

ST. VINCENT DE PAUL PENITENTIARY.

The report made by J. G. Moylan, Esq., Inspector of Penitentiaries, on the complaints of certain officers against the physician attached to the above institution, has been published. The report says:—

I considered it proper to warn these officers not to be guilty, again, of the impropriety and injustice of signing any document affecting the character of, or charging with wrongdoing another officer, without first being perfectly satisfied of the truth and accuracy of the statements to which they would subscribe. Any person having an imaginary grievance to complain of, was to make it known to the Warden, who would either take action himself or refer the matter to the proper authorities for a decision.

The Warden should discountenance all interference, on the part of outsiders, in the affairs of the Penitentiary. It is irregular, strictly prohibited, and leads to very unpleasant results.

Fees to any outside Physician will not be paid by the institution unless his services be called into requisition by the Penitentiary Surgeon, or with the consent of the Warden.

"The pure flow of the finest Mustard Seed without any adulteration or dilution." This is the report of the Government Analyst on Colman's Genuine Mustard. Users of this article may just as well buy the best. There is the only pure brand in the market, all others being what is called a Mustard Condiments, that is mustard mixed with farina etc., and do not possess the pungent aromatic flavour of the genuine article.—Be sure you get "Colman's" with the Bull's Head on every tin. 11-G

THE ARRIVAL OF THE CONSTELLATION.

DUBLIN, April 20.—The United States ship Constellation, laden with a cargo contributed by the citizens of New York for the relief of the starving people of the West of Ireland, arrived at Queenstown this morning, after the remarkably short passage for a sailing ship of 20 days from New York. The Constellation sailed from Sandy Hook at 11.30 p.m. on the 30th ult. It is a noticeable circumstance that the present passage of the Constellation almost completely coincides in a measure with the voyage of the same vessel on her trip from New York to Havre in 1878 with goods for the French Exposition. On that occasion she sailed from the former port on the same day of the same month and passed the Lizard in 20 days, arriving at Havre on April 22nd. The approach of the Constellation was announced to-day, and a large assemblage of people gathered on the quay at Queenstown; the ship was received with many expressions of gratitude and pleasure. The cargo will be taken in charge at once by the relief committee and distributed under its auspices as the necessities of the various districts may suggest.

Probably no one article of diet is so generally adulterated as is cocoa. This article in its pure state, scientifically treated, is recommended by the highest medical authority as the most nourishing and strengthening beverage, and is strongly recommended to all as an article that will tone and stimulate the most delicate stomach. Rowntree's prize medal Cocoa is the only article in our markets that has passed the ordeal to which these articles are all submitted by the Government analyst, and is certified by him to be pure, and to contain no starch, farina, arrow-root, or any of the deleterious ingredients commonly used to adulterate Cocoa. When buying be particular and secure "Rowntree's." Other kinds are often substituted for the sake of larger profits. 11-G

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the specific and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and lung affections, also, coughs, and all nervous debility and all nervous complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his fellow-fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. BISHOP, 419 Powers' Block Rochester, N. Y. 5-G

DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE TWO SECTIONS OF THE HOME RULERS.

The Times says a requisition has been addressed to the Home Rule members asking them to meet for consultation on the 27th inst. The requisition is signed by William Shaw and others. A section of the party has not been consulted, which consequently has caused dissatisfaction. A Dublin correspondent says relative to the dissatisfaction of the Irish section of the Home Rule party not having been consulted, Parnell's followers have refused to sign the requisition for a meeting on the 27th inst. for consultation, and will hold their own land meeting instead. Parnell says the land question will be the real question of the new Parliament, but the Shaw party, instead of mentioning it in their requisition, only speak vaguely of Home Rule.

Epps's Cocoa—Grateful and Comforting.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually restored after disease, or never-ending tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal ailment by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Crest Service Gazette, Sold only in packets labeled—JAMES EPPS & CO., Homeopathic Chemists, London, England.

DEVELOPMENTS IN LUCAN.

