HANDLE IT WISELY.

Alfred Dan Dulock would purify Sheffield street. It is a laudable ambition, but the wisdom of such a course is open to question, and many who have in the past seriously considered this problem will be inclined to differ with the idealism as to the advisability of his plan. There is no question that Sheffield street is a disgrace to St. John, sticking up like a boil on an otherwise healthy body. But after all it may be better to have the impurity concentrated in one boil, than to have pimples breaking out all over that body. Sheffield street is at present under the surveillance of the police. The creatures who live there are morally the lowest in the city, and they will remain so wherever they may live. If the district is to be regenerated, the people must first be reformed.

Some eight or nine years ago there was a purity movement in this city which resulted in the closing of a number of houses of ill fame. The persons who conducted these dens promptly moved outside the city limits and are there to this day. They receive even larger patronage than when they were in the city, but has the change been of benefit to St. John? The houses are beyond police control and on many occasions incidents have occurred "out the road" which would never have been possible had the houses remained where they could be watched. More than this, in a seaport town like St. John there is always a floating population of irresponsible immoral men, and the very presence of such people creates a demand for vice. Thus it has followed that in place of the houses of ill fame which formerly existed in the city, there have sprung up numerous smaller dens of iniquity, places which the police have the greatest difficulty in suppressing, and which have led to the downfall of many women. It is nice to imagine that the closing of the houses in St. John in 1898-99 purified the city, but those who are in a position to know, hold very different opinions.

The result in dealing with Sheffield street will be the same. Drive these people from their present hovels and they will scatter about the town, locate in all sections and soon get almost beyond control of the police. They can be watched on Sheffield street, but it would be a more difficult matter to handle them were they distributed from Indiantown to the Marsh Bridge. Theoretically Sheffield street can be wiped out. A general raid would close up all the houses, but these people cannot be kept in jail indefinitely. Imprisonment is no punishment to them, and does not result in any good. When released they will only scatter and give far more trouble than they do at present. It is a pity that such a place as Sheffield street exists, but it is better that vice should be kept under some sort of control than be allowed to spread itself to all parts of the city. As an instance of how a plan of reformation works out one only needs to look at the matter of beer selling. The beer licenses on Sheffield street created a lot of beer shops, and the business was simply a screen to vice. The places, being licensed, were kept within bounds by the police. Now the licenses have been cancelled, the selling goes on just the same, as it always will, and there is no way of controlling the shops as they are beyond the regulations.

ADVICE NOT FOLLOWED.

Speaking in Toronto a few evenings ago, Hon. R. L. Borden gave the following advice to workers of the Conservative party:

"See that all Conservative elections are fought cleanly and honestly. And let that not be enough. See that the Liberals have to do the same. If we can bring about the holding of clean elections in Canada, the abolition of bribery and the consequent of ballot switchers and forgers to the penitentiary, the Conservative party will work as great an advantage to the country as it did during the glorious years between 1867 and 1896."

And while Mr. Borden was haranguing on clean elections his followers in East Elgin were circulating slanders concerning the Liberal candidate of such a vile nature that to protect his personal reputation he was forced to withdraw from the contest. Evidently Mr. Borden winked when he spoke of else the mud-slingers of the Conservative party can very little for what he tells them.

Members of the common council, it is reported, are considering the advisability of securing the dredge H. B. Bothfield. This dredge worked here ten years ago and was then ten years old. If a purchase must be made, let the dredge be one that is not liable to collapse through age.

WOULDN'T IT BE A SHOCKING THING IF

THE OLD HOME.

Within these walls, a spirit wakes and cries,
Viewing the present with pain-stricken eyes,
Ah! spirit of my childhood stay with me,
And let me live the happy past with thee.

Blest were the hours wherein with thee I trod,
So far from ill; so near—so near to God,
And knew not evil. Life was free from care,
Protected by a father's arm, a father's prayer.

Now wan and weary, freighted with strange fear,
I seek thy spirit for sweet solace here,
And kneel whatever grief to God confessed,
Will reach His mercy through the child I miss.

—May Austin Low.

IN ANOTHER PARCEL.

"What have you got in that package?" asked the attendant at the great public museum.

