MERCERIZED COTTON.

JOBBERS IN COTTON SELLING MORE SILK THAN THE SILK MEN.

All the Material that Sith Stirt Waists are Made of Comes from Conton-It is Steadfly Supplanting Silk+Nine-leuths of the Wilk Shirt Waists are Mercerized Cotton

A jobber in cotton goods remarked to a New York silk merchant not long since that he was selling more silk goods than the silk merchant was. "How is that?" asked the latter, suspecting a joke. "Why, I am selling all of the material that silk shirt waists are made of," replied the jobber, smiling significantly. "Don't you comprehend the inroads that mercerized cottons are making late your trade? The process of mercerizing, or 'silkithing,' cotton cloth has reached such a stage of perfection in Europe that Germany, Switzerland and even France are sending to this country enormous' quantities of cotton goods that few persons can distinguish from silk. Nine-tenths of all of the women's silk shirt waists made here recently have been made of mercerized cotton.

The jobber spoke the truth, as the records of the United States appraiser's office in New York will testify. Within the past year the importation of mercerized cotton has increased to a very large extent. In various ways this class of goods is steadily supplanting silk, and it wears even better than some of the grades of silk that it supplants, there is a steady growth in the demand for it. For shirtings, certain grades of linings, umbrella covers and upholstery goods the mercerized cottons are fast usurping the field formerly held by sik alone. It is cheaper than silk and the duty on it is about 15 per cent. less. Some of the pieces of mercerized silk dress goods that have lately come to this country would readily be mistaken for genuine silk. It has the lustre and sheen, and dry goods men say that the mercerized goods will last longer than the silk. Mercerized cotton yarn is declared by experts in the appraiser's office to be twenty-five per cent. stronger than the unmercerized varn. The color in the warp of these mercerized goods is imparted by an insoluble and inextractable coloring matter inherent in the fibre; the physical construction of the fibre is changed by the action of caustic soda. Mercerizing machines have been put in operation all over Europe, and the probability is that these goods will drive out of the market entirely some of the cheaper grades of silks. Although the duties on mercerized cottons are considerably less than the duties on silks goods, it is the opinion of observant customs officers that the Government will not be a loser because of this extraordinary growth in the demand for mercerized goods. There are certain novelties which are mercerized, now coming into market in large quantities, which would not have been imported for the success of the mercerizing process. The diminution of the silk importations will not be sufficient, though it may be considerable, to counteract d revenues afforded by the larger importations of mercerized cot-

The mercerized goods are even invading the realm of woolens and of velvets. Mercerized fabrics in imitation of both woolens and velvets have made their appearance. Only a few weeks ago a unique importation of dress goods from Germany was made here. The goods were of cotton but made in imitation of worsted with rich silk stripes. On close examination it was found that the "silk stripes," were also cotton, mercerized. Scarcely week passes now-a-days that something new in the way of mercerized goods does not come before the public.

The Chaparro tree of the United States of Columbia is credited with a phenomenal endurance of fire, The tree-botanically known as Phopsala obvata-grows to a height of fifteen to twenty feet, and its distorted trunk measures from nine to twelve inches in diameter. In Tolima where other trees are nearly all destroyed by the persistent burning of the savannahs and hills for renewing pasturage, the Chaparro not only resists the fire but seems actually to seek it. In the lower hills, reduced to sterility by the incessant burnings, hundreds of square miles are covered by growths of these little trees, which are as regular in arrangement as in a carefully culti-vated plantation. The resistance of the tree is due to the structure of the bark, of which the outer portion, to the depth of half an inch is of pecular composition and serves no vital function.

A Robin's Costly Nest.

Mrs. George A. Sammis, of Huntington. L. I., placed three pieces of rare old lace on the lawn beside her residence, one morning recenty, to bleach. Each was more than a half yard in ength and of medium width. In about two hours they were missing. It was thought that some person, knowing their value, had stolen them. Later, the servant girl remembered that she saw a bird fly past the window with something fluttering from its beak. Investigation in the direction the bird was flying soon revealed the laces. A robin had worked them up into material for the most comfortable nest imaginable. They were recovered somewhat damaged.

Montreal, Nov. 26 .- "Sir John A. Macdonald never cared a button whe-Macdonaid never cared a outron was-ther the Provincial Governments were against him or not, and perhaps it would be better if they were against us, for then we would not have to give them so much."

This statement is alleged to have been made by the Hon. J. Israel Tarte, while discussing the probable result of the Manitoba election with a friend It appears to be pretty plain that the Ottawa Government have thrown up the sponge, and admit the probability of a Conservative triumph in the Prairie Province. Some of the Liber-als in touch with the Ottawa Ministers claim, however, that the Govern ment will be sustained, but they admit that three of the Cabinet Ministers will be defeated.

Then the question of a general elec-tion for Ottawa crops up again. A geutleman who is a brother of a French Liberal M. ## BARN

He had it Painted a Nice Bright Red.

And Then his Neighbor, Bob White' Sent a Big Missourian Found to Whitewash it.

