

STOMACH LIVER LUNGS

Each of the chief organs of the body is a link in the chain of life which may snap at any time. Often this so-called "weakness" is caused by lack of nutrition, the result of weakness or disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases and weakness of the stomach and its allied organs are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the weak or diseased stomach is cured, diseases of other organs which seem remote from the stomach but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, are cured also.

The strong man has a strong stomach. Take the above recommendation "Diseases of the stomach and its allied organs" and you may have a strong stomach and a strong body.

GIVEN AWAY.—Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Advice, new revised Edition, is sent free on receipt of stamps to the expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

OPERA HOUSE AMUSEMENTS FOR OURSELVES AND OTHERS THE NICKEL. The Nickel's programme for today, it is said, contains some fine samples of the photographer's art. The Selig production, dealing with prairie life when Indians were ugly, is a living portrayal of scenes in those old days. This picture is called "The Indian Raiders," the Biograph drama, "The Usurer," is one of those strong stories of business life in the hands of capable actors and actresses. The scenes in Toulon Harbor, France, with glimpses of the great French Mediterranean fleet, is a treat in travel pictures. There are comedies and extra films for the afternoon. Today the clever MacBrady Children—Helen and Leah—will sing two more of their dainty little numbers: Dolly Lee and The Girl That Stuttered and the Boy That Lapsed. Mr. Myers is to render the late novelty, It's the Same Old Me But Not the Same Old Girl. This is believed to be a very fine bill indeed, one of the best of the season, and now that the exhibition is over, a great rush may ensue.

SPORT NEWS OF A DAY; HOME AND ABROAD

More Star Baseball. Brookline, Mass., Sept. 14.—A new amateur golf champion is disclosed in the eight players who survived a double round of the Country Club's 9,683 yard course today.

Walter J. Travis, of Garden City, recently known as "The Old Man" and three times title winner of the United States Golf Association, packed up his clubs on the 15th green today, where John C. Anderson, of the Woodland Golf Club and a former Massachusetts champion, eliminated him by score of 5 up and 3 to play, after a match which Travis was eager to enter into. "There were too many traps on the course for my game," said Travis as he tossed the butt of an old cigar into the grass. "There were too many traps on the course for my game," said Travis as he tossed the butt of an old cigar into the grass.

The other seven honors of the day rested with H. Wilder, of the Vesper; W. C. Fowles, Jr., of Oakmont; Frederick Herreshoff, of Ekwanoko; Charles Evans, Jr., of Edgewater; Warren K. Wood, of Homewood; H. Weber, of Inverness; and W. R. Tuckerman, of Stockbridge.

Baseball. The Record for Nine Innings. The record time for a baseball game made at Atlantic City on September 24, 1904, when the Atlantic and Shreveport teams, of the Southern League, played a full nine inning game in 44 minutes, establishing a world's record.

On September 19, 1894 the Dayton and Ironport teams played at Dayton. It took 47 minutes to complete the game. A contest between Oakland and San Francisco at San Francisco, September 9, 1893, was played in the same length of time. Los Angeles and Oakland played a double-header in record time on July 20, 1905. The first game was played in 47 1/2 minutes and the second game in 51 minutes; total for two full games one hour and 32 1/2 minutes, less than the average time it takes to play a game today.

WOMEN IN MEN'S CLOTHES

Cases of Feminine Masqueraders Recalled by the Crippen Case

(Kansas City Star) How many women are there masquerading as men in your locality? Maybe the question is not so foolish as it looks. For before suffragettes came to trouble the world women often found ways to gain equality with men.

There was "Harry Lloyd" for instance who has just died on the outskirts of London; the mystery of this woman, who for over 25 years worked and lived as a man, has aroused tremendous interest. So well did she carry her masculine clothes that nobody suspected her secret.

When a doctor was called to the house in Alma Road, Edinboro, on the northern eastern fringe of the metropolis, to attend to "Harry Lloyd" in his final moments, he presently came down stairs and said to Miss Lloyd, who believed herself to be the daughter:—"Yes, it is I," he replied, "that is my father. The girl who abused me to hear that the dead body upstairs was that of a woman."

Enquiries established the fact that the woman's real name was Marie Le Roy, the daughter of a French officer, whose widow resided in Brussels some time about 1872. Well educated and full of the joys of life, the little French woman used to attend the Hall of Science in Old Street in the days when Robert Ingersoll, Charles Bradlaugh and Austin Holyoke, his publisher, lectured there. Why this well-educated woman cut herself off from all her friends and lived the latter half of her life as a man is a mystery which she has carried to the grave with her. Probably, however, it was due to a wish to protect the good name of the girl who believed her to be her father.

This theory has recalled similar acts of devotion disclosed from time to time in the life histories of other women who have posed as men. More often, however, women have adopted men's attire through sheer love of adventure and a dislike of the limitations and restraints imposed on their own sex. Of this the most notable example was the famous Mme. Velasquez who took so active a part in the war between the North and the South. She organized a company of recruits, and to the surprise of her husband, who was an officer in the Confederate army, she one day presented herself before him in camp, led by him in the extraordinary position of having to accept his own wife as lieutenant.

