NUMBERING THE PEOPLE.

The Work Begins Today Throughout the Dominion of Canada.

Ottawa, March 31.—Tomorrow morning the work of taking the census throughout Canada will begin. The population is to be recorded as it was today, but the decisive hour of reckoning is 12 o'clock tonight to April 1, so that everyone born before that hour and everyone dying after it are to be counted in the population. An army of some 9,000 officials will be employed in connection with the census, consisting of one special commissioner, two assistants to the special commissioner, 11 chief officers, 335 commissioners and assistants and 8,677 enumerators. Of chief officers, Ontario and Quebec are allotted four each, and the other provinces one each. The commissioners and assistants are divided amongst the several provinces as follows: Ontario, 118; Quebec, 112; British Columbia, 22; New Brunswick, 2; Nova Scotia, 21; Northwest Territories, 20; Manitoba, 16; Prince Edward Island, 5. Of the 8,677 enumerators Ontario has 3,503; Quebec, 2,618; Manitoba, 582; Nova Scotia, 545; New Brunswick, 406; Northwest Territories, 391; British Columbia, 233; and Prince Edward Island, 149.

The intention, as already stated, is to have the work of enumeration begin tomorrow, but this is not imperative. Should the enumerators from any cause not be able to start their duties tomorrow, the instructions are sufficiently broad to permit a commencement at the earliest reasonable day.

LADY FATALLY SHOT.

Souris, Man., April 1.—Mrs. Cummings was driving to a neighbor's with her young sons when the horses started quickly, throwing the two boys from their seats on a loaded shotgun. The gun went off, and the charge entered the mother's side, with fatal results.

THE CANCER PARASITE.

Buffalo, March 30.—"Cancer is caused by an animal parasite, which we have identified and located in the New York state cancer laboratory," said Prof. H. R. Gaylord, of the University of Buffalo, who has charge of that laboratory.

BOTH EATEN BY RATS.

Jersey city, N. J., April 1.—The bodies of an elderly couple named Meade were found in their rooms at 152 Virginia avenue. Both were badly decomposed, and had the appearance of being eaten by rats. Their disappearance several weeks ago caused suspicion, and the police were notified. Forcing an entrance to the house, the woman was found sitting in a chair, and the body of the brother in bed.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL

Hon. G. E. Foster's Suggestions on Drink Problem—Power of the Profit-Takers.

Toronto, April 1.—The features of the Canadian Temperance League yesterday in Massey Hall were the speeches of the Hon. G. E. Foster and Hon. Geo. W. Ross, who was chairman. The auditorium was crowded by an immense audience, who became enthusiastic when Hon. Mr. Foster suggested that the question of the government assuming control of the traffic in intoxicants was one that deserved the thoughtful consideration of the people of Canada.

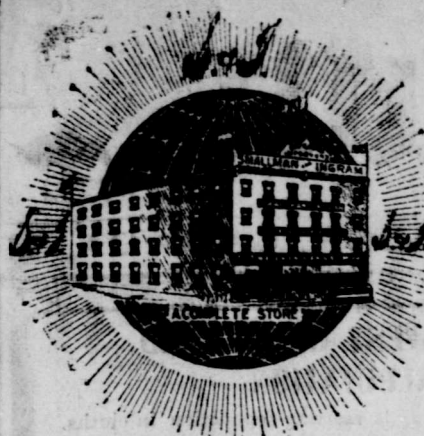

HON. GEORGE W. ROSS.
Hon. Geo. W. Ross, who occupied the chair, congratulated the league on the splendid success with which their series of meetings this season had been attended. Hon. Mr. Ross said there were many persons who looked upon the subject of temperance reform as a very narrow one, and could not understand how men of various degrees of intellectual culture and such varied attainments could continue their interest in a movement so limited in its scope. The tendency and purpose of the league meetings were to dispel this illusion. He contended that temperance reform was a matter that touched upon and affected many of the great political, social and economic problems of the day. It reached indeed the very vital springs of the social life of the people. He had no doubt that the moral tone of the life of the people had during past years been much alleviated and improved. The improvements had perhaps not been so noticeable as in the old land, where the moral degradation arising from intemperate habits of the people had taken a wide scope.

ROOM FOR WORK.

In Canada, however, there was still room for the philanthropist, the church and the temperance reformer to their efforts for many years to come. Temperance had, moreover, its legislative side. It was a question whether legislation on the subject had sufficiently broadened. Some countries legislation prohibited the traffic and in others restricted or limited it. Prohibition obtained in some of the states of the union, but not in others. The question was one that required thought, and could not be dismissed lightly. As it reached down to the very life of our political constitution. Again, temperance had its scientific side, and required the best judgment and scientific investigation of our ablest men. The subject had, finally its religious aspect. What was wanted was to consider thoughtfully all the phases of the work, and when they had come to an understanding on them all the public course would be clearer. The league was doing this good work of education in the light that could be thrown upon the question. It gave him pleasure to preside on that occasion, especially because his old colleague, the Hon. G. E. Foster, was to be the speaker of the afternoon. Although he had been associated with Mr. Foster, he had never heard him make a speech except for a few minutes. When Mr. Foster came into the House of Commons," continued Mr. Ross, "I went out," laughed. He considered Mr. Foster as one of the clearest and most incisive debaters in Canada.

