. Mi ln our next issue we shall publish a faithful portrait of the parties implicated in the William Street horror.

PROFESSIONAL HUMORISTS

The humorist is abroad in the land. His jokes flood the country and the people instead of rising en masse to crush him, submit with docility to the brain racking absurdities which belong more to the grave than to the banquet room, with a dash of idiotcy to make them by a load of hay without stealin still more intolerable. He is a fearful judg- it and sticking it in his mouth? ment on the vices of the nineteenth century, a plague that takes rank with famines, wars and pestilences.

But if the humorist at his desk, inundating the newspaper with libels on wit and satureis a sad and solemn spectacle, how much more blood cordling is the humo-rist in the lecture hall. There he has is audience at his mercy. In the newspaper one can turn to another column, or fling the paper away or use it to light the fire with and watch the ghosts of the tortured joke pass up the chimney in smoke. In the lecture room, scurely jammed between files and files of fellow sufferers the wretched being, who, in a weak me-ment, or led by an inexplicable fuscination to behold the man who has wounded his sensibilities so often, purchased a ticket, his helpless, unnerved and thoroughly miserable. When the humorist pauses after perpetrated some more than ordinarily atrocious joke for the cackle his helpless victims are doomed to yield him, he knows tha he has go there and that there is no escape. He feels that no matter who far he may drive the iron into their souls, they have paid their half dollar and that they are bound to see the lecture through, should softening of the braine. in the moment they pass the threshold.

Why, then, should the towns that produce this class of evil permit it to extend to other and unaffending cities where, the moment a humorist is discovered he is place on a religious or an agricultural newspaper, and if that does not do, he is induced to drink himself to death.

keeps a shop at the corner of St. Urbain and girl drunkard!" cilled Mrs. Johnson.

Dorchester Streets, has been arrested. Capt.

McRobie of the Salvage corns made a density.

"Yes, and thread up might constitution." McRobie of the Salvage corps made a deposition against him accusing him of having set fire to his premises. The accused was brought before fire Marshal Austin and committed for

EXCESS OF ZEAL .- THE RECORDER: "Humph! the Court must be clear on the point, M. Barry." Chien Nelson: "Clear the Court." His Honor reprimands him for his excess of zeal.

QUERY.- How is it that a man cannot pass by a load of hay without stealing a portion of

"Brow-kronk-kronkikology just as nicez ugar!" stammered the girl. "Howzliver sugar!" stammered the girl. "F complaint, Mizzer Johnson?" "Put her out!" shrieked the wife.

" Puz who ouz? All rize-I'll go rize ouzoli, yes!"
She got hold of Mr. Johnson's shirt-collar and

They found the three in a corner, engaged exclaimed:

A TALE OF WOE.

"Yes, and thread up mighty smart!" added HE DESERTED HIS OWN TRUE LOVE TO RUN AWAY WITH A GIRL NAMED SARAII, scooted with another woman!" exclaimed a corpulent female affected with asthma, as she pulled herself through the door of the Central Station yesterday forenoon.

The police sergeants are never hasty about expressing their opinion, and the one in charge of the station looked at the woman and didn't Mrs. Johnson hair, and the carpenters at work even nod his head for her to go on. The woon a new house in the next lot heard so much man took a chair, or nearly two chairs, pulled dreadful noise that they felt called upon to go away like a back-horse for several minutes, over to Johnson's.

> " I'll will never forgive him, and if he's A caught you may sentence him for life. To think that after we've lived together these five years and better he should desert his own true love and run away with a girl named Sarah!"

"You refer to your busband, I suppose," said the sergeant, cautiously.

"What other woman's husband would I be referring to?" she demanded, "Of course it's my husband-iny John Henry Polk !"

" And I infer that he has deserted you?"

"That's what he's done-deserted me and run off with a girl named Sarah something or other, and I'm left here without a friend!"

" He shouldn't have done that," remarked the sergeant, after a long pause.

"No, he shouldn't," she replied.

"Why, what was he when I married him? Didn't 1 take him when he was a goodfor-nothing, insignificant whiffet of sixteen, and bring him up to what he is? And now this is my return!"