LONDON, April 21.—The Lucan troubles have had a fresh development. Mr. John Kent, of Clondeboye, now demands an inquest on the ground that the stable boy at Kinross points to him as the probable incendiary. He desires to clear himself. Father Connelly, it is reported, is about to leave Biddulph on account of the late trouble, to be succeeded by Father Murphy, of Dublin, Ont., who was the former pastor. It is reported that Mr. John Kennedy, father of John Kennedy, who is a prisoner charged with participating in the Donnelly massacre, is annoyed by the discharge of firearms about his place at all hours of the night, which he construes as a menace. He is very much alarmed. An old frame tenement, owned by Mr. McKinnon and until yesterday occupied by a colored family, was set on fire last night and would have been burned but for the prompt aid of the firemen. The damage was small.

INTERNATIONAL RIFLE CONTEST.

General competition for membership of the rifle team to go to Ireland takes place on Goodmoor in the middle of May.

Given Up by Doctors.

"Is it possible that Mr. Godfrey is up and at work, and cured by so simple a remedy? If so, it is true that he is entirely cured, and with nothing but Hop Bitters; and only ten days ago his doctors gave him up and said he must die!" "Well-a-day! That is remarkable! I will go this day and get some of my poor George—I know hops are good."—Salem Post.

THE MADISON SQUARE DISASTER.

FURTHER PARTICULARS—LIST OF THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

New York, April 22.—The morning papers are filled with details of last night's disaster at Madison Square Garden. Mackay, superintendent of the fair, says at 9.30 his attention was called to the cracking of the walls in the art gallery; he went there promptly; found the room full of people; fearing the walls were about to give way, he sent a man to turn off the gas from the regulator below, and then requested the people to leave the room on the pretence it was so warm the pictures were being injured. Many protested that they had paid admission, but meanwhile the gaslights were being slowly turned down and the visitors left. At this time pieces of mortar were falling from the ceiling, and the actions of the dancers in an adjoining room caused the floor to vibrate and the walls to shake ominously. Mackay was turning to leave the room when he heard a succession of sharp reports and saw the other wall go out; then the roof fell. As the walls fell the Seventh Regiment was passing down Fifth avenue on dress-parade. News of the calamity reached Col. Clarke, and he halted his command and told them to take off their coats and do what they could. After the disaster Jay Gould was seen in Delmonico's strangely excited, enquiring whether his son had been injured. The following were killed.—Mrs. W. A. O. Hegeman, Miss H. L. Willett, Marie Connolly, nursemaid to Mrs. Hegeman. Among the injured is Wm. M. Tilston. It is doubtful if he survives; he was one of the managers of the approaching dog show, editor of The Country, and connected with Forest and Stream. One report says that half the pictures in the art gallery are ruined, and that the 13 bronzes were not seriously damaged. Another report says when the ceiling fell the plaster and timbers caught on the upper part of the frames, which protected the canvas in most instances.

FRANCE AND IRELAND.

LONDON, April 20. A despatch from Paris says there was an immense gathering at the Church of the Madeleine, in this city, on Sunday to hear Père Montebare, the celebrated Carmelite. The preacher delivered a sermon in aid of the Irish distress. The service was organized by the French Relief Committee, and all members of the committee and numerous clerical, senators, and members of the Chamber of Deputies were present.

PAPAL ANNIVERSARY.

Rome, April 20.—The grand philological feté of the Polylogit Academy was held at the Vatican on the 18th instant in honor of the exaltation of the Pope. The diplomatic body, nobility and Archbishops were present. The scholars of the Propaganda recited poems in 49 different languages, extolling the Pope.

THE CLERICAL DECREE.

April 20. Emile Ollivier's letter to Estoffe, which takes the same line of policy as Prince Napoleon, and defends the decrees against unauthorized religious congregations, is another red rag waved before the clerical bull. Even Paul De Cassagnac characterizes the letter as an infamous document.

IRISH PATRIOTISM.

