TEAS!

Did you ever consider the advantage of buying your TEAS from us? It will pay you, as we can give better values than up-town stores. Why?

Because

Our buying facilities are unequalled, our expenses are less, and we give you the advantage of this in quality. Our reputation for Good Teas is now established, and we guard it jealously.

We are to-day the acknowledged leaders in the Tea Trade.

Cantankerous Obstinate Watches.

If you are the owner of a cantankerous, obstinate Watch, that utterly refuses to behave itself decently and tell time correctly, why not bring it to the

and let our expert repairers diagnose its case? An erratic unreliable Watch is little better than no Watch at all. The longer you allow it to misbehave the more difficult the repairer's task will be in the end and the greater the cost of repair. Putting off the fixing of a Watch or Clock that has gotten out of order is a losing and shortsighted policy. Has this any home application to any of your timepieces? If so our Repair Department is ready and waiting.

WOULD HAVE TO STOP HER WORK AND SIT DOWN.

HOW MANY WOMEN HAVE TO DO THIS FROM DAY TO DAY?

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS are a blessing to women in this condition. They cure Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Palpitation of the Heart, Pains and Dizziness, Weakness, Listlessness, and all troubles peculiar to the female sex.

Mrs. James Taylor, Salisbury, N.B. in recommending them says: "About eight months ago I was very badly run down, was troubled greatly with palpitation of the heart and would get so dizzy I would have to leave my work and sit down. It seemed to be getting worse all the time until a friend advised me to try MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS. I can truthfully say that they do all you claim for them, and I can recommend them to all run-down women."

Price 50c per box, or 2 boxes for $1.00; all dealers or The Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Cardinal Vaughan's Book.

Just at the close of his beautiful and active life, the late Cardinal Vaughan wrote a work entitled "The Young Priest: Conference on the Apostolic Life." The venerable Cardinal, Archbishop of Westminster, walking in the footsteps of his illustrious predecessors—Wiseman and Manning—consecrated every hour of his life to the work of his sublime mission; and even, when the close of his career was evidently at hand, he ceased not to write and to instruct in the grand course of the Catholic priesthood. Very beautiful, and very touching are the remarks made by the Liverpool "Catholic Times," in dealing with this last volume, this final legacy of the great churchman to those who were to come after him. In that review the Catholic organ says:

"Cardinal Vaughan, when he found that the end of his life was drawing near, determined to leave his most precious thoughts to those coming after him on the subject nearest to his heart—the priesthood. He was stricken down by disease, and his brother, Mgr. Canon Vaughan, who has edited this volume, tells us that the exertion entailed was a considerable tax upon his diminished strength; and that nothing but an indomitable energy, courage and zeal could have enabled him to continue working at it, as he did, almost up to the very last. As is well known, his Eminence had a very high ideal of the priestly life, and in writing this book he unfolds his thoughts with great earnestness. There is, it is true, evidence of the work having been written under physical disabilities. The composition is not in the continuous style which the Cardinal would have adopted had he been in the full vigor of bodily health. Manifestly the subject was often laid aside and taken up anew. But, though the literary workmanship bears witness to the difficulties which the author experienced owing to his infirmity, there is no sign of falling off in substance. The advice given is well designed to lead the young priest along the path of perfection.

