BELGIUM INSISTS ON ABSOLUTE RULE IN CONGO DISTRICT

Will Agree to no Policy Tending to Restrict Her Sovereignty There

Paris, March 20.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press)—Belgium's colonial policy after the war and the fate of the Belgian Congo after peace has been concluded, was the subject of an address delivered at the Sorbonne yesterday by Mr. Rankin, the Belgian Minister of Colonies.

"There has been much talk lately," said Mr. Rankin, "of the fate of Central Africa. It seems to me that the fate of that territory has been settled for a long time, as far as that part of it which is not German possessions is concerned. As to the fate of the German colonies, it is not for me, either to suggest or to advise."

"There has been a question raised lately as to the internationalization of the basin of Central Africa or if not complete internationalization, at least the establishment of an international control for the protection of the natives. Those are generous ideas perhaps but wholly impracticable, contrary to the notion of sovereignty and incompatible with justice."

Mr. Rankin expressed the opinion that no policy could be adopted that would deprive Belgium of its absolute sovereignty in the Congo. He said:

"Small and modest as Belgium finds itself now, it is conscious of having said the words and of having done the deeds in conformity with honor and duty when the terrible aggression of Germany put civilization in jeopardy. The least that civilization can do for it after the war is to see that its integrity and sovereignty and independence and its territories be restored and that it be guaranteed against future outrages."

"Belgium has sacrificed all to its duty; into the scales of destiny without hesitation she has thrown all her strength for the defense of civilization. The least that can be recognized by the world now, is that while there may be guarantees equal to the word of Belgium, there is none superior."
