

HEAD—MCGINN.—Mr. S. L. Head, of Glenmorris, to Miss Sophia McGinn, of Montreal.

College Notes.

AFTER the election of officers for the present term in the Adelphian Society, the members, together with a large number of the Professors, and of the members of the Excelsior Society, repaired to the spacious dining hall to make merry at an oyster supper. Ample justice being tendered to the eatables, "the feast of reason: nd flow of soul" were inaugurated. The usual loyal toast to Royalty was duly responded to by the whole assembly joining in singing "God save the Queen." A large number of gentlemen were then called upon to answer to the toasts of a varied programme. The speaking, sentiment and song were all good, and after two and a half hours of an exceedingly enjoyable time, the whole party, numbering nearly eighty, sang "Auld lang Syne," and dispersed, all feeling highly pleased with the success of what we hope will be a standing institution in the College.

A SNOW brigade has been organized to keep clear the sidewalk on College Street. Thus far its labours have not been in vain. The ladies are highly pleased with the brigade—at least with its work, and their eulogies tend to inspire its members with energy. The days of modern chivalry are being lived over again. While we write this, we understand that a snow-plough drawn by horse-power will be permanently introduced to clear the walks. Thus modern science ever an enemy to chivalry, again snatches from her a glimmering hope in this her last retreat.

DR. FYFE gave us a very interesting account one evening this