"Bananas," answered the boy. "Dozens of 'em. Want one?"

"No, and you can't bring them in here."

"Why not?"

"It's against the rules. But you can check the package at the window and get it when you come out."

"Cost anything to check it?"

"Five cents."

The boy said he wouldn't pay it, and he left them away."

"I guess I can go in now, all right," he said.

"Hold on. Have you got those bananas concealed about you?"

"Yes, sir; all but the skins. I hid them away."

And there was a grin of triumph on his face as he went through the turnstile.

COULD NOT SEE IT ALL.

Captain Dugge, of the Hamburg-American liner Prinz Oskar stood by the rail as his handsome boat neared Gibraltar.

The day was fine and the sea blue and sparkling, and a pure, cool wind was blowing.

"How beautiful the sea is," said Captain Dugge. "Did you ever witness the wonder of this sea who sees the sea for the first time?"

"Once I saw two peasants in such circumstances," he said.

"Amazons! Who would have thought there could be so much water as that?"

"Yes," said the other. "And remember, 'Fris,' you only see what is on top."

TRUE COURAGE.

"Huh! What do you know about war? Did you ever hurt yourself into the 'imminent, deadly breach,' or 'seek the bubble reputation, even in the cannon's mouth'?"

"Well, not exactly. Not to any noticeable extent. But I have taken home unexpected company to dinner."

HIS INTERPRETATION.
Katherine—As you say you understand the language of the flowers, what does this bunch of American Beauty roses say?

Kidder—"That a fool and his money is soon parted."

BAD FLOUR.
"I want to complain of the flour you sent me the other day," said Mrs. Newliwed, severely.

"What was the matter with it, madam?" asked the grocer.

"It was tough. My husband simply wouldn't eat the biscuits I made with it."

MUM'S THE WORD.

The philanthropic visitor with the large, benevolent-looking face had secured permission to address the inmates of the jail.

"Come, Mike," said Bill the burglar, "do get wide de swell front is goin' to make a speech."

"Make us peach!" exclaimed Mike the stockup man. "I'd like to see de guy wot kin do dat!"

THE MILLIONAIRE'S REVENGE

Exposition of the Murder of Stanford White by Harry Thaw Staged in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 24.—"The Millionaire's Revenge," an exposition of the murder of Stanford White by Harry Thaw, was witnessed at the Bijou Theatre Thursday night by Frank Ridgeway, director of the Department of Safety, and Chief of Police McQuade, who occupied a box. It was suggested that they had been appealed to by the Thaw family to arise the performance, but Director Ridgeway yesterday said the play looked to him as though it had been created for the purpose of making public sympathy for Thaw.

"As such it is a failure, so far as intelligent people are concerned," said Ridgeway. "The idea of posing Harry Thaw on the stage or anywhere as a protector of young girls is too absurd to be accepted by any one familiar with his escapades."

The Madison Square Garden tragedy and the troubles which led up to it are portrayed with thinly veiled names, such as Harold Davies for Harry Thaw, Emmeline Hudspeath for Florence Evelyn Nesbit, Stanford Black instead of Stanford White, and Mrs. William Dawes, mother of the stage hero. Throughout the melodrama the sentence, "The unwritten law will prevail," is repeated.

WOMEN IN A PRIZE FIGHT.

They Were Always Squabbling, So Their Husbands Arranged a Bout Which Ended in Confusion.

BRAZIL, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Cora McKenna and Mrs. Sarah Foster had been quarrelling and nagging each other for many weeks, and several times have appeared in court charged with each other with assault and battery. The husbands, grown weary of the quarrel, last night agreed at last to let the women to a field nearby and let them fight to a finish.

It was arranged that they should engage in a straight stand-up knock-out bout according to the rules of the prize-fight. They dressed for the contest and for many rounds adhered to the rules, but finally they got angry and the affair ended in a rough and tumble scrimmage, and the husbands participated.

Mrs. Foster dealt the blow that put her antagonist down and out. The latter's husband then, seeing his wife with a black eye, struck Mrs. Foster a fearful blow. All parties were arrested and put under bond to appear when the women's wounds are healed.

