Enthusiastic Welcome to Envoys

Captalistic Welcome to Envoys'

Sutherings that have assembled there it is doubtful if there ever came together such a vast and representative body of citizens to welcome distinguished visitors. The crowds spread from Cavendish row almost to Henry street, and the thoroughfare was densely packed all the way. The "Stars and Stripes" floated from the windows of the League headquarters. The arrival of the envoys was the signal for universal oheers, which were repeated again and again. The Mayor congratulated the people on their magnificent demonstration of welcome to the visitors. This vast gathering was a proof, if proof were wanted, that the heart of the City of Dublin was loyal and true to the Irish Party. In honoring the Envoys they were honoring themselves. Mr. Curley read an address from the Nationalists of Dublin City and County.

CAPTAIN CONDON'S SPEECH.

Captain Condon said he and his colleague thanked them for their magnificent reception. He knew that that reception was not so much for their own sakes as for the sakes of their brothers across the Atlantic, who sent to their brethren at home a message of love and sympathy with them in the cause for which they were strugrling. for which they were struggling. They came to the Irish people on the invitation of the leader of the the invitation of the leader of the Irish Party. The policy of the Irish people was their policy. It was for the Irish people to lead and they would follow. They did not come to convert any section of the people. They were members of a great auxiliary whose desire and wish was auxiliary whose desire and wish was to help them by every means in their power. Their duty was to assist them, and they were doing that to the best of their ability, and that great demonstration would be an couragement to a continuance of that assistance.

They recognized the fact, and the whole world recognized that the brish Party under the direction of John Redmond had accomplished results which most people would have thought they could not have achieved. ed, and their magnificent success had ed, and their magnificent success had secured the support and sympathy of the whole of their people in the United States. He knew that there were critics to be found at all times. But such people formed but a small section, after all, of their people. It was the business of their people in America to help in securing the establishment of an Irish Parliament elected by the Irish people.

JOHN O'CALLAGHAN'S RE-MARKS.

Mr. O'Callaghan, during the course of his speech, said he was proud to witness the welcome of the people of the Irish capital to a man who in the dock at Manchester forty-two years ago gave to the Irish race the deathless war-cry "God Save Ireland." He never doubted the heart of this old and patriotic capital of the Irish nation would respond with a hearty thrill when there stood in their midst the man who never wavered in his love for the old land. The name of Captain Condon would be greeted with acwould be greeted with ac-on. Whatever "isms" might clamation. Whatever "isms" might exist in any quarter, the united and unanimous voice of the Irice race in America stood as firmly pledged today to the successor of Parnell. Captain Condon was to-day as great a rebel against English rule in Ireland as when he stood beside Allen, Larkin and O'Brien and cheered them by his inspiring battle-cry. On the eve of their sailing $12,000 was raised in fifteen minutes for the cause led by that party, proving that the Irish in America are prethat the Irish in America are pre-pared to back up their views with financial support.

WILLIAM REDMOND'S TRIBUTE.

William Redmond said in seconding the vote of thanks to their particitic Mayor: In honoring their guests the people of Dublin were honoring themselves, and he told Captain Condon, after his long years of their own soil, fearing no lord, but the Lord on high and full of confidence in the future of exile from Ireland, no matter what he might be told or hear, deep down in the hearts of the Irish people to day there was the same bitter enmity to foreign rule as that which animated the men of '67, the same enmity which enabled their martyrs to die in Manchester, the same enmity which enabled their martyrs to die in Manchester. The same ensured the man of Ward amimated the men of '67, the same enmity which enabled their martyrs to die in Manchester, the same enmity which enabled Capt. Condon to give them that watch-ery, which would last as long as Ireland lasted. Sometimes they were told that the men who were elected to represent Ireland were not true Nationalists. He could only say, after twenty-seven years of, service to Irelard in the British Parliament, that their convictions greater that Ireland could never be prosperous or be happy until we rule ourselves in our Parliament in Dublim. None of the men who belonged to the Party had lowered the flag or had sold the pass.

WATERFORD GIVES HEARTY WELCOME.

