Sleepy Grass of New Mexico

While making a trip through the southwestern part of New Mexico Herbert W. Wolcott, of Alamogordo, N. M., found a grass from which he believes a narcotic may be extracted which will take the place of those now known to medicine.

medicine.

"The grass is known as 'sleepy grass' to the natives of New Mexico, near the Apache reservation," said Mr. Wolcott. "Cattle and horses will eat it the first time they see it. It makes them fall to the ground in their tracks and lie in a state of coma for two days When.

to the ground in their tracks and lie in a state of coma for two days. When they wake up they have no ill effects from the opiate. But they will never eat it again; in fact they will run away if it is offered to them.

"This sleep grass is not to be confused with the loco weed. The grass is a real grass, not unlike the Kentucky blue grass in appearance. The loco weed is a plant and bears a flower. Horses and cattle become loco fiends and are worthless after tasting the deadly stuff."—From the Kansas City Star.

Wolves of Northwest Canada.

Wolves of Northwest Canada.

"Northwestern Canada still is full of big game," said Louis Raymond, of Montreal. "In Alberta and other provinces the woods are full of moose and timber wolves.

"I have seen moose killed in that country that were as large as a big horse, with a spread of horns more than seven feet. A wounded moose can travel all day at a breakneck pace, and when cornered will fearlessly charge the hunter.

Origin of the Side Saddle. This history of the side saddle is shrouded in mystery, but it seems toler-ably certain that side saddles were used by ladies in England in the days of the Saxon.

It is recorded by Stow in 1720 that side saddles were invented by Anne of Bohemia, Queen of Richards II., who was born in 1266; but on a seal of Joan Countess of Flanders, and dated 1211, that lady is represented as riding in this manner, showing they were in use 150 years before the birth of Anne.—Bit and Spur.

DEPOSED SHAH DID NOT SEE

To Leave Persia and His Son Downcast at the Prospect.

Tried to Run Away and Then Attempted to Commit Suicide.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 12.—A special despatch received here from Teheran says that Mohammed Ali, the deposed Shah of Persia, will leave the country Aug. 17th, and that the young Shah, who is his favorite son, is downcast at the prospect of a separation from his parents. According to reports current in Teheran the youthful ruler recently made an unsuccessful attempt at flight and when he was frustrated in this he tried to commit suicide. The government is considering the possibility of his abdication in favor of some one else.

Many complications face the new government of Persia. Several of the Nomad tribes, as well as the cities of Shiraz and Kashgar, have refused to recognize it. A brother of the deposed Shah, Salar Ed Dowleh, is marching on Teheran at the head of a Kurdish tribe from Luristan province. 17th, and that the young Shah, who is

BACK TO THE MORGAN HORSE. Attempts Being Made to Revive the Famous Vermont Breed.

Within the last few years a serious attempt has been made both by the Government and by individual breaders to revive the almost extinct Mose gan strain of horses. Seventy-five, years ago this horse stood second to a mone in popularity, but the strain degenerated through various causes until it became almost forgotten.

Some horse lovers there were, however, who had not forgotten the Morgan's fame and who believed the Morgan's fame and who believed the Morgan to be the finest and most distinctive type of horse America had produced, not excepting the less sturdy trotter. According to Country Life in America, they hope to bring the Morgan back to his former preeminence and to breed a modern Morgan that the horse of the horse

THE KILLING.

Denies That He Saw Sutton Shot, as Teld In Interview at Boston.

Sutton Was Overbearing and a Bluffer, Says Former Messmate.

Gunshot Expert Doesn't Believe Sutton Could Have Shot Himself.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 11.-To-morrow or Friday will see the end of the Sutton The list of witnesses was practically exhausted to-day, but there may be one or two more. Then will see the court will adjourn to prepare its findings and reports for transmission to the Navy Department.

The man who was thought to be an important witness turned out to be somewhat of a failure to-day. This was Sergt. Todd, who was corporal of the guard at the marine barracks here the night Sutton died. Before he left Boston for Annapolis yesterday Todd talked to a newspaper reporter. On the stand to-day he denied in a most sweeping fashion the interview attributed to him. He was quoted as saying that he saw Sutton shot, that Sutton was running away from somebody at the time. To-day he said he did not see the killing.

He admitted that he had told the reporter that he had heard shots and had seen someone running, but denied flatly that he had distinguished one of the figures as that of Sutton. somewhat of a failure to-day. This was porter that he had heard shots and had seen someone running, but denied flatly that he had distinguished one of the figures as that of Sutton.

Aecording to Todd's story he was corporal of the guard the night of Sutton's death. He testified that shortly after I o'clock on the night of Sutton's death Lieut. Adams and Osterman came to the guard room. Adams asked him to give them pistols, saying there had been trouble in the camp and that the pistols wanted for self-defence. Todd referred the officers to the sergeant of the guard, who had the key to the drawer in which the revolvers were locked. They went away.

A little later the witness swore he heard two shots and saw a man who wore a white shirt running. Witness heard a command to halt given, followed by the statement, "You are under arrest." Then in a few minutes witness heard two more shots. He awakened the sergeant of the guard. A little later, according to the witness, Lieut. Roelker came to the guard room where the witness was and said, "My God, Archie, I have been shot."

Still later, according to the witness, Lieut. Adams came in and said he had been shot in the hand. Further than these-Todd would not go.

Another mystery was cleared up to-day when Lieut. Allen M. Sumner, of the midshipmen corps, who was brought up from Norfolk, Va., to testify, told the story of the card which had been supposed duelling code in vogue in the marine corps.

Sumner said that the card was written in Washington ahout a year before he and Sutton entered the marine corps. They were at school together and came down town one night. Sutton got drunk and challenged Sumner to a duel.

Later Sutton calmed down and suggested that both write apologies.

"Sutton dictated the sentences that appeared on that card," Sumner told the court.

"He wrote the same thing as I did, and we exchanged cards. I threw mine away the next day and thought no more about it. Sutton evidently kept his."

Sumner was quite frank in his criticism of Sutton's character. He gaid he considered him untruthful and ures as that of Sutton.

COULD NOT HAVE SHOT HIMSELF.

A gruesome feature was this afternoon intunduced in the proceedings of the Sutton court of inquiry, when the legal representative of Mrs. Sutton brought to the witness stand Dr. Edward M. Schnefer, of Washington, an expert on gunshot wounds. The people in the room crowded round the table and gazed with keenest interest at the doctor while he placed on the table skulls, to the exterior of which he affixed, in little lumps of wax, steel rods intended to indicate to the members of the court the course of, the bullet in the skull of Lieut, Sutton.
Lieut, Adams had given a dramatic Lieut. Adams had given illustration of the position Sutton when the fatal shot Sutton when the fatal shot was fired. The doctor was equally dramatic as he stretched himself upon the table and showed, by pantimine, how, in his opinion, it was quite impossible that Lieut. Sutton could ever have fired into his own head the shot that put an end to his life.