John Seaton Becoming Separated From His Friends Had a Lonesome Time

John Seaton, A. D. Staples, William Johnston and Harry Wilson left on Wednesday last on a hunting expedition in the vicinity of St. Martins.

On Thursday the party divided their forces and went in different directions. Mr. Seaton found that he was lost in the woods. He had two biscuits with him and these went but a short way toward overcoming his hunger.

He fired a number of cartridges in the hope of attracting the attention of the other members of the party, but in vain, and when it became dark he lay down under a tree. When he awoke it was seven o'clock on Friday morning.

He looked about him and found the tracks of two moose. The animals had been lying all night about ten feet from him. Mr. Seaton started to walk and in a short time came upon wagon tracks, which led him into civilization and back to his comrades.

WORK OF CANADIANS

IN UNITED STATES

Prominent Leaders in Railway, Shipping, Banking and Building Circles.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—

There are about fifteen hundred thousand Canadians in the United States—or nearly three millions, if we count those of Canadian descent. So far as our immigration bureau is concerned, Canada is practically the forty-sixth state of the union. Whatever barriers now remain along the boundary are erected only against the commodities of commerce, not against the men and women of either country. Of all the peoples of the world, the Canadians are the only ones who are permitted to enter the United States unchallenged. At the magic word, "Native Canadian," all our doors fly open and all our doorkeepers step aside.

At our own favorite game of business, the Canadians take away big prizes with remarkable frequency. Every American railroad has its crop of Canadians in places of responsibility. James J. Hill laid the solid foundations of his towering career in Ontario. His parents were Irish, but he himself knew no country except Canada until he was sixteen years old.

What Hill has done for himself and for the United States sounds like a tale of Rome in its heroic days. When President Pierce was in the White House, young Hill was unloading freight on a Red River boat. Today, the master of six thousand miles of railway, and of as much iron ore as would keep the Steel Trust busy for twenty years or longer.

Two lesser leaders in the railroad world—Alfred Sully, of New Jersey and Nicholas Monsarrat, of Ohio—got their first childhood impressions of railways in Canada. The late Samuel R. Callaway, too, who was for years the president of the New York Central, took his earliest lessons in railroading on the Canadian Grand Trunk. In part payment of our debt to Canada for railway men, we have given her Sir William C. Van Horne, whose name is so inseparably connected with the Canadian Pacific, and Charles M. Hays, of the Grand Trunk.

In shipping, as well as in railroading, the Canadians have been conspicuous. Their power as yachtsmen is known in every American city on the Great Lakes. The founder of the Canadian line—whose son, Sir Edward Cunard, lived for thirty years in New York—began life as the son of a poor mechanic in Nova Scotia. Among living shipbuilders, the one who stands most centrally in the limelight is Wallace Downey, whose firm built a famous yacht for the German Emperor; and who is now in Denver, enjoying the autumn of a fruitful life.

At the head of the Fuller Construction Company, which holds a world-wide reputation as the champion builder of skyscrapers, is Henry St. Francis Black, who was born and educated in the little college town of Coburg, in Ontario. The Flatiron building, by the way, stands as the most imposing monument to the skill of this company.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 24.—The rifle team of the Queen's Westminster Volunteers, who will shoot against a team from the 7th Regiment New York National Guards at Creedmoor, L. I., October 3 and 4, yesterday paid a wreath of English oak and laurel entwined with the Union Jack on the tomb of General Grant on Riverside Drive. With the wreath was this inscription:

"To the memory of General Ulysses Grant, rifleman, patriot statesman, from the Queen's Westminster Volunteers of His Britannic Majesty Edward VII. the peacekeeper. Let there be peace. There is peace between all the Anglo-Saxon races; May it endure forever."

In the international match at Creedmoor the 7th Regiment hopes to regain the Sir Howard Vincent challenge shield, which it lost to the Englishmen last year by a narrow margin.

Capt. Montagu Shuttles is in command of the British team.

WALTER WELLMAN

IS BACK IN PARIS

PARIS, Sept. 25.—Walter Wellman, leader of the Wellman-Chicago Record-Herald Arctic expedition, arrived here last evening from the north. He will remain here several weeks to superintend the reconstruction of his ship which will contain important and new features.