"No more intrepid man ever lived on the plains of western Kansas than Bob Wright." says one of our exchanges, But, nevertheless and notwithstanding, there was once a time when Bob Wright showed the white feather, and the story may be worth relating.

Along in the early seventies Mose Waters, who later ran the post sutler's store at Fort Riley, was conducting a saloon at Dodge City, and Bob Wright had a store in the same block. Mos will be remembered by old timers at Hays City, Dodge City and Junction City, as a redheaded Irishman who would fight at the drop of the hat. While Dodge City Mose became interested in fast horses, and to house his trotters properly he had built on the lot in the rear of his saloon a big barn, the most imposing structure of the town, and this barn was painted the most brilliant red that ever was. This was the situation when one morning a big, two fisted Mis-sourian applied to Bob Wright for a job. "Can you whitewash?" asked Bob.

"Reckon I kin," replied the Missourian.
"See that big barn over there?" continued Bob. "Well, I want that barn whitewashed. I had it painted red, but somehow I den't appear to like the color now, and I want you to make her white from top to bottom."

The Missourian was duly equipped with a brush and big bucket of white-wash and was starting to his work, when Bob said:

"By the way, there is a crazy fool in this town that has got it into his head that he owns that barn. If he comes around interfering, you just chase him off the premises. "All right, boss," responded the Missourian. "If that lunatic monkeys around here he'll wish he hadn't."

This was in the early morning, and soon the Missourian was slathering whitewash over that beautifunl red barn in a manner most ghastly to behold. About 10 o'clock Mose Waters, who slept in the back end of his saloon, was awakened by his bartender, who pointed out to him the work of devastation proceeding in the back yard. In his stockings and trousers and with but one suspender over his shoulder Mose bounded into the yard, shouting: "Here, you blankety, blank --! What are you doing to that barn?" "Go away, lunatic," calmly responded the Missourian as he stood on his ladder and slapped great gobs of whitewash on the beautiful red cornice. "This is Mr. Bob Wright's barn, and he told me to chase yer off ef yer came pesterin about yere. Don't git gay, er yer mought git

"Bob Wright's barn, is it, you blank-ety, blank idiot! Well, I'll just kill you first and then settle with Mr. Bob aftershouted Mose as he seized the ward." bottom of the ladder and commenced to twist it away from the building. About the second twist the big Missourian seized his bucket of whitewash and poured the whole contents over Mose's head and shoulders and then slid down the ladder to the ground, where the two mixed in one of the prettiest fights the town had ever seen. But the Missourian was too much for Mose, and pretty soon he had the redheaded Irishman on the ground with two black eyes and a bleeding nose. Then the crowd which had gathered compelled him to let Mose up, and with a howl of rage that much abused man started for his room and his six shooters.

It is needless to recount the subsequent proceedings. Ten minutes later Bob Wright was mounted on a swift horse en route for Fort Dodge, some five miles away, where he was proprietor of the sutler store. From this point of vantage he opened negotiations with Mose. In the course of a week, as the anger of Mose subsided and his eyes began to lose lose their dark rims, the humor of the situation began to dawn upon him, and at last he consented to an armistice which enabled Böb to return to town. -Kansas City Journal.

EPPS'S COCOA LIGHTS.

An Occasion when the Old Ranch man saw the Trick Done Novel way of "Dousing the Glim" much in Vogue In the West in the Frontier Days.

"According to western stories," said a former ranchman, "one of the favorite amusements of frontier desperadoes is 'shooting out the lights.' I never saw it done but once, but the incident made sufficient impression on my mind to last me for life. It was at Benton, a small camp on the old 'Stake Plain' trail, in northeastern New Mexico. I was staying there over night with a couple of cattlemen, and we naturally gravitated to the only resort in town, a sort of combination of bar and gambling house, in a rough one story building, containing a good sized single room. "The bar was on one side, and on the other were two or three 'Mexican monte' tables, over each of which were several large coal oil lamps in wall brackets. In the center of the place was a chandeller containing three more, altogether giving a good deal of light. We were sitting at one side smoking and talking, when in rushed half a dozen drunken cowboys, headed by a well known ranchman named Bill Wells.

"The crowd were out for excitement and didn't care how they got it. They took several drinks and then clustered around one of the monte tables. In a few moments Wells insisted upon making a bet over the limit, to which the dealer objected. 'If you don't turn for that bet, I'll shoot out your blankety blank lights! bawled the ranchman 'The leemit ez feety dollar,' said the Mexican dealer, and the words were no sooner out of his mouth than Wells and his gang pulled their six shooters and began blazing away at the lamps.

"About 25 or 30 shots were fired, and almost at the outset the place was in complete darkness. Of course there was a stampede, but I remember being surprised that I had heard so crash of glass. Half an hour later I went back and found the place lit up as brightly as ever, Wells and his cowboys having been taken away by friends. The roof was full of holes, but not a single lamp had been hit What had put them out was the concussion of the shots in a confined space." - New Orleans Times-Demo crat.
