

but with respect to certain of the four fundamental principles that were earlier enunciated by the Minister of National Health and Welfare.

I should like to refer to two of these principles in particular. One has to do with universality, or universal coverage, and the other has to do with the way in which the scheme shall be administered in the several provinces. However, before dealing with these matters, Mr. Speaker, I should like to call it six o'clock.

Business of the House

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Speaker, could we have an announcement of the business for tomorrow?

Mr. MacEachen: The business for tomorrow is identical to the business announced last night for today.

At six o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.