She sobbed away for a while, and then went on:

" He called me his darlinghis dear gazelle-and he said that I was sugar, melted over, and all that, and I believed it yes. I believed it, like the fool 1

" And he's gone, eh?"

"Gone! Didn't I say he'd gone? I can hardly believe it, though, when I look over the letter he wrote me, and see how he called me his shining angel and his noon-day star, I can hardly realize that he has

and taken up with a freekled-

"It's sad-very sad," sighed the sergeant. "You don't know my feelings," she replies; don't begin to realize how this heart of mine fists at her and threatened her, she held fact to is wrenched and upset! I wish you'd catch a shade-tree, and called back:

him, sir. I wish you'd bring him back here, him, sir. I wish you'd bring him back here, and stand him over there and leave me over there and lock the doors for about two minutes

"Be calm, madam," replied the sergeant.
"Carm! How can I be carm? When I think of John Henry, and Sarah, and dear gazelle, and shining angel, and noon-day star, can I bid my heart be carm," She left her husband's description, and went away and the police will catch him if they

THE KIND OF A MAN HE WAS.

Hank keeps a lager-beer saloon on Craig street, and in that particular neighborhood he meets with many tough customers. One day last week a couple of roughs entered and call for drinks, which Hank at once proceeded to furnish them with. Then they called for cigars, and after lighting them, they turned to leave the place without paying.

"Here!" said Hank, calling said Hank, calling after them,

"you hafe not pay me."
"Wal, we don't intend to pay. I never pay, that's the kind of a fellow I am," replied the

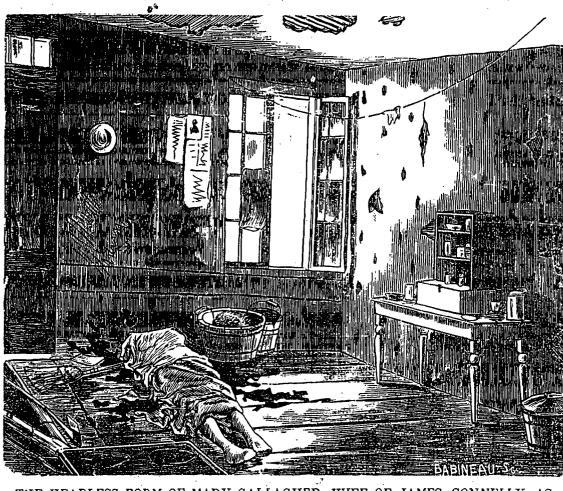

"You 'ton't, eh! Val, you is von tam loafer. Dot's ter kind of a fellers vat I am," retorted

Notice.-The following sentence has been pasted over our office door:

The tramp who enters in this door Must be prepared for Jordan's shore.

OARD.—LEFERVIRE & MACMAHON, Advocates, 31 St. Vincent Street. JULES LEFEBVRE, Residence, 183 St. Paul Street. OMER MACMATION, 233 St. André Street.

THE HEADLESS FORM OF MARY GALLAGHER, WIFE OF JAMES CONNELLY, AS DISCOVERED AFTER THE MURDER.

DRAWN BY OUR SPECIAL ARTIST.

VARIETIES.

"THE CITY LIFE."-The latest rumour connected with the accusation of libel brought ngainst Roger Hancock, Mitchell & McPherson, is that the former had left for foreign parts. is that the former nau feet of follows. It was less it was life did leave the city but as he says it was object is to slide through life without hurting to recuperate his impaired health. His bail anyone's feelings or stepping on anyone's toos. kron—kronk—hold!" bonds will not be forfeited.

PARADE. - The 65th paraded on the Champ de Mars, on Dominion Day, under Lt.-Cot. Labranche; the batallion looked soldierlike.

COMING AROUND .- Fireman Lafranchise who in jumping off a reel fell and was run over is getting over his severe injuries.