"The Cardinal maintains that a man's vocation as a missionary priest gives him the Apostolic standard and no other for his rule of life and conduct. He must imitate the Apostle. If England is to be reconverted to the Church, if unevangelized races are to be brought within the fold, missionaries must be raised up perfect in faith and good works, and on fire with the love of God and of their neighbor. Such is the general drift of the Cardinal's stimulating words, from what may be called the purely spiritual standpoint. As to practical matters he offers valuable recommendations. He deemed it praiseworthy for a priest to resolve never to put off the ecclesiastical dress. Hunting fields, shooting parties, race courses and all gambling resorts are, he held, unfit places for a priest. He thought a priest should avoid taking part in public football or cricket matches. It is not wrong to play cards as a recreation or as a set of civility. But the custom did not find favor with the Cardinal. He points out that a man who says, "No, I never play," rides himself at once of much trouble and difficulty. A priest, he observes, would do wisely to resolve never to play for money and never to sit over a card table for hours together. In relations with the gentle sex, he bids the priest remember that forms of respect and reverence surround him with reverence, and that so far from diminishing they increase the esteem and confidence in which he is held. Priests ought, he says, to practice self-denial with regard to strong drink. To deny themselves and to fast from the use of spirits from an Apostolic love of God, and for souls will obtain grace for them and others. With regard to tobacco he is more tolerant. Smoking, he says, has been found in certain cases to be beneficial to health when used moderately, and some priests living alone in hard missions and on poor fare more easily reconcile themselves to their lot by the use of tobacco. But on the whole the Cardinal discommends smoking, whilst cautioning the young priests who consider it inadvisable to indulge in the habit, that they must not censure the conduct of seniors, who by reason of age, traditions, health or infirmity may use their liberty in using tobacco. The book will, no doubt, be highly prized by the priests for whom it is intended, and it will have a wholesome effect on the tone of spiritual life amongst the clergy.

Vatican Council is merely suspended, not finished, writes "Vox Urbis," the Rome correspondent of the "Freeman's Journal."

In 1870 the fathers were obliged to discontinue their labors owing to the disturbed state of Italy and the imminent fall of the temporal power and the occupation of Rome by the Piedmontese. Happily, they had been able to define the great dogma of the infallibility of the Pope, but they were obliged to defer a settlement of a great part of their programme, such as the enactment of disciplinary laws and the definition of many important points concerned with the Sacred Scriptures. Vox Urbis has done his best to trace to their source the rumors of the continuation of the Vatican Council, but his efforts, so far have failed to make the rumors a certainty. The matter is discussed among many ecclesiastics, who consider that the idea is one which would appeal to the apostolic zeal and energy of the present Pontiff, and who are agreed that the times are more propitious now than they have been since 1870. But it is generally felt that at least a couple of years of preparation will be necessary. If the council does meet now it will certainly surpass all records in the number of bishops who will attend it. During the pontificate of Leo XIII., the hierarchy was increased by about 200. It is estimated that at the future sessions of the council some three thousand ecclesiastics will be present, either as fathers, theologians, stenographers, etc. There are at present in the Catholic Church slightly over 1,000 Bishops with residential sees, and half that number of titular bishops. Of course, it will not be possible for all of these to come to Rome for the council, but considering the present facilities of travel and the unprecedented number of bishops, it is quite certain that all previous records for numbers will be put into the shade. Italy heads the list of all countries as regards the number of residential sees, as it did when the Vatican Council was opened for the first time, but at the future session the United States will take the second place instead of France, which has occupied it for a great many centuries.

Says the Monitor: "If the first Bonaparte were in communication with the present rulers of France, he could give them a valuable 'tip' on the probable outcome of their anti-papal policy. He has some experience in the same direction himself."

"Why," asks the Catholic Columbian, "don't the Socialists gather together in some one place, put their theory of business into practice, and prove, if they can, that it will bring about the millennium that they now say it will? Let us have facts, not assertions."

Writing of the labor troubles in the Colorado mining regions, the Catholic Union and Times says: "The first consideration in such riotous conditions should be the insistence of law and order. That is of supreme importance, far beyond and above the right and wrong of the questions at issue."

"There are many Catholics," says the Montreal True Witness, "who are not slow in condemning others for not meeting their obligations who never think of paying their annual subscription for their Catholic paper. Such Catholics are the cause of much worry and useless expenditure of money by publishers who depend upon their paying the small amount of their indebtedness, but in a majority of cases the sum is not forthcoming. The issuing of accounts and notices at frequent intervals to the delinquents involve an expenditure alone in paper, ink and wages of clerks, which amounts to more than the subscription price."

