Comes to me a legend olden, Walted o'er the sea of oges On the numbers sings of time.

How an artist, chosen, bonored, Sought of Christ one gift alone, Grace to carve His Sacred Image On the marble beart of stone.

How he vigils kept, and fasted, Praying, worked on bended knee, As each stroke his chisel, gleaming Rebord in pure ectasy.

And the flowers in radiant bloom Told their beads in tragrant petals, Breathed their praise in sweet per-holder. Bending low in rev'rent air ; "Ecce Homo," sang the angels,

" 'Tis the work of holy prayer." Buill the statue stands, its story Teaching faith in Love Unseen, Holding, haunting, thrilling ever

With the beauty of its theme. And its message presses onward, Filling souls with love complete, Drawing hearts world-worn and

Would our lifework leave His image On the stony hearts of men,

As they sang o'er Bethlehem, Would we see Him in His glory, Would we know his love and care, We must seek Him with devotion On our knees in humble prayer.

Would we hear His angels singing
