The Spectacle

The Calgary papers, especially The Herald and The Albertan, have been having the time of their lives in the election just passed. It has been suggested that the old millennium sign of the lamb lying down with the lion, be changed, owing to modern exigencies, to read "The Albertan with The Herald." For my hopes for the millennium I hope this is not necessary, or that great day is hopelessly far off.

The Albertan, which looks for mayor, and The Herald, which looks for the help. Just one contradiction in the two papers get to hair pulling and scratching. One would think that the hopes of both candidates depended upon the discrediting of the paper that supported the other.

The Albertan said some nasty things about Ald. White, who had resigned a commission, and that man took a fit. In the fit he wrote The Herald, which published the letter. Here are parts of it. "The Police Letter Writer," a new edition of which will now have to be issued:

"To the editor of The Herald: On looking over The Albertan I find an article which for brass, falsehood even beats the usual lying efforts of that dirty rag. It is one of those lies from start to finish: the vile traducer of honest men, whose reputation and sense of honor and integrity is so far above the standard of the writer of the article in question that it is impossible for the small-souled, narrow-minded scoundrel to realize even the meaning of common decency. He writes under cover of a yellow rag. He must either do that, or be branded as the white-livered hound that he is, and where he belongs. But as he, (Cameroon) was not of the calibre of the aspirant for full honors that wrote the article he refused to hold shown up in its real light, taking a new look and is going after the Albertan for printing the Eye-Opener. This always seems to be the last resort of the political scoundrel who is not of sufficient interest to the sort of the public to make such an exposure. Now that are the little whitey for kind of a 'White Sepulchre' is made."

the reason that he realized that his own services were not worth at any time anywhere over $500 for four months. As for the balance of the article there is nothing more to be said. The only conclusion is that the writer of this letter is in a state of insensibility that The Albertan's pet candidate is wont to indulge in at times. Now all he has to do is to put up or shut up.

H. W. White.

The Albertan came back with a scorching and White wrote to The Herald again: "I notice on reading the so-called editorial of The Albertan that my letter has drawn the skunk, and all the answer he can make to my challenge for the time of lies which he caused to be printed on Friday, is to abuse me. He has shown himself to be utterly without principles, as he acknowledges now that all his statements in Friday's issue were false and only used to cover up the deficiencies of his own candidate and slander his opponent. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for allowing me to use the space of your valuable paper to reply to the odorous gentleman of The Albertan, I am yours,

H. W. White.

The Herald then has a few spicy things to say about its friend, The Albertan:

"The Albertan, a Liberal paper published in this city, being collected of fact two ways on the subject of fact, is unable to prove its inconsistency and worse than false tactics of calling one of its contemporaries had names. The Albertan has been betrayed by its political friends for money. There is not an honest Liberal in Alberta who does not distrust it, knowing by experience its sordid character. There are other incidents, equally disreputable, which can be made public, concerning its much spotted career."

To this The Albertan says, in part: "The Calgary Herald having been fed with the code of journalistic honor which permits it to make car- toons and print bitter personal attacks concerning its own political friends. The morals of The Albertan are not of sufficient interest to the sort of the public to make such an exposure. Now that are the little whitey for kind of a 'White Sepulchre' is made."

motives that can dictate the policy of a newspaper.

And one of those papers one-time made some remarks upon a mild little scrap the two papers in this city had at one time.

Bank Boys Banquet.

The banking friends of Mr. Field, late of the Union Bank, who has been transferred to the branch at Lethbridge, met on Wednesday night, on the eve of his departure, to give him a send-off. A banquet was held at the Albertan hotel, at which the following sat down: Messrs. Field, Gordon, Shaw, Harris, O'Dell, Martin, McLeod, Dunham, Bragg, Han- sen, Strong and Wilson.

After the banquet, his Union Bank colleagues presented Mr. Field with a fine case of pipes.

While Mr. Field is going to a large branch, his friends here will be sorry to lose him.

The Canadian Pacific has decided to operate in connection with eastern ex- pressors, this year a solid vestibule train made up of newest equipment, consisting of first class sleepers and day coaches, dining car and splendidly furnished tourist cars. This train will be known as the Christmas Special and will leave Winnipeg Dec. 10, 12, 14, 17, 19 and 21 at 22.45, run- ning through to Toronto without change.
