FARMERS' COLUMN.

Thank God for the Trees!

Thrice happy they who walk attent, and know God's hand is seen in all good things that grow; Nor least of these Are the deep rooted, long-lived, blessed trees. Rank upon rank, in countless hosts they stand. stand. The living guardians of a grateful land. Thank God for trees!

Through all the year, some ministry they bring

bring
To birds that fiy, and every creeping thing;
And man, earth's lord,
Before the trees should how in sweet accord—
In actions first temples" walk with reverent care. All sights, all se unds invite the soul to prayer. Thank God for trees! When spring-time comes, it is a joy to see New life, new hope in every living tree— The life that thrills Shows everywhere among the wooded hills; And every where among the budding trees, Life daily shows some pleasing mysteries. Thank God for trees!

In summer days how grateful is the shade Of thick-leaved trees in tangled forest glade;
And growing free
In field or lane, what beauty in a tree!
And through the valleys, what a joy to trace
These summer trees all robbed in matchless grace!

grace! Thank God for trees!

When autumn comes—Ah! then it is, one sees
The matchless glory of earth's myriad trees—
They burn, they glow
With every color earth or heaven may know;
Vid with their fruits, in ever pienteous store,
They fill our baskets till we want no more.
Thank God for trees!

In wintry days, when the cold winds come down,

down.
And wander wild three grove and field and town.
Then-listening—
What anthems wild the trees exultant sing!
Now high, now low—as minstress old they stand, And all with music all the frozen land, Thank God for trees!

Not vain, not vain is homoge paid to trees God tashroned them not rudest sense to please;
Eat made them all For wisest purpose, either great or small. On all the hills, in all the valleys low, The glad earth welcomes all the trees that grow.

Thank God for trees!

Pact and painter -lo! among the trees They walk clate; books have no charms like these; With carnest eyes,

To them all is a glad surprise.
Poems and pictures, as the light and air,
Among the trees are present everywhere.
Thank (fod for trees)

Egg Statistics.

M. Lemoltine, the chief authority upon poultry matters in brance has made a number of experiments in order to show the average weight of the egg of many of the different breeds, and he comes to the conclusion that the largest egg is land by the French howl known as the Black La Bresse, followed by the Creve Co or and one or two other French varieties. In this gratheman's list are six or seven Varieties common to this country, the duding the Game, Porking, and Cochin; but the layers of the jargest eggs—such as the Minorea and the Semishe-ane amitted. Mr. Ferguson, a wriver of torty years ago, estimated the eggs of the Sporish at 2 ozs, which would place it pretically at the top of the list. Data respecting the erg is not very common, nor is a very great deal known about it; but a few words showing the results of many experiments which had been in de in a most reliable in caser with afterd valuable information. Most pariners, the resident beast a ten heres, encouneach for their covercons timplion. There are example year, who consider the recharacteristic free, and endenvor to meet the cover to be same care as is expended on other one or make. This is all the more stagened to be he could growing demand for good bester, when to one demand home presents a firly of a construction of the month above presents a firly of the hereofold. Here are some help in he has from he Pholadelphia Farm Journal. So call mee, an odly, lengthy sows, with well proportioned beaters, in they are to be breat for spring page The annual that shows a lendency to he make a six and any age, and one having a gooden with non-and good bone, is also to he desired. While the sow is important, the bone is still more to be sended for points. He must have good qualities of the pigs are to be depended on. He may, however, be shorter in body Have the pigs for vo in March and April, and he ready to give chem good care.

No annual more enjoys back scratching or grooming than the pig, and what andmids enjoy enduries to their growth. If you can't spend time to use an old how or stiff broom on each animal daily, arrange a place where the pigs am only themselves. No simpler device is superior to a rongh pole cut in the woods and fastened at one end of the floor and at the other tongots four reck high. Here all sizes can tub. to a jots four feet high. Here all sizes can rub. Next to the trough it is the favorite place.

Do the strong animals rob tho weaker ones and so keep them back? Don't let the strong ones cram too rapidly nor crowd the punyones at teeding time. Stout strips of oak thrown across the trough and held there by screws and stap from will do good service. A lew hard cobies kept in the trough will make them on more slowly. Where but two or three hogs kept the results of robbing are not noteable, but in large lots the loss is very conside able. A loadof woods soil thrown in the sty once a month will do n uch toward keeping the swine well and contented. It free zes but little, being solight and under trees and leaves and its nearly aways available. The roots and ints and rotten wood just suit hogs in winter when they cannot have their usual run and need varlety. Throw in a chunk of charcoal every day also, it is agreat thing to keep digestion good.

The pig ought to be a prominent factor in the winter dany hustness. The maker of butter or cheese can just as well keep two as twenty brood sows and get two litters yearly to sell at $x or eight weeks. In this way a large pay may be got for the skimmilk or whey, and beight foods will make the farm richer for the coss.

RICH WORDS FROM MANY WRITERS.

It is the lover's vaunt that he transcends All who had loved or who in love excel; And if his tongue be rich endowed, to tell His love's esteem, a world of words he spends. My broken song for no such meed contends, Nor dares my love to claim its paralle! In thine; but on thy love for me I dwell,—Oh, mother-love, from childhood unexplored, Oh, mother-love, all boundless in pure hight! (So to the bird a sun-filled heaven unsoared, Tenderly overlies its daily flight.)
Lost Plenitude!—Be thou not lost, but stored Where I shall find thee after one strange night.
—Edith M. Thomas.

Where I shall find thee after one strange higher.

What is there in the life of soldier, poet, politician, man of pleasure, or man of science, to compare with the life of St. Finn Barr here among his mountains? What has your great general done but set women and children crying? Make a man a prime minister to-day, and he'll he furning over what the papers are saying about his speech to-morrow morning. The poet has a magging wife, perhaps,—or, if not, nags at his daughter on his own account—Milton did It, with all the lustrous shapes of Paradise floating around him. Science? there are a million millions of starry worlds beckoning down at us every night, and Golselmult or Chacornae thinks it glory enough for the watchings of a life-time if he discovers half-a-dozen trumpery little astroid half-a-dozen trumpery little astroid, and frhe does not get abused as a thief in the astronomical journals. Pleasure!—which produces no classic, except the cookery book, and pays its worshippers with yawns and headaches. Immortality! Your human great ones capy it as much as they enjoy sliver breastplates on their coffins. . But our braves in the stranger of this hour; and if he does, it is not to see his name pecked at by soar lipped critics, but to find a loving shrine glowing to him in every peasant's eabin, in women's hearts, and children's evening prayers.—William O'Brien, "When We Were Boys"

"There are wrongs that cannot be righted;" -Edith M. Thomas.

"There are wrongs that cannot be righted; There are crosses that must be borne; There are duties that cannot be slighted; There are thornerowns that must be worn.

"There are griefs that cannot find comfort, And wounds that cannot be healed; There are sorrows so deep in the human heart They cannot be half revealed.

But, oh! let us carry our crosses— We carry them not alone; set us thread over earth's rough places. Even as Christ has done.

Let us bary our bitter sorrow Deep in His Sacres Heart, And think what a blessed thing it is To have in his sorrows a part.

"Let us think of the wrongs He suffered, Let us think of the Cross He bore; Let us think of His weary Journeys, Let us think of the Crown He wore.

"Surely the pain and the sorrow Christ chose for Himself must be best; Let us follow Him, then, in the way of the Cross: "Twill lead unto heaven's sweet rest."