The last days of the late British Parliament were given historical interest by the indignant speeches of two Irish members. We give that of the O'Gorman Mahon at full length as it appears in the London Parliamentary reports. The mummeries which are inseparable from the effect of the closing of the British Parliament had been gone through. The introductory remarks to the burning words of the veteran patriot from Clare are from the London Daily Telegraph—a notoriously anti-Irish journal, and we reproduce them here to show how these cold-blooded English gazed in wonderment on the tall form of this grand old Irishman, as they listened to his utterances with amazement.—

Next the Chancellor of the Exchequer notified the virtual death of the present Parliament; and almost before the words were out of the right honorable gentleman's mouth a slight but showy figure, scarcely bent with the weight of seventy-seven years, commenced reading from a paper which he held in his hand. This tall old man, with fiery eyes and flowing white hair and beard, is Colonel James Patrick O'Gorman Mahon, M.P. for the county of Clare. Fifty years ago he represented that county, and seventeen years afterwards the borough of Ennis, in Parliament—an old partisan and benchman of Daniel O'Connell, a fire-eater and redoubtable captain in far-away countries, on sea and land. Whatever else the O'Gorman Mahon may be, he is a goodly specimen of Celtic physique.

The O'Gorman Mahon moved: "That this House highly disapproves of the attempt of the Prime Minister to stir up feelings of hatred between England and Ireland for the purpose of furnishing an election cry to his followers, and regards with indignation his flagrant misrepresentation of the loyal efforts of the Home Rule party to extend the blessings of constitutional government to Ireland." He said it would be perfectly incoherent with his duty if he allowed this House to adjourn without calling its serious notice to the letter of the Prime Minister. He remarked upon the fact that there was no one on the front Opposition bench to participate in the condemnation he meant to pass on the Government. A native bard had said—

"Ah, who can look on history's damning leaf, Where Whig and Tory—thief opposed to thief— On either side in conscious shame are seen, While Ireland's wrongs are crucified between; Who, Justice, who such rival rogues can see But files from both to honesty and thee?"

Honesty was not to be found in the Whigs and Tories, but in the people of England and Scotland, divested of the taint and slime with which our wretched parties endeavoured to imbue them. He enlarged upon Ireland's petitions for these parties, which in their wretched squabbles played at battle-axe and shuttlecock with poor Ireland until she dropped, to lie until another quarrel between them raised her again from the ground. He referred to the accidental circumstances which had saved England from invasion and Ireland from deliverance in former times, and suggested that the former might not always be so fortunate. He stood now as one of the advocates of a principle which more than half a century ago in a different shape—that of repeal of the union—was propounded in the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister of that day—but he was an honest man—said that if he could show that a majority of his countrymen were in favor of the repeal of the Act of Union which was passed a few years ago, he, as a Minister of the Crown, would deem it his duty to counsel the Sovereign that it should be taken into consideration. But now, though they had demonstrated that a majority of the people were in favour of Home Rule, their demands were still treated with contempt. He would advise Ireland never to submit to the insolence of the Saxons, (laughter)—but to bid her time. The first cannon-shot that was fired by a gunboat hostile to the English flag by either France or America would be the signal for the sending of a Royal prince by her Majesty to open a Parliament in College-green. Then would be the time for the Irish people to choose their allies. He hoped it might be England. It might be otherwise.

Standing in a thin House with scarcely half a dozen of his party behind him, the spirit of the famous duellist rang out in every sentence. The torrent of violence and acrimony poured, as it were, spontaneously from him in an unbroken stream of passionate eloquence. The entire speech, indeed, was a fine example of the heroic.

When The O'Gorman Mahon sat down exhausted—not of indignation, but of breath—Mr. A. M. Sullivan rose, and made a long, a violent, and eloquent speech on the wrongs of Ireland generally, and of those of the Home Rule members of Parliament in particular. He had the floor of the House for the last time this session; he meant to keep it, and he did so. No novel argument was offered, but his more or less burning periods seemed directed at the heads of the electors of Louth. At last Mr. A. M. Sullivan finished his St. Stephen's election speech. Then the Chancellor of the Exchequer explained with quiet, sneering sarcasm that he was puzzled to know what The O'Gorman Mahon meant, but Mr. A. M. Sullivan's object was patent. He was doing a stroke of business for the Liberal party at the elections. Here Mr. Mitchell Henry, full of fight, would have interpellated a speech, but some weary legislator called a count, and forty members, it is needless to remark, not being present, the last rays of the sinking sun touched the bright gilding of the mace as it was borne through the gathering gloom behind the Speaker's empty chair. Not less outspoken was the style of Mr. O'Donnell at Liverpool:

The Briton who does not vote for the friends of Home Rule is "bad, mad, vicious and cowardly." Such a creature is "a dog, the basest of the canine kind; a veritable hound of carrion; it has stolen to the battle fields of South Africa to finish the wounded; it has skulked amid the ashes of what once were the smiling villages in the valleys of the Albanian to work its horrid will on the remains of murdered patriots; and now that same Jingo longed to fix his fangs in a nobler prey, and to rush from his lair against the man who ought to be regarded as a citizen of Englishmen and Scotchmen. Jingoism, after whetting its fangs on the African and the Afghan, but which shrank from an encounter with the grizzly bear—that same beast of cowardice and slaughter now howled for the blood of the Irish nation."

The English must be pretty thick-skinned if some of these darts do not strike home to the hearts of those who still possess them. "Lay on, Macduff!" say we.

Brave Irishmen in the English Army.

The London Univers says:—In the peninsula, under the Iron Duke, who braver than the Irish? And in every war that England has waged since, down to the last petty and unwarrantable conflicts in Zululand and Afghanistan, Paddy is to the fore, jumping gleefully into the gap of danger. If we look over the annals of the Victoria Cross we are confronted at every page by patronymics that smell of the peat-fire. At the Alma, where it saved the colors of the 23d Welsh Fusiliers?—Luke O'Connor, an Irishman. At Balaklava, who was it rescued Bentley, the 11th Hussars?—Robert Dunn, an Irishman. Who was it captured a Russian escort at McKenzie's Farm?—Joe Malone, an Irishman. The Milesian name crops up every other day among the distinguished soldiers in that terrible Crimean campaign. There is no mistaking the breed to which they belonged, or the country from which they came—these Connors and Grays, Moybhains and Lyonses, Hacketts and Coffeys, Maddens and McWhennies. In the Indian Mutiny the record is similar. The first civilian to win the Victoria Cross was Cavanaugh, an Irishman. Drummor Maguire was the first man to enter the stronghold of King Theodore, at Magdala. Three Irish Catholics were among the South African heroes, as Sir William Strickland proudly recounts a few days ago. And the officer to seize the Schuargarden Pass, when the news of the massacre at Cabul arrived, where the gallant Irishmen Kelly and Hamilton were slain, sword in hand, their faces to the foe, was 'Redan' Massey, a bold Tipperary boy."

Holloway's Ointment and Pills.—Diseases of the Bowels.—A remedy, which has been tested and proved in a thousand different ways, capable of eradicating poisonous taints from ulcers and healing them up, merits a trial of its capacity for extracting the internal corruption from the bowels. On rubbing Holloway's Ointment repeatedly on the abdomen, a rash appears, and as it thickens the alvine irritability subsides. Acting as a derivative, this unguent draws to the surface, releases the tender intestines from all acid matters, and prevents inflammation, dysentery, and piles, for which blistering was the old-fashioned, though successful treatment, now from its painfulness fallen into disuse, the discovery of this Ointment having proclaimed a remedy possessing equally derivative, yet perfectly painless, powers. 113-w.f.

THE TAY BRIDGE DISASTER.

In the investigation of the Tay Bridge disaster before the Board of Trade yesterday, Henry Low, civil engineer, who was sent by the Board of Trade to examine the bridge after the accident, testified to various defects in the design, material, workmanship and arrangement of the bridge, confirming in many important particulars the workmen's evidence taken at Dundee as to defective columns, bolts, lugs and flanges. In his opinion, the bases of the piers were too narrow, occasioning a very great strain upon the struts and ties. The angles at which the latter were disposed and the mode of connecting them to the columns were such as to render them of little or no use, and the other imperfections which had been pointed out lessened the power of the columns to resist the crushing strain. He considered that the yielding of the struts and ties was the immediate cause of the disaster, but the other circumstances stated contributed to it.

During a light thunder storm a young man named John Flanagan, living nine miles from Knockagoon, was struck by lightning and knocked senseless, in which state he remains. Two dogs that were near him were killed instantly.