Soon after she joined him, however, he was killed by the accidental discharge of a carbine. Mme. Velasquez had many exciting adventures in the war. She fought through the Battle of Bull Run, and was badly wounded at the fall of Ft. Donelson. After giving up service as a soldier she acted as a spy for the Confederates, and when the war was nearing its end she took a hand in blockade running.

In keeping with her adventurous nature, she married three times, and had three children, but the cares of motherhood did not appear to have induced her to settle down for in later life she made a miners' camp as a man, and joined the London and Edinburgh. At the beginning of her masculine career she went to great pains to conceal her form, and had made for her hair a wig of fine wire mesh, which she wore next the skin. Over these she wore an undershirt of silk or linen, which fitted closely, and was held in place by straps across the chest and shoulders. These undershirts could be rolled up into the small compartments of the pockets of the pants. The undershirts were a band with eyelid holes, arranged for the purpose of making up the proper number of inches.

HOW TO JOIN CANADA'S NAVY

Regulations for Entry of Naval Cadets Just Issued

(Montreal Herald) Now, boys, who want to join the Canadian navy? Who wants to wear the navy blue uniform, scarcely ever seen in this country, such as is worn by the little Prince Edward of Wales and his brother, in the charming pictures of Royalty so familiar to every one?

Who wants to scamper up the side of a battleship and touch his cap with a "Come aboard, sir," to a grizzled, stern-faced superior officer, or shriek command:—"Look sharp!" to a hard-working bunch of jolly tars.

Regulations for the Entry of Naval Cadets, just issued by the department of Naval Service in Canada, tells the lad how it can be brought about. Of course, the age limit is all-important. "Cadets must be between the ages of 14 and 18 years on January 1, immediately following date of examination." Thus sternly reads this regulation, to the consternation of the excited lad who is scarcely 15 years of age. The naval training is most thorough, and none except those captured young can be trained up to meet the requirements of the law.

Physical Requirements. Turning to the physical requirements, nothing is said as to height. Nor are the general requirements exceptionally severe. Any healthy boy, free from extraordinary weakness or chronic disease or serious disorder either external or internal, is apparently qualified to try for a naval cadet's position. Handsome, rugged and well-toned must be without distortion, malformation or blemishes. The veins, especially of the legs must not be in various states. Impairments of eye, ear, nose and throat, serious enough to be known as "diseases," will bar the candidate. Also, any prospective naval cadet who is fat must start to work in the manner of professional pugilists in training, and get the rolls of flesh that stand between him and His Majesty's navy, for obesity is against regulations, at least until you get to be an admiral.

Naval cadets will spend two years in training at the Naval College, for entry to which competitive examinations will be held annually in November at the examination centres of the Civil Service Commission, all papers being set and corrected by the Civil Service Commission. Compulsory subjects are Arithmetic, Mathematics, Geography, History, English, and French or German. Optional subjects are Latin, Elementary Science, Drawing, or a second modern language. Candidates will be allowed to take two of the optional subjects, and the marks obtained on the two optional subjects applied, will be added to the total obtained on the compulsory subjects in determining the order of merit of candidates. The examination will be conducted in English or French, as desired. Candidates must of course be British subjects and must have resided in Canada five years previous to examination. Absences in Europe for educational purposes being taken as residence.

Parents must withdraw cards if for any reason they are asked to do so by an official request. Parents or guardians are also required to declare that, if the candidate wins a cadetship, he shall adopt the Navy as his profession in life.

What it Costs. Father, who has taken a casual interest in all this so far, will now lean forward in his chair and prick up his ears. We will learn what it costs. Each cadet must pay an annual fee of $100 in advance. In addition, he will be required to pay a further sum of $300, for his first year, and $150 for the second year. To cover necessary expenses, including uniform clothing and boots, books, instruments, stationery, drawing material, wash, personal linen, church fittings, pocket money, recreation fund, etc. Board will be given each cadet free of expense, along with the use of the necessary furniture, bedding, plate, etc.

In the language of the street, there will be "some class" to these cadets for each one on joining, must bring with him no less than six white shirts with stiff fronts and cuffs, twelve collars, six pairs of blue socks, a pair of Oxford patent leather shoes, and other such articles of like nature which His Majesty's navy wear with dignity when the time comes for a dress parade. The cadet will not wear civilian clothes except during the vacation. He gets one month at Christmas and two months in the summer. . . . and parents or guardians must pay all his travelling expenses. The great coat, sea chest, monkey jacket, and other such things which will go to make him into a handsome old sea dog, according to Robert Louis Stevenson's idea, will be furnished by the government.

Women and Work

(Exchange) Lord Aberdeen, speaking in England, referred to what he called "the added and increasing demands upon women by the great transition going on regarding the sphere and work of women. He added: "I once heard of the father of a large family—all daughters—whose means were rather circumscribed, as is often the case with military men. Some friends suggested that the daughters might do something. "They do a great deal," said their father; "look at all these brooches that do nothing but hang round the neck of a lady. It was pointed out to him that doing something meant in the way of earning a living, whereupon he at once indignantly replied: "My daughters are the daughters of a gentleman." That state of mind has received several rule-shocks lately. Times have changed, and our daughters and their position have changed with them. There is the more reason that we should spend thoughtful care in fitting them for the wider outlook which is opening before them."
