The plaintiff claims that she was married to the defendant on May 7, 1904. Some years ago, she alleged, he developed a temper. She claims that her regular attendance at church and a missionary society was his chief reason for this. The statement of claims further sets out that he denounced the church and the society: that at times he would work himself up to such a fury that he would pound the table and make the dishes jump, and that on one occasion he beat a colt so hard that it was necessary to call a veterinary surgeon to save its life; that he had told the plaintiff that if it were not for his children he would not care whether or not he were hanged. She claims that he did not speak civilly to her for a year and that he often would so to the telephone, hold down the receiver and talk to the wall.

Unity the Only Way.

The question of a further gratuity, or as it was decided to refer to it, "the war bonus," was thoroughly discussed.

It was the belief of those present that the members of all the associations in London were in favor of the graduated scale with a maximum amount of $2,000. It was felt that the only way the returned men could gain this request was to strive for it with a singleness of purpose.

A motion was passed to the effect that all veterans engaged in business should receive the practical support and encouragement of all their comrades, was heartly indorsed. RUPTURE KILLS

Seven thousand persons each year are laid away—the burial certificate being marked "Rupture." Why? Because the unfortunate ones had neglected themselves or had been merely taking care of the sign (swelling) of the affliction and paying no attention to the cause. What are you doing? Are you neglecting yourself by wearing a truss, appliance, or whatever name you choose to call it? At best, the truss is only a makeshift—a false prop against a collapsing wall—and cannot be expected to act as more than a mere mechanical support. The binding pressure retards blood circulation, thus robbing the weakened muscles of that which they need most—nourishment.

But science has found a way, and every truss sufferer in the land is invited to make a FREE itest right in the privacy of their own home. Itest right in the privacy of their own home. The Telephone Situation

Serving as Many as Possible

In communities in which telephone development is greatest there is a very general use of two-party line service. Four-party service for residence purposes is also widely used.

We are recommending two-party service at this time because of the world shortage of telephone material. We wish to serve as many applicants as possible with the cable and central office facilities available. The general use of two-party service will mean double the number of installations that would be possible if we devoted all our facilities to individual line connections.

Similar conditions of material shortage are being met everywhere. It is one of the inevitable results of the colossal waste of war.

In extending two-party development we are endeavoring to meet a trying situation in a manner that will provide the convenience of telephone con nection to the maximum number of applicants.
