Let the eyes of fancy turn
Where the tumbled pippins burn
Like amber in the orchard's lap of touse
led grass and fern;
And let the wzward wind,
Still singing, plod behind
The cider press—the good, old fashioned kind! Blend in the song the moan
Of the dove that grieves alone
And the wild whirr of the locust and
bumble's drowsy drone;
And the low of cows that call
Through the pasture bars when all
The landscape fades away at evenfall.

He had a wonderful command of that sort of language, had lave to go to the bottom. We knew florging but the fellow looked thorough.

It was just this way. Jonas had the Columbia or the Harbinger would have to go to the bottom. We know perfectly well that Admiral Sykes, as he called himself, of the Confederate Navy, would never surrender. Couldn't you see, because at least a third of his crew consisted of deserters from the Federal army and navy, and had a price on their heads, and as my American shipmates put it, "had just got to the hanged."

Cough-Cures

Are abundant; but the one best known for its extraordinary anodyne and expectorant qualities is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. For nearly half a century this preparation has been in greater demand than any other remedy for colds, coughs, bronchitis, and pulmonary complaints in general.

"I suffered for more than eight months from a severe cough accompanied with hemorrhage of the lungs and the expectoration of matter. The physicians gave me up, but my druggist prevailed on me to try

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

I did so, and soon began to improve; my lungs healed, the cough ceased, and I became stouter and healthier than I have ever been before. I would suggest that the name of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral be changed to Elixir of Life, for it certainly saved my life."

—F. J. Oliden, Salto, Buenos Ayres.
