

seasoned. On account of the sharp-pointed short fronds, it is quite impossible to grasp them with the naked hand, and this renders this tree easily distinguished from the other British Columbia coniferae.

While the above mentioned woods are the principal ones found in British Columbia, there are many others equally valuable to be found in our forests in smaller quantities. They still pay the logger and owner well, however, to bring to market.

