ANOTHER COMMITTEE

The city council yesterday discharged one investigating committee and appointed another. There is always an investigating committee. Also, it never investigates. Apparently the members of the council desire a certain amount of pleasure from the mere formality of discharging one committee and appointing another. The one which went out of existence yesterday, after an existence so peaceful as not to raise a ripple on the surface of civic life, was appointed to investigate the board of works. Everybody knows that the affairs of the board of works are not well conducted. For proof it is only necessary to refer to the streets. But the committee lumbered for its allotted time and passed away without the slightest attempt to investigate. Now there is another committee, to investigate market affairs. There was a committee for the same purpose months ago, but it did nothing. Matters have reached such a stage in connection with the market that some enquiry must be made. But will the committee go further and enquire into matters not so ostentatiously thrust under its nose, yet which are openly talked about in the market and elsewhere? It has the power to summon witnesses and ask them questions. Will it do so, or will it do as little as possible, and pass on to join the long list of civic investigating committees that failed to investigate? If everything about the market is as it should be, the evidence, in justice to all, should be brought out and given to the public. If unjust criticism has been offered, let it be exposed. Let the facts be brought out, without fear or favor.

SIR WILFRID'S ATTITUDE

The St. John Standard is still laboring to convince itself that Mr. Borden is a better imperialist than Sir Wilfrid Laurier, because Mr. Borden rejoices in the victory of the separatist in Drummond-Arthurs, to whom Sir Wilfrid was opposed. The Standard may succeed in convincing itself, but not the intelligent public. Touching the result of the by-election in Ottawa, Sir Wilfrid said:—

"The Government has received a blow, of course, but it should not be exaggerated. I feel very much like Abraham Lincoln did on the occasion of just such a reverse. He was asked by a friend what he thought of it, just as you ask now. Lincoln replied, 'I feel like the little boy who hurt his toe—too sore to laugh and too big to cry.' The charge that Laurier has been 'hoist by his own petard' is untrue. Laurier has never used his influence with French-Canadians against English-Canadians or even done anything but try to prevent racial prejudice in Canada."

PEACE DISTURBERS

Nothing could be more harmful to the social well-being of a community than an attempt to play upon religious prejudice. Those who make the attempt, in this age and in this country, exert an evil influence. Usually they are political partisans and not persons concerned about the souls of their neighbors. Religious differences there are and must be, so long as human nature is constituted as at present. In all ages and in all creeds, men have not hesitated to suffer if need be for their religious faith. But today there is no ground for quarrel or for persecution. Occasionally a fanatic of this or that faith hurls a broadside at an imaginary enemy of human welfare, and gets as fierce a broadside in return—and nobody is hurt. It is only when designing persons with a definite aim, in no way connected with religion, to serve, artfully proceed to fan the embers of prejudice into flame that the matter assumes a serious aspect. It may be a Bourassa in Quebec, or a man of quite different views in another province—the effect is much the same. Thoughtful men, who realize how great mischief may be done in a community or in a province by appeals to racial or religious prejudice, cannot but regret the pernicious activity of partisans who would watch a temporary success at the cost of an ill-feeling that would rankle for years. The present is a time for cool heads and wise counsels in Canada.

WINTER PLAY PLACES

Philadelphia, which has conducted summer playgrounds with great success, now proposes to establish centres for winter play. A Philadelphia paper says it is proposed to equip the basements of schools in various sections of the city with the apparatus now in use in the plots devoted to this purpose and give less fortunate children places where they may amuse themselves and be shielded from the temptations the streets offer. The plan seems to be entirely practicable.

Commenting on this movement an exchange says:—

"So popular have these playgrounds become, and so much practical good has been an evident factor of their existence that there is now a strong popular opinion favoring both the establishing of several more summer playgrounds, but also the evolution of the summer playground into the indoor winter one. By means of these winter play places, it is expected that, in addition to their obvious and physical benefits, they will permit a continuity in the unobtrusive supervision which hitherto could only be maintained over the children in summer, and by thus avoiding the placing of the children back upon the streets to seek amusement, much good work that formerly was interrupted is now permitted a steady progress."

INTENSIVE FARMING

In every Canadian province the question of improved methods of farming is attracting more and more attention. There is profit in good farming, and yet the tendency to desert the farm has not been overcome. Conditions must be improved, better roads must be provided, and better methods of agriculture more widely taught. Referring to the general subject of conservation, the Victoria Colonist makes this particular and proper statement relative to the farm:—

"One of the greatest needs of Canada today is the full utilization of all the areas that have been prepared for cultivation, and a more intensive system of farming. At a time when the labor problem is serious, it seems as if it would be good policy for farmers to reduce the acreage under cultivation and cultivate what is left more thoroughly. If this were done it is very probable that better results would be obtained for the expenditure of less labor, and the reduced size of each holding would make possible an increase in the number of farms. The problem of the most advantageous use of cultivable land is one that calls for very serious consideration. Especially is this true of those parts of Canada which are not prairie-like in character. This is an aspect of the conservation question that cannot be pressed upon the consideration of the community too frequently or too forcibly."

Col. Roosevelt will be more of a dictator, or a sadder and wiser man when the results of today's elections in New York state are announced.

Mr. Borden prefers Bourassa to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. That is the true measure of Mr. Borden's imperialism.

One of the most hopeful signs of the times in St. John is the activity of the real estate. There is an increased interest not only in the city but in Lancaster and on the east side of Courtney Bay.

