replaced by Liberal rule, and Mr. Canalejas has not disappointed that expectation. In his attitude the Prime Minister is cordially supported by his colleagues and by a sufficient majority of the parliament, and it is understood that the King also approves his course, not merely in an official and constitutional manner, but also personally and privately.

There are two principal questions in hand for consideration. One is that of the revision of the old con-cordat between the Spanish government and the Church cordat between the Spanish government and the Church of Rome, and the other is that of the enforcement of the laws prescribing equality of official treatment for all religious denominations. Vatican authorities insist that the two shall be considered together and that the Church of Rome shall have tical, and thoroughly up to date.

Among the subjects which will come up for discussion are several that, though their importance is well recognized elsewhere, are only beginning to receive attention in this province—such subjects for instance, as the medical inspection of schools, school sanitation, commercial training in high schools and physical and military training. Dr. John Brittain, professor of nature study at McDonald College, P. Q., will deliver an address on agricultural education, a subject of importance not so well recognized in this province as it ought to be, and Dr. A. H. McKay, chief superintendent of education for Nova Scotia, will give his views on a four year's course for high schools.

No doubt the proceedings of the convention will be followed with interest. It is perhaps to be regretted that the agenda did not provide for a discussion on technical education of the description needed to increase the efficiency of the industrial workers, a subject that in St. John, with its growing industrial aspirations, should receive a larger measure of public attention than it does at the present time.

If, in these circumstances, Canada were to decide that the war was not one with which she could sympathize, her position would be an extremely hazard-ous one. The belligerents would regard Canada as being at war, whether she was actively participating in the operations or not, and therefore if the Canadian Government determined to leave their naval forces unmobilized. CURRENT COMMENT

CHURCH AND STATE IN SPAIN.

The kingdom of Spain appears to be not merely entering upon but already actually involved in a conflict for religious equality and political independence of ecclesiastical dictation similar to that in which France base here progred for some years.

(Nelson Daily News.)

As it is in the interests of Canada to wait, so it is the interests of the interests of the interests of the United States to hurry on a reciprocity arrangement. But Canada does not owe the high tariff interests of the United States so much that she need play into their

The course upon which Mr. Canalejas is now said to have decided is that of insisting upon separate consideration, and of suspending negotiations with the Vatican if the latter refuses to recognize Spain's right to regulate her own affairs.

The situation would in any case be delicate and embarrassing, but it is the more so because of the intense passions which are cherished by the Spanish people and which have been developed on both sides. The partisans of the Vatican in Spain are openly threatening ple and which have been developed on both sides. The partisans of the Vatican in Spain are openly threatening insurrection, declaring that civil war is preferable to secular schools, while many of their opponents go as far in the other direction and rail against all religion as inlimical to civil liberty and progress. What Spain needs in such a crisis is a statesman of the type of the late Waldeck-Rousseau. Whether or not she has him in the person of Mr. Canalejas remains to be seen.

GOOD STORIES

There is a theatrical manager in New York who, in his early days, piloted a small circus through the villages of the middle west.

"At that time,' he says, "I was featuring an Italian as 'Blancialli, the Strong Man from Rome.' One day, travelling from Kansas City to Omaha in a day coach, the strong man and myself were seated just ahead of a tall man with side whilskers. Whether or not the man overheard our conversation, I am unable to say; but after a time, he leaned over and tapped my companion on the shoulder, saying: 'Excuse me, sir, but are you not Biancialli, the Strong Man?'

"Biancialli admitted the soft impeachment."

"'Yes.'
"You can hold two men at arms' length?"
"'Yes.'
"Then,' concluded the man with the side whiskers, would you kindly raise the car window for me?'"