HON. MR. FOSTER.

Mr. Foster caused something of a sensation by urging that the Gothenburg system be given a trial in Canada. The tendency of the people, he said, of late years, had been to abandon local option in favour of prohibition. The strongest bulwark of the liquor traffic today was the selfish interest that individuals had in the traffic because of the gains that are made. The men who made their money out of the traffic were the chief opponents of prohibition. The government were denounced for failure to prohibit, but if his hearers searched beneath they would find that the power they had to overcome was the immense money power lying behind the traffic. If this were true, would it not be wise to cut off every form of profit? This could be done by making the government the sole seller. The objection was made to this that the government would then be interested in making profits, but in his opinion no government could defy enlightened public opinion by stimulating the liquor trade for gain. There would be no inducement to sell for gain; the sale would drop off; the money power would be no longer interested in the traffic, and the ultimate issue would be total prohibition. His point was that if the traffic must continue for years, it would be better to be conducted under the best than under the worst conditions. He was not prepared on that platform to say he would carry out the project, even if he had the power, but he commended the idea to the thoughtful consideration of the people, of the best thinkers of Canada. "The new century would require a higher manhood and womanhood than the last.

The automatic part of the apparatus is said to consist of a wheel with a number of cogs arranged a suitable intervals, which slide over Morse apparatus. TAUGHT A LESSON

New York Woman Learned Not to Judge by Appearances.

"I had a rather funny experience with the owner of the apartment where I reside the other day," said a woman who had just settled in one of the fashionable apartment houses of the neighborhood of Morningside Heights. "The janitor and his helper were assisting my maid to set things to rights. A third man in his shirt-sleeves, and acting like a laborer, was with the janitor and assisted in moving some of the furniture. When their work was done I gave to each of them a quarter for their services. I noticed that the man of the shirt sleeves did not take the money, and said, 'give it to the other two men to divide between them.' As I wished a rather elaborate gas chandelier in one of the rooms removed so that I could arrange some decorations in its place, I told the janitor of my wishes. He spoke to the man in the shirt sleeves, who at once came to me and told me it was impossible to remove the fixture. It is a very handsome fixture," he said, and its removal would tend to injure the appearance of the apartment."

"That's your opinion," I remarked, rather curtly. "I have plans that I think will improve the appearance of the rooms. And, furthermore," I said snappishly, "I don't see what business it is of yours anyway, as I hire these apartments and pay the rent, and can do as I please about the gas fixtures, I suppose."

"Very true," he said blandly. "I only happen to be the owner of the house, and I should prefer not to have the fixtures removed, as doing so might injure the walls. Still I will have it done if you wish, and will have a gas-fitter come here at once. Then he very politely bowed himself out of the door, and I was left considerably abashed. Then it dawned on me that I had offered him a quarter for his work about the house. Now, I feel as if I never wanted to face him again. For he is a man worth very close to $1,000,000, so my husband says. It was only another incident tending to show how little one can judge people by outward appearances."—New York Times.

SAHARA IS UP TO DATE.

[London Daily Mail.] French Biskra, on the edge of the Sahara desert, is actually, lighted by electric light at night, and contains half a dozen very good hotels. There is even a Casino, and the walls of the town were placarded with bills concerning the municipal elections! But it is not with these that the oasis has won fame. Five charming villages constitute Old Biskra as the Arabs made it. These are almost lost among its forest of palms, and the visitor to Biskra spends his days in wandering in and out among them, surprised at each turn by some fresh beauty.

WHY HE SOLD HIS GUN.

They were New Ontario men, and were talking about guns, and the men who owned them.

"What became of that swell gun which the Englishman Greville brought up with him to Sturgeon Lake?" asked one.

"He found it was no good and got rid of it," replied a short dark delegate from the west.

"I'll tell you about it. He came to my camp and asked me how to fill cartridges. I had seen the gun and knew it to be a good one in the hands of a man who could appreciate it. I undertook to load the cartridge shells for him, and put in more wads than powder. He did not wait to see it done, so I fixed 'em up all right. I tried a couple of shots myself, and the powder did not throw the lead more than thirty feet. Then I called to Greville and said:

"What's the matter with this gun? She won't throw worth a cent."

"She's all right. Let me have her," and he took the gun, while I threw a chip into the water for him to shoot at.

"You should have seen his face. The chip was about twenty yards out in the water, and the shot fell about half way. He tried a dozen cartridges, and some of them were so weak that you could hear the shot rolling down the barrel, and see them fall out in the water at his feet. He swore the man who sold him the gun was a thief, and he wrote to his solicitors in England about it. When he had finished swearing he turned to me and said:

"I'll sell you the gun for five dollars."

"I hesitated, saying something about it being a big price to pay for a gun that would not throw lead, but guessed I could get the price by trading it off with an Indian on account of its fine appearance. He got the five. I've got the gun. You've seen it shoot, haven't you, Bob?"

Bob grinned appreciatively, and guessed he had.
