

LAMENT DAYS OF OPEN SALOON

Old Timers in 42nd Street, New York, Recall Times That Were

Take Hard Liquor Now and "Pass Out"—Kid Broad Talks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—"Old timers' hour" at the celebration of 42nd street's 100 anniversary, brought to the Hotel Commodore, not the successful men who have helped to make and have been made by 42nd street, but a bartender who no longer has a bar to tend, a prize-fighter who fought his last ring battle long ago, and a patrolman who, after 35 years in the police department, is a patrolman still.

A vivid contrast between the damp days and wet nights of the nineties, when he was bartender at the old Vanderbilt Hotel, and the prohibition of the present time, was painted by Thomas Donohue, now, he said, a soda dispenser, but for many years an expert mixer and server of concoctions and beverages.

DIFFERENT NOW.
"It's all different now," said the one-time bartender. "It makes me feel terrible to look back to the good old days, but all the joy has gone out of drinking these days. Why, before prohibition, and many long years before it, too, when the bars were all wide open and flourishing, people didn't seem to drink so much hard stuff as they—well—it was different."

"Beer, ale and stout were the most popular drinks. My customers were sociable. They'd drink along and talk along. They told good stories and funny jokes. Oh, it might have been a bit rough in some places, but mostly people just drank for sociability. Good wines and beer lived 'em up and they had a good time. But now, well, from what I've seen and heard, they just get spifflicated and pass out. There's no pleasure in it anymore. It's all different, you see."

PRIZE FIGHTERS VIEWS
And Donohue's very evident depression was echoed by Kid Broad, who once fought, champions and drank, by his own admission, upwards of thirty glasses of beer consecutively. He expressed a contempt for the prize fighters or boxing bouts of today, which, he declared, "are all right for women and children," but were no longer real fights.

"In the old days," said Broad, now nearing the half century mark, "we fought. It was give and take. Today it is all science and very little fighting. What's the good of a promoter? To take your money away from you? The biggest amount I ever received for a fight was $2,000. That was November 18, 1900, when I lost to Terry McGovern. I have fought for as little as $250. In those days I never trained more than two weeks. We old fighters frequented 42nd street a lot. There were plenty of saloons along the street then and there were plenty of fighters hanging around them."

The old patrolman, who was dressed in the gray helmet and long, blue coat with a low collar, worn by "rounds-men" in other days, made no speech and had little to say to interviewers who tried to question him.

C.N.R. Employee Loses Home Near Moncton

MONCTON, Oct. 4.—Fire at 4 o'clock this morning completely destroyed the two-story building owned and occupied by John Russell, C. N. R. baggage-master at Newton Heights, a few hundred yards west of the city boundary. The first floor of the building was used for a grocery store conducted by Mrs. Russell and the second storey was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Russell as a residence. All the grocery stock, furnishings and furniture, in the store and residence were lost. The fire originated in the kitchen upstairs. Mr. Russell was awakened by the smoke, in time for the family to escape in safety. The flames had made such headway that it was impossible to save the building. The loss on the building is estimated at $5,000, on furniture $1,000 and on groceries, $2,000.

The loss on building and stock is partially covered by insurance, but the furniture is a total loss.

Under the title of Les Jolies, the idea will be a reality tonight, when it will open in cabaret form in Regent street. There is a space of 5,000 square feet on which dancers can enjoy themselves.

It is thought there are many who are tired of dining in the room in which they dance, as well as paying 35s. a bottle for champagne, so there will be only light refreshments.

38,173 RETURN FROM U.S. IN YEAR

American Figures of 2,217 Challenged by Federal Department

Immigration Officials Declare They Have Names of All Those Coming Back.

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Figures attributed to the United States Department of Labor in a press despatch to the effect that only 2,217 Canadians returned to Canada from the United States during the last fiscal year are sharply challenged by the Department of Immigration here.

"It is evident that the figures quoted in the despatch from Washington attempt to give both immigration and emigration," say department officials. "It is possible for the United States to check emigration via ocean ports, but it is not possible for the United States Government with its present machinery to check emigration across the international boundary."

CANADIAN FIGURES GIVEN.

"The department knows that United States inspectors do not examine or record people entering Canada from the United States. Our own figures are the only reliable statistics on this point and they show the following results for the last United States fiscal year. In that period the Canadian-born citizens who returned to Canada after a residence of six months or over in the United States declaring their intention of remaining permanently in this country were as follows:

July, 1924, 4,426; August, 4,023; September, 2,932; October, 2,844; November, 2,614; December, 2,618; January, 1,395; February, 1,641; March, 2,220; April, 2,599; May, 2,722; June, 2,514; July, 32,668. If to these are added the naturalized Canadians and British subjects who have acquired Canadian domicile, the total Canadians returning during the twelve months of the American fiscal year is 38,173 instead of 2,217 as stated in the despatch from Washington."

Create Paper Panels and Make Your Walls Beam a Kindly Welcome

UNDECORATED walls are unlovely and should be decorated. Most walls in modern homes run right up to a sharp angle with the ceiling or to a plain, straight cornice. In decorating such walls the aim should be to minimize these abrupt transitions. Bandings, or borders, to suit the wallpaper used will best do this. STAUNTON Semi-Trimmed Wallpapers have bandings for each design.

Panels to suit the style and proportions of any room can be made with these paper "mouldings". Around windows and doorways, borders make softly definite boundaries to the wallpaper and set off its beauty of design, color and texture. Original ways of adding friendliness and charm by
