House of Commons, Ottawa, March 21.-That there is real economy shown in the estimates of Hon. W. S. Fit-ing minister of finance, seems to be general impression among the West Ontario members, Progressive and I ontario members, Progressive and Liberals alike.

During the recently-ended debate on the speech from the throne, it was the wont of the members of the Progressive party to declare themselves entirely in favor of doing the utmost for the benefit of the returned soldier. So that in the direction of the soldier's civil restablishment they could not object had the estimates been considerably greater than they were.

had the estimates been considerably greater than they were.

It would seem, however, that the Progressives find themselves, unwilling to grant the increases in salaries for civil servants now prepared for in the estimates. This involves the most mooted problem heard in the galleries, and rooms of the members at the present and rooms of the service, commission. and rooms of the members at time, the civil service commission.

This commission, appointed in 1908, is composed of three members. Two of these members were appointed by the Borden administration, the other was since the inception of The majority of the present members were not in the political swim at the time that the commission were appointed, and paid little attention to it, until they reached cutawa. They found it an autocratic body with far-reaching nower in the civil service. In fact it had eliminated patronage almost entirely.

Since the estimates have been brought down considerable enfightenment has been given on the powers of the commission. Both the opposition and the government have cried out against it, and in one of the Liberal caucauses it was the object of much denunciation. The principal objection to the commission is in the fact that though a minister is in the greatest possible measurement.