Accompanied by Mr. John E. Redmond, the envoys left Mr. Redmond's residence at Aughavanagh on Sept. 8, and, motoring through a great part of the Counties of Wicklow and Wexford, visited some of the places rendered memorable by the magnificent struggle for freedom in 1798. They proceeded by way of Arklow and Aughrim, where they called on the Very Rev. James Dimphy, who extended to them a warm greeting. Gorey was the text stopping place. Here the party met Mr. Kinsella, and remained for a short time. From Gorey they may be a short time. ther John Murphy, and saw the new church which has been erected on the site of that which was burned by the British in 1798. They next proceeded to Oulast, where they called on Rev. Patrick Kenny, the most venerable figure associated with the National movement in Wexford, who gave the visitors a very warm welcome. The party were also received by the Father O'Dowd who has just returned from Australia.

GREETING AT ENNISCORTHY.

The party reached Enniscorthy about two o'clock, and received an enthusiastic ovation from the Nationalists of the town. They were escorted to the Market Square, the procession being headed by the Erniscorthy Workingmen's Band. Beside the handsome memorial which has been erected in the Square in honor of the Wextordmen who fought against British rule in 1798, was appropriately chosen for the presentation of an address. Andrew Furlong, Secretary of the Enniscorthy Branch of the United Irish League, read an address. Both the envoys replied, after which John Redmond said in part:

JOHN REDMOND'S SPEECH.

I have been associated with the National movement in County Wexford, in one form or another, for at least thirty years, and I learned my first lessons in the Irish National my first lessons in the Irish National movement from my father, who went before me. I have taken part in many stormy scenes and historical episodes in this county, but I confess to you that I have never in my life assisted at a function which, as a Wexford man, gave me greater pride than being here to witness the welcome you have given to Captain Condon, who has come to Ireland on my invitation. I took the liberty, as chairman of the Irish party, of tendering to him, and to two of the distinguished Irishmen in America, an invitation to this country. to this country.

The two other gentlemen that I invited have, unfortunately, been unable to come. One of them is the grand old veteran, Patrick Ford, who, through his newspaper, The Irish World, has cone more for the last forty years for Ireland than almost any man alive. His health is not strong, and he was not able to come. We all deeply regret it. The other gentleman whom I irvited is one of the most brilliant sons of the Irish race, Michael J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, who excurses the poor. one of the most brilliant sons of the Irish race, Michael J. Ryan, of Philadelphia, who occupies the posi-tion of President of the United Irish tion of President of the United Irish League of America; but who, apart altogether from that, is one of America's most distinguished and brilliant citizens. Unfortunately, he was not able to come either. I told these gentlemen when I invited them ir, the name of the Irish Party, and, as I ventured to do, in the name of as I ventured to do, in the name of Ireland, that if they came here they would receive a soul-stirring welcome from the whole Irish people. Only one of them has come, but he will take back to the others the assurance that he received a magnificent welcome in this country, and that the same welcome was waiting for them if they had been able to accompany him.

STRANGE PATHOS OF IT ALL.

There is something absolutely pathetic in the spectacle of this coming back to Ireland to-day. For ty-two years have passed since he trod the soil of Ireland. Since ther trod the soil of Ireland. Since then he stood in the felor, 's dock. He was sentenced to death for Ireland. He spent many long weary years in captivity as an Irish political prisoner, and now at the end of forty-two years, at last it is vouchsafed him by Providence, it has been vouchsafed to him once more to come back to the land of his birth, and to be received with welcome by all classes of the people of Ireland; and to be received with welcome by all classes of the people of Ireland; and not only that, but to be able to see with his own eyes how the great masses of the people, who were ab-solute slaves when he was last in Ireland, to-day are their own mas-ters, owners of their own soil, fear-ing no lord, but the Lord on high, and full of confidence in the future of their country.

WEXFORD NATIONALISTS' HOM-

The party next motored to Wexford, where a similarly enthusiastic welcome awaited them from the Nationalists of that city. They were conducted to the '98 monument, where a meeting was held. Michael Bolger, Assistant Town Clerk, read an address from the Wexford Borough Branch of the United Irish League, to which Captain Condon Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Redmond replied. The party then proceeded to New Ross. At the Town Hall Very Rev. Canon Holohan, Rosbercon, and the leading Nationalists of the town assembled, and an address was read from the New Ross Urban District Council. Speeches were delivered by Captain Condon, Mr. O'Callaghan and Mr. Redmond. After the meeting it was found that an immense crowd had assembled in the square, and here speeches were delivered beside the '98 monument. The party received an enthusiastic The party received an enthusiastic send-off from the railway station, whence they travelled by rail to