THE QUENNEVILLE TRAGEDY .-- There are no developements in this mysterious murder. The adjourned inquest is held today.

the murder of Mary Gallagher that a supersti- have to take a sip now and then for my liver, tious fear has taken possession of the neighbors of the house where she breathed her last. Fouch this bottle, Augusta—don't even smell bors of the house where she breathed her last. They swear that they saw the deceased's of the cork. ghost moving about the chamber of death, and now and then stopping at the window. The case of liver complaint. At least, Mr. Johson

MORE ABOUT THE WILLIAM STREET MURDER. Yesterday a vagrant named Cotherine McCarthy, aged about thirty years, was brought before Recorder Sexton. She desired to impart some information to the police authorities. Detective Gullen brought her to the detectives' room where she stated in the presence of coroner Jones, that she had been intimately acquainted with the murdered woman Mary Gallagher, having gone to school with her in Kingston. They both had often been in jail in this city. Fifteen days ago she met deceased who was drunk and who said she was looking for Mrs. down upon the pensive girl, he called out: Jacob Meyer. She sometimes went by the name of Quigley. McCarthy was detained in custody as a witness.

A NEW BEVERAGE.

KRONKIKOLOGY AND HOW IT AFFECTED A SERVANT GIRL.

You have doubtless heard about "the Besom of destruction"? Well Mr. Johnson, of Sherbrooke Street, is not that kind of a man. He wouldn't destroy a grasshopper if he could walk around or climb over the insect. His

They got a new hired girl at his house the other day. She had pensive eyes, a very quiet way, and seemed quietly religious. Johnson said she was just the kind of a girl he liked to see around the kitchen, and he flattered Mrs. Johnson for her perception in reading human

That first evening the new girl caught Johnson in the pantry. He was on tip-toe, and had just reached down a bottle from the top shelf. He started to put it back, hesitated, and finally said:

"I wanted to warn you about this bottle. It THE MURDERED WOMAN'S GHOST. - So foul was contains a fluid known as kronkikology. I

The girl soon discovered that it was a bad police were implored to order the window to like fastened, which was done.

entered the pantry regularly three times per away. Don't you know what they give a feller day, and after taking his "kronkikology," he when he is dyin'?"
The druggist was compelled to acknowledge yesterday morning at the usual time, and after had better go home and ask his mother what waiting awhile Mrs. Johnson entered the she sent him after. Finding he still hesitated kitchen to see what had occurred to delay the about going, he asked what disease his father meal: She found the pensive hired girl lying was dying with.

on the floor, and no meal under way.

"Krow—kronki—krow—"muttered the girl.
"The girl has a fit—the hired girl is dying!"

"We hasn't had no doctor," blurted out the "The girl has a fit—the hired girl is dying!" exclaimed Mrs. Johnson, as she rushed through the house.

Johnson ran back to the kitchen with her, and as he sniffed the air in that room and looked

"She's been drinking gin."
"Youze liar!" shouted the girl, securing a hold on the stove-leg to help her to her feet.

in an earnest contest, and it took some time to left me, a tell which was who. The pensive hired girl nosed girl!" was carried outside the gate. more sober than when the unpleasantness began, and as the crowd stood on the doorstep and shouk their

"Whaz thaz you called it, Mizzer Johnson? Kronki-knonkikolog? Diz you fluk I was a tool, Mizzer Johnson? Be careful of your liver,

HAD THE CUCUMBERS.

Yesterday afternoon, about five o'clock, a hatless urchin came rushing into a Notre-Dame street drugstore, and, placing an empty bottle on the counter, gasped out:

"Give me ten cents' worth, quick!"

"Ten cents' worth of what?" inquired the druggist, discovering the bottle bore no label.

"Why, ten cents' worth of that stuff you always give a man when he's dyin'," sobbed the impatient youngster; "and hurry up, mister, 'cause dad he is awful sick, and if he pegs out fore I git back, why, mom will lam me for it."

"But I do not know what to give your father--what ai's him ?"

" He is dyin', I tell you!" screamed the boy "and I want something to cure him right

The family didn't hear the breakfast-bell that he did not, and informed the boy that he boy; "but mom says dad's got the cucum-bers."

The celerity with which that druggist grabbed for the paregoric bottle brought a smile to the face of an old lady who at that moment entered for toothache drops, and the next time he has a call for "somethin' for a man what's dyin'," he will know exactly what to give.