snow which had fallen through the previous night. The storm of Saturday, with the spring tide, broke up the ice bridge at Carouge, which was the only remaining obstacle to the free navigation of the river; and for about four and twenty hours the St. Lawrence in front of the town and clear down to Orleans was completely choked with large masses and fields of floating ice.

QUEBEC LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. The following donation has been received from J. J. Sims, Esquire:—Thomson's Travels in Sweden, 1 vol. 4to. London, 1813.

Strong as the Indian army is numerically and physically, a glance at the map will show that, considering the enormous expanse of territory which it has to protect, it is in reality weak. From Cape Corcorin to the Suttlej; from Kurachee to the Gulf of Martaban, a tract of country containing a gross area of not less than 1,076,590 square miles, exclusive of acquisitions on the banks of the Indus—with a population exceeding 100,000,000, many of them men of strong military habits, as the late sanguinary and sternly contested action with the Sikh forces, clearly proves—others of incurable predatory habits, impatient under the yoke of the stranger, from whom they differ in colour, caste, language, habits, every thing,—over the whole extent, length and breadth of that immense surface, and detached amongst that vast and hostile population, even 213,000 troops cannot be viewed as a very strong force.

The Anglo-Indian army consists of 159 regiments of regular infantry, 21 of cavalry, 14 battalions of foot artillery, and 3 regiments of sappers and miners. To these must be added 40 corps of irregular cavalry and infantry, officered from the line.

Table with 2 columns: Unit and Count. Regular Infantry (Europeans) 5,600; Native 181,000; Cavalry, Native 10,000; Artillery (European and Native) 10,600; Sappers and Miners (Native) 2,800; Irregular Corps 30,000. Total—243,000 (Calcutta Review).

At 9 o'clock this morning no boat had come in from Montreal, though one is expected to-day. There are no arrivals from sea. The land mail from Montreal gives three days' later intelligence from England, via New York, and a month later from the seat of war in India.

An engagement had taken place between the division of Sir Harry Smith and a body of 10,000 Sikhs. The Sepoys are said to have fled, and the European Regiments (21st and 53rd) being thus deserted suffered considerably and were forced to retire. Large reinforcements were going out from home, and the Indian army was to be increased.

The Lachine Canal is to be opened on the 1st of May.
