

THE ARGUMENTS THAT BRING TRADE

WRITING Xmas advertisements for our store is about the softest thing that has come the ad man's way for some time.

There are the arguments that you should buy furs as Xmas gifts, then the endless variety of pretty things in the showroom to describe, and last and greater than all the fact that every thing is "Dineen quality"—the unfailing quality in fur that has made our business the largest in Canada.

Don't harbor the idea that you need a lot of money to make a real good purchase. Some articles run as low as $5.00, while for $22.50 you may buy an extra fine Canadian Mink Tie—just as rich and well finished as any larger garments we sell.

Dineen's Furs, both in quality and finish, set the standard for the Dominion. They are moderately priced for quick selling.

TORONTO JUNCTION, Dec. 8.—Crowded congregations attended the opening services to-day in the new Presbyterian Church at the west end, at the corner of Louisa and Murray-streets. The church, which will be known as Runnymede Presbyterian Church, is a handsome, substantial building, the large, extensive windows with large panes, giving it a distinctively old-world appearance, it also having a resemblance to some of the Spanish missions of southern California. The building was presented to the congregation by St. James-square Church, Toronto. Rev. A. Gaudet, minister of the church, preached at 11 a.m. Rev. Dr. Pligerson of Victoria Presbyterian Church, preached at the afternoon service, and Rev. Prof. McFadyen of Knox College in the evening. The missionary in charge is B. B. Weatherall, B. A., a student at Knox College, Toronto. Presbyterians in the west end greatly appreciate the efforts of Rev. "It's Only a Cold, A Trifling Cough."

Thousands have said this when they caught cold. Thousands have neglected to cure the cold. Thousands have filled a Consumptive's grave through neglect. Never neglect a cough or cold. It can have but one result. It leaves the throat or lungs, or both, affected. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the medicine you need. It strikes at the very foundation of all throat or lung complaints, relieving or curing Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Sore Throat, and preventing Pneumonia and Consumption.

It has stood the test for many years, and is now more generally used than ever. It contains all the lung healing virtues of the pine tree combined with Wild Cherry Bark and other potent remedies. It stimulates the weakened bronchial organs, allays irritation and soothes inflammation, soothes and heals the irritated parts, loosens the phlegm and mucus, and aids nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulations. Don't be humbugged into accepting an inferior. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and price 25 cents.

Mrs. C. K. Bismette, Lombardy, Ont., writes: "I have been troubled with a hard dry cough for a long time, especially in the mornings, but after having used Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, for a few weeks, I find my cough has left me. I can positively say that this remedy is well worth a trial."

THE DRUCE CASE CROWDS COURT FOR TENTH TIME

Witness Saw Coffin Made and Then Druce Disappeared—What Fifth Duke Looked Like.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The interest in the Druce case continues to be very keen, and when to-day it came on for a hearing for the tenth time at Marylebone Police Court, the bench was again crowded with fashionable women. A new witness opened the day's evidence. She was Mrs. Caroline Elizabeth Kitchin, and, being 74, made the third of the series of elderly women who have given their reminiscences.

Mrs. Kitchin was, she said, once head housemaid to the Fifth Duke of Portland at Harcourt House. The witness described the duke as a very eccentric gentleman, very peculiar in manner. He was very long featured, had a spare face, rather sunken in at the cheeks, and had short whiskers, sideboards or sideburns, and no beard whatever. He did not like to be met in passages or landings if it could be avoided.

"I used to meet him there sometimes," said the witness, "wearing a cream dressing gown with a hood drawn over his head. He used to carry a feather broom and dust the boxes in his private room. He would never allow me in his bedroom while he was there. He would hand the things out to me through a door."

The celebrated photograph No. 7 was handed up. "Was that like the duke or not?" was asked.

"It is; I recognize him quite well; it's the duke, the I never saw him in such a coat as that, but I know the face."

Apart from the dress there was no difference between the picture and the man. The witness said she had seen the duke in the hair and none in the whiskers. The woman did not know whether the duke had false hair or not for she never saw him without a wig.

Mrs. Kitchin was followed by her husband, who told the court what he saw of the duke at Harcourt House while he was courting his wife, and then his place was taken in the box by Henry Marks of Paddington.

This witness, after describing how T. C. Druce used to come to his father's shop to order fish, went on to tell a curious story of a coffin. He stated his horses at a mews in King-street and the loft of the stable was rented from him by a working cabinet-maker and upholsterer named George Vassar, who went to the bazaar every morning to see if there was any work to do.

"One afternoon," he went on, "toward the end of December, 1884, I went up to the loft and saw Vassar making a coffin. I was surprised, for I had never seen him make one before all the time he was there."

Lowered the Coffin. "That night," continued the witness, "I saw Vassar lower the coffin onto a two-wheel truck, and then he and his man took it directly out of the yard, right into the bazaar, which was immediately opposite, and around to the goods entrance."

Mourning shutters were put up on the shop windows of the bazaar, and on making enquiries the witness was told that Druce had died suddenly during the night.

"When had you last seen T. C. Druce before this?"

"On the day before the coffin was made."

"Did you see him leave the bazaar that day?"

"I did, in a pair horse brougham."

"On the morning after you saw the coffin being made, did you see anything outside the bazaar?"

"Hearse at the Bazaar."

"I saw a hearse and two funeral cars."

riages pulled out of Baker-street Bazaar.

"Did you see anything put into the hearse?"

"I saw the coffin put into the hearse and saw it drive away, followed by two coaches."

Mr. Plowden: The same coffin?

"Yes, the same coffin."

Mr. Jones: You say there were two coaches, not fifty?

"Two coaches."

"Did T. C. Druce ever come into your shop after then to order fish?"

"Never. His son came."

"Which son?"

"Herbert," replied the witness, pointing to the defendant.

In answer to Mr. Avory, the witness said two mourning coaches went away empty. The witness used to see Herbert Druce at the bazaar every day after his father had gone, but he never saw T. C. Druce again, altho he remained in Baker-street until 1890.

Mr. Avory then said: "It can't be true that between 1885 and 1888 Druce was constantly in Baker-street, walking up and down and standing in front of the bazaar?"

"I never saw him."

"Then you must have done so if he had been there?"

"Yes, I was bound to have seen him."

With this admission Mr. Avory was content and the cross-examination of Marks came to an abrupt end.

The case will be resumed on Monday.

The repeat performance of "The Japanese Honeymoon" in Massey Hall on Saturday evening attracted a large audience, and the production proved even more enjoyable than on the first night. The leading honors were awarded to Miss Thekla Gilman, Miss Helen Boileau, Miss Blanche Flick, Miss Pearl Maubille and Miss Birdie Kenny, who all displayed great talent. The Mexican dance was the prettiest number on the program. The whole production reflects great credit on Prof. John Chalmers, the well-known dancing instructor of London, Ont., on whom devolved all the work of training the performers.