The city council should scrutinize very carefully every proposal brought before it in connection with city lands. Every facility should be given for genuine development, and speculative propositions should be made the subject of careful enquiry.

WAVE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS. Infantile paralysis is most common in early childhood, with the exception of the year. The greatest number of cases occur in the third and fourth years. This disease appears from three days to a month after exposure, usually before the tenth day. For many years it was impossible to say definitely where the seat of infantile paralysis was located. However, today, with all the auxiliaries of modern technique, and a careful study of the blood vessels which supply the spinal cord, we have positive proof that the disease is an inflammation of the gray matter in part of the spinal cord, and in the small blood vessels leading to this area.

The early symptoms of this disease, in many cases, are characterized by the child complaining of headache, listlessness, weakness of the limbs and loss of appetite. This condition is followed by fever (from 101 to 103 degrees Fahrenheit), distress in stomach and intestines and vomiting. The fever lasts from one to four days. In other more severe cases, the disease begins early with fever, followed by marked disturbance in the brain, accompanied by spasms or convulsions. Another uncommon type is where a child will go to bed apparently in perfect health and awaken in the morning paralyzed in one or more of its limbs. The symptom of the second stage is paralysis itself. Generally speaking it is rather extensive. In many cases, all four limbs are involved, and some times the muscles of the nape of the neck. In other cases, the paralysis involves only a group of muscles of one or both legs. The extent of the immediate damage from the paralysis is usually complete within a few hours, although it may extend over a period of three or four days. In a week or ten days, some improvement begins, and this continues usually until only a small degree of paralysis remains.—Samuel G. Tracy, M. D., in The Christian Herald.

NO MORE DISTRESS FROM STOMACH OR ANY INDIGESTION

Heartburn, Gas, Headache and
Other Misery is Ended By Taking a Little Dapepsin

If your meals don't fit comfortably or you feel bloated after eating, and you believe it is the food which fills you; if what little you eat lies like a lump of lead on your stomach; if there is difficulty in breathing after eating, eructations of sour, undigested food and acid, heartburn, brash or a belching of gas, you can make up your mind that you need something to stop food fermentation and cure indigestion.

To make every life of food you eat fit in the nourishment and strength of your body, you must rid your stomach of poisonous, excessive acid and stomach gas, which sours your entire meal—interferes with digestion and causes so many sufferers of Dyspepsia, indigestion, flatulence, Bilelessness, Constipation, etc., etc.

Your case is no different—you have a stomach sufferer though you may call by some other name, such as "Acid Stomach," "Flatulent Stomach," "Gastritis," or by any other name—always remember that a certain cure is waiting for you. Dapepsin will regulate and out-of-order Stomach within five minutes, and digest promptly, without any food or discomfort, all of any kind of food you eat.

THE WIFE SPEAKS

Not all those women you have loved and left,
O, my Beloved, can stir my jealousy;
Not the light loves which you forgot for me,
For my heart's fingers made by life most deft,
Have mended all the rents their arrows cleft,
And from their old enchantments set you free.
But one is my despair, and only she—
The one who loved you, hopeless and bereft.

How can I give as much, who hold your heart,
As she, unloved, who gave with scorn of gain?
So do the angels; at her name I smart,
And feel sword-burner's barbs which give the pain.
For fair exchange, I cannot heal the wound,
As to lay salt between the rows. Never been known to fail?
Helen Hay Whitney.

THE SAFER WAY
Instead of saving money, prepare for a rainy day by getting an umbrella.

WOODENWARE
With lumber prices where they are, and climbing constantly, it is not surprising that one cannot blame the man who sells his ancient family tree.

INSALTING

"It's the insects," complained the suburban gardener, "they destroy all my radishes; and try as I may, I can't exterminate them."

"Best remedy I know," said the friend, "is to lay salt between the rows. Never been known to fail?"

"Yes," replied the gardener, tears once again in his eyes, "and the next morning when I went to look the little beggars were pulling up my radishes dipping them in the salt, and devouring them by the dozen."

THE USE OF ARMS.

These arms of mine aren't very strong,
Not built for doing feats of strength
Or lifting burdens all day long
But when I hold them out at length
And into them with shouts of glee
A youngster comes with all her charms,
And has a kiss or two for me
I've found the purpose of my arms.

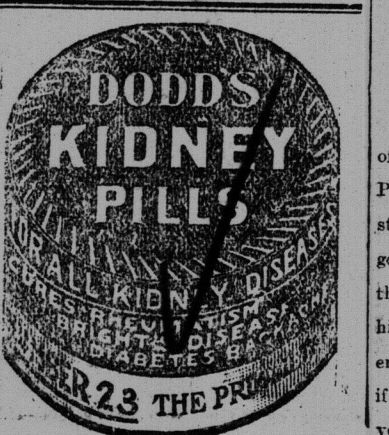

They're strong enough to hug a child,
To lift one of my shoulders, too,
And at the thought, I've often smiled,
That is enough for arms to do
So long as to be selling them
Will lift a youngster now and then
Who comes to me to romp in play,
I envy not the strength of men.

THE ARTFUL SPORTSMAN.

(Life.)
A gentleman who had the reputation of being a bad shot invited some of his friends to dine with him. Before dinner he showed them a target painted on the barn door with a bullet in the bull's eye. He said he had shot this at a distance of 300 yards.

During the dinner one of the guests asked him how he managed to fire such an excellent shot.

"Well," said he, "I shot the bullet at the door at a distance of 300 yards, and then I painted the target around it."
