HAPPY HEARTED.

(Recitation.)
Oh, the air is all achime
In this merry Christmas time;
it Sunday schools commingle in the
sounding mirth,
For theirs the titled right
In all that's blythe and bright;
oses not our Father in the heavens
this blossed earth?

Though to liseme be life's day, Yet, all along the way here are pleasant places where we pause, refreshing with good cheer: And children's gleesome hours, Like sunshine-laden flowers, ed bloom among the workers, and fragrance o'er the year.

Ab, shadows surely hover
Our earthly journey over;
is well to meet, and strengthen oft, our common pilgrim-bond;
Then, hall the social hour,
The sympathetic power,
at helps us, happy-hearted, towards our
Father's home beyond.

(Singing Chorus.)

(Singing Chorus.)
Yes, we own our Father's care,
In his kindly smule we dare
Know he joys to see his children happy-hearted;
Ah, we may not miss the tears
That are waiting with the years—
Oft the loving Saviour sorrowed heavy-hearted;
But he'll guide us 'mid the maze
Onward thro' the hidden days,
And he'll make his children truly happy-hearted,
Happy-hearted, happy-hearted!
In his blessings we rejoice,
And we lit our grateful voice,
Happy-hearted, happy-h arter!
He can keep his children ever happy-hearted.

(Recite.)

(Recite.)

Let statesmen titles claim,
And warriors win their rame;
(One Christian hero that world may well bewall.)
But rings there no renown,
Dallies no laurel crown

For other faithful soldiers who neither faint nor fail?

There are Gordons yet afield,
Who a loyal service yield;
Theirs, though no gory warfare, the same
Almighty Masters
And who here cannot tell us
Of the worthy name of Nelles?
Fair homage to our leaders; full honor to our pastor.

Be every teacher cheered, Each precious name endeared, ye, cherished by the children in mem'ry's weft of love; When present joys have fled, When future cares be sped, 'hen we're nearing, happy-hearted, our Father's home above.

(Recite.)
O life and death are real,
And true our great ideal.
en courage to the Sabbath school! The seed in silence grows,
And no enshrouding gloom.
Can scaring hope entomb

Hasten the kingdom year
When peoples all shell hear
With food belief the tidings of the wondrous
Bethlehen birth;
When every soul shall shine
In Calvary's light divine.
And life, libe one groud anthem, voice forth
the christened earth,

Hold we the Bible fast, And lay it down at last To bear before our Saviour the new

ANNETTE

A Story of a Woman's Faith

"Well," said Addison calming himself, believing that his visitor was hopelessly and tormentingly mad, "what do you want me to look at in t?"

"I want you to look at it carefully, and tell me if you do not recognize it as the one given to you by my wife, when, in dying, she confided to you the care of my son?"

"This is the most extraordinary hallucination!" remarked Addison, gazing help-lessly at the supposed demented man, who said:

said:
"Look at the book, and not at me."
"Well, I have, and positively assure you that I never saw your wife nor your son in the whole course of my life—no, nor ever even heard of them."
"Indeed!" exclaimed Smith, incredulously, "then how did this book come into your possession?"

the whole course of my life—no, nor ever even heard of them."

"Indeed!" exclaimed Smith, incredulously, "then how did this book come into your possession?"

"It was never in my possession."

"It was never in my possession."

"On ot deny it. Your man Jacob told me that he brought it from your house among some books you sent to Dr. Rayburn."

"Ah, now I understand," observed Addison, a light breaking in upon him. "George Leavett had advertised a sale of medical books which was to take place during my recent visit to New York. Dr. Rayburn requested me to attend the sale and buy up as many as I could for him. I did so, and upon my return I sent him the books by Jacob, after having taken out some miscellaneous volumes I had purchased for myself."

"No, I am sure it was not, because I should have noticed the very peculiar binding; but in packing, it may have been placed by accident among my purchases."

"It follows, then," said the Major, sadly, "that, if it belongs' to my daughter nor is Charles my son."

"Of course not. What could have led you to suppose such absurdities?"

"This treacherous book, which I thought the clue to my offspring. I gave it to my

"Of course not. What could have led you to suppose such absurdities?"

"This treacherous book, which I thought the clue to my offspring. I gave it to my wife, and she gave it to the guardian of my child. Excuse the emotion of a long-lost father in search of his child."

"A son or a daughter?" asked Addison, sympathetically.

"Hon not know."

"Well," remarked Addison, smiling with restored tomposure, "it is a wise father who knows his own child. Where was the child born."

"Heroit was struggling with furnish my house."

"No, I don't for I never bought it, it belonged to my wife."

"Your wife."

"Yes; she was very fond of poetry, and of this poet particularly. It is a handy little volume, and she used to carry it in her pocket."

"Merciful powers! How extraordinary!" "Then, you admit that it was second-hand when you bought it?"
"No, I don't for I never bought it, it be-

"Naturally, because there was no registration of births here in those days; but I should think Dr. Rayburn might let some sight upon your perplexity, since for the last 30 years he has personally conducted into the world every traveler who entered it via Port Repose. Ask him to search his memory for you."

CHAPTER XVI. CHAPTER XVI.

"It's an extraordinary thing," observed Major Smith when he he had cornered Dr. Rayburn and brought the matter down to date "I may say it's a most extraordinary thing that, after all my researches here, there, and everywhere, that you, right here at my eldow all the time, should be the only man who can clear up the mystery of my life."

Carter's Little Liver Pills must not be confounded with common Cathartic or Purgative Pills, as they are entirely unlike them in every respect. One trial will prove their superiority.

The New York city postoffice made a profit last year of $3,512,989,48. The total receipts were $5,673,250,42. The daily mail contained 2,702,396 pieces, and it weighed 268 tons.

A man's wife should always be the same "I don't see how I can," replied the doc-tor thoughtfully. "You will have to explain yourself a little more clearly than you have yet done. If there was no registry of births at the time, and I remember none, I don't see how I can help you. You surely don't expect me to remember every child who has opened its eyes in Port Repose for..."

"Oh, no," broke in the Major, "I only want you to remember one—by the name of Smith."

The doctor burst into a laugh, notwithstanding he knew so well the seriousness of the investigation Major Smith was conductive.
