Only for ladies who end corns

Dainty shoes are only for those who end corns.

The way is simple, quick and easy, and is sure. Millions of people employ it.

Apply Blue-jay, the liquid or the plaster. That touch will stop the pain.

Then wait a little and the corn will loosen and come out.

Then why does anybody suffer corns? Just because they don't know. They pare corns and keep them. Or they pad them. Or they use a treatment harsh and ineffective.

Blue-jay is scientific. This world-famed laboratory created it.

Year after year, it is keeping millions entirely free from corns.

Perhaps half the corns that start are now ended by it.

Ask your druggist for Blue-jay. Learn tonight how much it means to you.

HELENE'S MARRIED LIFE

BY MAY CHRISTIE
Copyright, 1920, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate
XCVI.—An Unwelcome Task.

There was silence in the library after I had spoken. Alice's face was a study. Evidently this solution of the mystery had not hitherto occurred to her. "You admit that you did go down to the library, after we all had gone to bed?" I was determined to sift the matter to the bottom, and now was a favorable time. Alice nodded dejectedly. "It wasn't because of any flirtation, Helene," she maintained, "it was all through things to say to me—and he couldn't get a decent opportunity when all the rest of you were round." "And so you jeopardized your own good name, for the sake of an idle chat with Tony, did you?" Alice looked ashamed of herself. "Yes, it was foolish of me. But he was so persistent. And I was worried to death over my card losses—"

"And so you crept down to meet Tony, and have this chat with him?" She nodded. "And then you dropped your scarf?" "I suppose I did."

"And you never once suspected Tony of breaking into Mr. Lloyd's safe?" Alice shook her head.

"Well, you know," I remarked, "at that time, we needn't take up the wrecked condition of the safe. I didn't know that Mr. Lloyd's safe had again been tampered with."

"Oh, Helene—how?" "He told me so himself," I said, "and, what's more, he assured me that he'd seen the form of Tony disappearing through the open window of the library."

Alice gave a small, affected scream. "Tony produced a post-handkerchief, and began dabbing her eyes again. "I—I was so fond of Tony," she sniffed. "It's awfully true to believe those things about him!"

I knitted my brows. What was it Mr. Travis Lloyd had said?

"I don't think the motive was the stealing of money, if I remember rightly. I believe Tony took some papers—or tried to take them. They were private papers, valueless, except for sentimental reasons. Mr. Lloyd seemed awfully upset."

Alice rose to her feet. Evidently my speculations had ceased to interest her. Her thoughts were all on her precious diamond bracelet, and the chances that it might once more come into her own tenuous hands.

"Oh, Helene, do get it back for me!" Her eyes—big, blue and appealing—were fixed upon my face.

"But how can I find Tony?" I protested. Alice fumbled in her bag.

"Look—here's his address—go to see him."

I am not fond of these unpleasant jobs. Yet invariably they fall to me.

"I'll see what I can do. Meantime, write to your husband, Alice," I patted her reassuringly on the shoulder. "He's read a hundred of any of your other friends."

So Alice made her exit, much to my relief. Mrs. St. Aubyn didn't ask the reason for my interview. She merely said, quite gently and kindly (and I know she doesn't care for Alice):

"I ought to have told you to ask your friend to stay to dinner, my dear. But she won't wait. I'm in a hurry."

We dined that night in a small sitting-room, opening off Jim's bedroom. The motor-drive had not tired him much, and he looked more like his old self than he had done for a long time.

Dear Jim!

We were a cheerful trio. Always Jim's eyes looked at me, in a wistful sort of way, as if he were longing for that look, and an eager question, too.

A great hope came to me that Jim's memory would be restored. As Helene Beauchamp I wanted to be desired and loved—but as Helene St. Aubyn the desire was even greater.

Oh, how I wanted to tell Jim the truth—the whole truth!

But—was he strong enough to stand it yet?

And—would his newly-awakened love not die again?

In the days that followed—so full of contentment and peace—I am ashamed to say that I forgot Alice and her worries.

My love-affair was engrossing all my time. Lovers are selfish beings. And I was no exception to the general rule.

Yet Jim and I did not talk about our love. I'd a queer instinct that the time was not yet ripe for open declaration, on my side. That Jim loved me, I already knew.

He enjoyed having me read to him. He said the sound of my voice was the sweetest. But there! I won't repeat all the folly and nonsense of a lover!

It made his head ache, to read, himself. So I spent hours each day, going through the latest books, in the low, well-modulated tones that my training on the stage had demanded of me.

Every fine afternoon we had a motor-drive. Jim's mother nearly always came with us. We'd have tea in some adorable country inn, far from town. I can close my eyes now, and look back with a glow of sheers happiness, to those long motor-runs.

The scent of lilacs brings back the memory more vividly. Oh, happy days! And so the weeks went on, until one day the doctor pronounced Jim convalescent. The following afternoon his mother, he and I went off to the spring-time countryside, for the final holiday which should completely restore the invalid to health and strength.

I had hoped to have a time of quiet and happiness. I hoped that Jim and I—

But fate is a queer jade, upsetting many a hope and many a plan!

Monday—A Holiday.

SAFETY PIN BREAKS, SKIRT FALLS, STOPS YOUNG GIRL'S ESCAPE

Detroit Police Make Wild Drive to Catch Suspects.