At Waterford a great demonstra-tion of welcome was made. When the train stopped, the Mayor of Waterford and the Sheriff, wearing Waterford and the Sherin, their chains of office, entered the compartment in which the party compartment in which the party were, and the Mayor read an ad-dress. The visitors were then es-corted to the Mayor's carriage, which was waiting outside the sta-tion. Here there was an immense gathering of people, who crowded the approaches to the station and extended over the bridge and along the quays towards the city. A royal ovation was extended to the visitors who were conducted in a torchlight procession, amidst music and enthusiastic chering to the Hall thusiastic cheering, to the where after the envoys had spoken John Redmond said:

SPLENDID PERORATION OF THE LEADER.

The generation with which Captain Condon had worked has almost entirely passed away, but the presence of the young men of Wapresence of the young men of Waterford meant that they upheld the same principles as the men who had associated with Captain Condon in working for the freedom of Ireland. It showed that every one present knew the history of the Manchester rescue and treasured in his heart of hearts the real meaning of the prayer in the dock, "God Save Ireland." They had also John O'Callaghan, a younger man, who during his lifetime had devoted his energies to advance the cause of Ireland. It is advance the cause of Ireland. It is an inexpressible pride to have opportunity of extending to Mr O'Callaghan, as well as to Captair Condon, the welcome of the Na-tionalists of Waterford.

TRIED TO EFFECT REMEDY.

There is another reason why I am glad to have an opportunity of meeting my constituents of the City of Waterford. The Irish Party and of Waterford. The Irish Party and I have been engaged for the last seven months in the House of Commons in endeavoring to extract some benefit from the British Parliament for Ireland. We have, as you know, succeeded in getting a great Land Bill introduced and almost passed through the House of Commons. That bill is not a perfect bill. No succeeded in getting a great Laine.

Bill introduced and almost passed through the House of Commons. That bill is not a perfect bill. No measure ever framed by British statesmen in a foreign parliament ever had been or will be a perfect measure. It has its defects. We have tried to remedy them. Some of them we have succeeded in removing. Taking it all in all it is a great and far-reaching Land Bill, which will go a long distance towards finally settling the Irish question, and it is almost passed into law, so far as the House of Commons is concerned. I don't know what fate the Bill may meet in the House of Lords. It may be mutilated beyond recognition; it may be rejected altogether. In either of these cases we will come back to you in Ireland and will say to you. "The House of Lords has wrecked the Land Bill."

Improvements Bill twenty years ago.
Believe me, in spite of the House of Lords, we can pass a satisfactory Land Bill for Ireland if we only choose—we will pass it on the hill-sides of Ireland. I have been through so much fight that I am not anxious for more, if we can avoid it; but I say to you, if the landfords are mad enough to reject the Irish Land Bill, I will advise the Irish Lend Bill, I will advise the Irish people to take vigorous action landfords are mad enough to reject the Irish Land Bill. I will advise the Irish people to take vigorous action this winter, and I will not only advise them, but I will be in the front rank in conducting the campaign. But it is our duty to see that the Land Bill is passed, if possible. Some of the critics of the Party have been asking us why we have not thrown out the Government. Well, to begin with, the Government have a majority of about two hundred, independent of our votes; but, even if we could to-morrow throw out the Government, are we to do the work of the House of Lords? Are we to defeat this Irish Land Bill ourselves? No; we will do our best to carry it. If it is defeated, it will not be by any action of ours, but by the action of the House of Lords, and then they will have to face Ireland. Let us conclude by unbovering our heads, and, in the presence of Capbain Comdon, raise to Heaven with united voice his prayer, "God Save Ireland." a scane of great impressiveness, the people gradually dispersed and proceeded to their homes.

the well-being of the people in both towns and country depends. That the Irish Party have been faithful to their trust, and that they deserve a whole-hearted and generous support from both rich and poor, and perhaps more so from the poor than the rich, requires no proof. The several Acts of Parliament passed within recent years, chiefly through the persistent efforts of the Irish Party, and dealing with matters of vital importance, such as University Education, the land question, laborers, and town tenants, are convincing testimony to the ability of our representatives in debate and their fidelity to duty."