The Catholic Transcript has the following: "The present Pontiff has gone the length of reviving the Order of the Trinitarians, which did so much in ages past for the redemption of captives. Leo XIII., had his Lsvigierie, Pius X., may have another apostle in the protect apostolic whom he has just appointed to scour Italian Africa and rid the land of the barter in men, whose only crime is that their skin is of a dusky hue. The poor blacks in Bonadir little guess the sympathy they have awakened in the heart of the Vicar of Christ. In thus recalling the services of the maribard Order of the Most Holy Trinity, Pius X., will fire the souls of latter-day apostles who will quicken to generous resolves at the stories of the slave-trade practised in all its barbarity in the interior of Africa."

Items of Interest.

This year's Whit-Friday procession of the Catholics of Manchester and Salford, Eng., the sixtieth demonstration of the kind, was participated in by more than 1,000 persons.

The Archbishop of Freiburg was fired upon recently in the archiepiscopal consistory court, but escaped uninjured. His assailant is a teacher named Dr. Rieger, and is said to have borne a grudge against the ecclesiastical authorities for refusing to authorize him to give religious instructions in secondary schools. Dr. Rieger, who appears to be subject to delusions, was arrested.

On a recent Sunday all over Italy Catholic societies of all kinds celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of the great encyclical "Rerum Novarum," which has been well styled the "Magna Charta of Labor." Large crowds visited the new monument in St. John Lateran's, Rome, on the sides of which the great document is reproduced in immortal bronze.

Our English exchanges chronicle the opening of a Catholic church at Northenden, on the Mersey, in Cheshire. It was the first celebration of Mass in that village since Reformation times. The church, which is dedicated to St. Eilda, was erected three years ago by a Protestant lady, but there was some disagreement about the form of service to be followed, and the edifice was offered for sale, the Bishop of Shrewsbury becoming the purchaser. The pastor of Northenden is a convert to the Church and the happy successor of a martyr priest. The last Mass in the village was offered by the venerable Father Barlow, O. S. B., who was put to death on September 10, 1641, for exercising the ministry in a neighboring parish. So it goes in England and many, many other lands.

"The rumored concession of Pius X. to the clergy in the matter of beards and mustaches will not," writes a Highland correspondent to the London Daily Chronicle, come as a novelty in this part of the world, where many of the good priests of the mountains and islands have permission to protect their throats from the raw damp of the Highland winters by beards often of quite patriarchal dimensions. I remember a good old Scottish padre who was elected (much against his will) Bishop of a Highland see, and went to Rome to receive episcopal consecration with his cheeks adorned with whiskers much more voluminous than the 'clerical inch' which custom or courtesy used to allow to all Catholic ecclesiastics. The Cardinal Prefect of Propaganda, who was to perform the consecration ceremony, was horrified, and insisted on the sacrifice of the whiskers before the consecration took place. The Bishop-elect submitted under protest. But he was no sooner back in his Highland fastness than the whiskers blossomed forth again more luxuriantly than ever.

Naturally enough, says the "London Catholic Times," the daily papers have been writing at great length on the new departure in the relations between the Vatican and the Quirinal which took place when Cardinal Stamps, Archbishop of Bologna, drove in state to visit the King of Italy and at dinner was seated at his Majesty's right hand. An explanation of the Cardinal's official recognition of the King has been given, semi-officially it is said, on behalf of the Holy See, its purport being that the permission granted to the Cardinal shows that the Holy Father limits his claim to Rome. The co-existence of two sovereigns in the Eternal City is, his Holiness is convinced, impossible, and this is the reason why a strong protest was made against President Loubet's visit; but the Pontiff is anxious that the policy of mutual conciliation should be adopted by the spiritual and temporal powers so far as the other parts of Italy are concerned. In other words, whilst Pius X., maintains the rightful claim of the Holy See to absolute independence, he desires to make it clear that he is not influenced by any mere love of temporal sway. The course which the Holy See has pursued has produced an excellent impression not only in Italy, but throughout Europe, and it will undoubtedly tend to bring nearer a satisfactory modus vivendi between the Italian King and the Holy See.

Rumor says that it is the intention of the Holy Father to call all the Bishops of the Catholic world to Rome to conclude the sessions of the great Vatican Council. Everybody knows, of course, that the