Detroit, June 11.—Breaking of a safety pin that held her skirt up seriously interfered with Thelma Clary when she and Joseph Perrella jumped from a moving automobile at Woodward and Alexander avenues to escape arrest early Monday morning. The young woman's skirt fell down to her ankles, preventing her from running. Perrella evidently was too gallant to make his escape and leave her behind. Donald Walters, alias Don Logan, and Ruth Wilkinson were in the same car. They, too, were arrested. Detectives Fraley, Dresden, Gloshefsky, Trombley, Meyers, Fineberg and Waldfoegel chased the automobile with the two couple through the city streets and alleys for several miles, driving their automobile at 72 miles an hour before they caught up with the car at Woodward and Alexander avenues. Perrella and Miss Clary jumped out of their machine just before the car reached the corner.

Walters gave his age as 23 years, and his address as Windsor. Perrella said he was 24 years old, and lived at 233 Jefferson avenue. They are charged with robbery, armed. The police say Walters is wanted in Chicago on a charge of murder. The Clary and Wilkinson girls said they were 19 years old and live at 530 East Congress street. They are held as police witnesses.

SUES DRUGGIST FOR $25,000. New York, May 25.—James V. Basil of No. 1520 East 15th street, Brooklyn, brought suit in the supreme court of that borough yesterday to recover $25,000 damages from the Louis K. Liggett chain of drug stores, alleging that his year-old son died as a result of products bought at the store at Kings Highway and East 14th street. Mr. Basil complains that alcohol that he bought there, when applied to the boy's face, burned him. The alcohol, he alleges, contained some other ingredient, "apparently carbolic acid." He also charges that after the boy became ill he bought a prescription at the

SAYS HIS FIGURES REFERRED TO ENGLISH AND SCOTCH SOLDIERS

Rev. W. J. Knox Writes Reports Sent Out From Ottawa.

To the Editor of The Advertiser:

Dear Sir,—On my return from the meeting of the General Assembly in Ottawa, my attention was called to a dispatch from that city which appeared in the columns of your paper on Wednesday of this week. One sentence reads as follows: "His (Mr. Knox) pointed out that it had been stated that of the Canadians in the trenches there were 70 per cent that were not affiliated with any church." I stated definitely that these figures had reference to the soldiers of England and Scotland. I stated just as definitely that I did not know the figures regarding the Canadians, because there had been no similar investigation among the Canadian troops.

The information I gave will be found on page 159 of "The Army and Religion," a book which gives the opinion of no one man, but is a conclusion arrived at by a strong committee of 38 prominent men in England and Scotland, a conclusion based upon detailed investigation, sent in by about 300 men of all ranks at the front, who lived in daily contact with the men in the trenches. Let us quote from the book the conclusion arrived at based upon the replies sent in by the men at the front conducting the investigation to the question: "What percentage of the men, would you say, are in vital relationship with any of the churches?" It is safe to say that these figures convey the overwhelming conviction that the very large preponderance of the men in the armies have no really living touch with any church.

About four-fifths of all the numerical estimates made in reply to the above question give 20 per cent and under. These men who conducted this investigation and those who sent in detailed reports were not unsympathetic. The men at the front who conducted the investigation were brothers-in-arms and were eagerly desirous to state the truth. These words do not deal with the religious life of the men. As a rule, they showed evidences of a deeply religious spirit in their cheerfulness, their courage, their sense of duty, their eagerness to serve and their readiness to give their lives for their brethren.

The fact that 70 per cent were not in vital touch with the churches is a reflection on the churches, because of the lack of candor in their teaching, their lack of true brotherhood, their lack of sympathy with those suffering injustice and their indifference to the religious education of the young. (Signed) W. J. KNOX.

ONE GREAT ESSENTIAL TO A WOMAN'S HEALTH IS HER NERVES

Nature intended women to be strong, healthy and happy as the day is long. Instead of being sick and wretched. But how can any woman be healthy and happy when the whole nervous system is unbalanced? The trouble they pay more attention to their social and household duties than they do to their health. Is it any wonder then that they become irritable and nervous, have hot flushes, faint and dizzy spells, smothering and sinking spells, become weak and nervous, and everything in life becomes dark and gloomy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the very remedy that nervous, tired-out, weary women need to restore them to the blessings of good health.

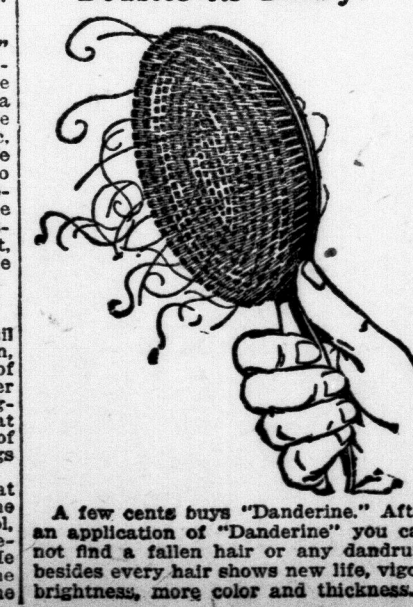

Mrs. P. H. Ryan, Sand Point, N. S., writes: "I have been a great sufferer from nerve troubles. I was so weak and nervous I could not sleep at night and my appetite was very poor. I could not walk across the floor without trembling. I had hot flushes and fainting spells. When I was on my second box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I began to feel better and kept on until I had used six boxes when I felt like a different person. I am never without them in the house and recommend them to all who suffer with their nerves." Price 50c a box at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
