On the Habit of Irritability.

By RUTH CAMERON.

If you were naming the seven deadly sins which one would you put first? If deadly means deadly to the happiness of others, the habit of irritability would head my list.

A woman wants me to help her out. Her husband is a good provider, thoroughly temperate, absolutely honest, and the most irritable man the Lord ever made. Peace flies up the chimney the minute he enters the door. He finds fault with someone or something almost every moment of the time he is in the house. And even when he is not actually making himself disagreeable, his housemates are under nervous tension for fear he is about to break out. His children will not stay in an otherwise pleasant home because he makes the atmosphere so unpleasant. A little corroborative note from the eldest daughter makes it plain that the mother herself is not to blame for these conditions, but is being worn out in the effort to act as a buffer between the father's irritability and the children's resentment.

Will I write something, they both beg, that will bring the father to his senses and make him realize that he is making hatred grow where love and good cheer might be.

Letter friends, I'd rather be able to write something that would wake up people like that than a wonderful poem or a great novel. For when I think of the misery and grief that seem to have to be in this world, and then think of the tremendous added weight of wretchedness that the people who indulge in the habit of irritability thrust upon their housemates, I burn with an indignation that is almost physically painful.

"Lord keep me from the self-indulgence of irritability." That is a prayer that everyone of use who is tempted (and who is not?) ought to say night and morning and twenty times in between if it is necessary.

I believe that as many homes are made wretched by the men and women, especially men, who indulge in irritability, as by those who indulge in strong drink.

Some of these people are well meaning and in their way love those whom they make miserable. After having vented their irritability they come around and become pleasant and complacent enough, and they think that makes the score clean. Save the mark! As if by being pleasant for an hour or two at the end of the day they could bring back all the precious hours that were saddened and spoiled by their irritability.

If there is any system of future punishment I believe that the man who has murdered a home will be held as culpable as he who has murdered a man. We have no right to take life, but have we any more right to take away the peace and happiness that make life worth living?

Of course no one becomes one of these happiness killers in a day. They are the product of years of yielding to the indulgence of irritability. Day after day the habit grows until the relief of temper venting becomes as much a necessity as any other drug. And as great a crime.

POULTRY SHOW.

OPENED BY H. E. THE GOVERNOR.

The annual Poultry Exhibition, the third and probably the best of its kind yet held, under the auspices of the Nfld. Poultry Association, was formally opened by His Excellency Sir W. E. Davidson, at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Prince's Rink. Among those present were Lady Davidson and children, Rt. Hon. Sir E. P. Morris, Sir W. H. and Lady Horwood, His Lordship Bishop Jones, Hon. George Knowlton, Hon. W. C. and Mrs. Job, Hon. J. R. Bennett, Rev. Mr. White-mash, Hon. S. D. Blandford, Captain Eli Dewe, Hon. M. P. Cashin, Hon. J. Harris, W. G. and Mrs. Gosling, Mr. H. W. and Mrs. LeMessurier, Mr. R. G. and Mrs. Reid and Mr. J. L. Slatery.

At the appointed hour His Excellency arrived at the Rink. He was met by Mr. G. W. Gushue and Mr. J. Calver, the President and Secretary respectively. The Governor made a brief speech in which he pointed out the possibilities of Agriculture, emphasizing the great value and advantages of poultry raising. He was a firm believer in the development of our smaller industries because, he said, they were the backbone of every country. His Excellency remarked that he had just had a brief conversation with Professor Henry, the Judge, who informed him that the show was a first rate one, the class of birds, he continued, were excellent and on the whole the exhibits were such as we should feel proud of as they would do credit to more pretentious towns. His Excellency hoped that the example set and the interest taken in poultry raising here would be followed by people in other sections of the country and then expressed the great pleasure it gave him to declare the exhibition open. His Excellency's remarks were received with much enthusiasm. The remainder of the afternoon was spent by the Governor and Lady Davidson in inspecting the poultry and they were greatly pleased with the various exhibits. An evidence of Lady Davidson's warm desire to stimulate interest in poultry raising is the fact that she offered a special prize for the best exhibit in Orpington Buff class. A feature of the show is the splendid selection of White and Brown eggs displayed in the centre of the building. There are more exhibits and more classes of birds represented than in previous years. During the afternoon and night, a large concourse of people visited the Rink, but the attendance should be even larger, as it is partly in aid of the Patriotic Fund. Prof. Henry, who has acted as judge in many Canadian points, speaks highly of the show and the way it was arranged by the Committee. Up to last night the following awards were made by Judge Henry:

Doctors and Gas Fires

In an article which recently appeared in the London "Evening News," Mr. W. G. Faulkner stated: "In making my inquiries I discovered one significant fact. This was that one company—the Gas Light and Coke Company—had among their consumers 2,500 doctors who had gas fires installed in their houses, some as many as ten or a dozen; that 1,500 of these doctors had become users of gas during the past three years; and that not one had ever given them up."

Professor C. V. Boys, F.R.S., says, in the "Standard": "Sentiment and inertia are the only obstacles against the general adoption of gas fires and cooking appliances. Wonderful strides have been made, in spite of deep-rooted prejudice. A gas fire, burning with a blue, is an admirable agent for heating a room; and, as a scientist, I fail to understand how such a gas fire dries the air in a room more than any other fire."—Nov 17, 1914.

GERMAN TRANSPORT INTERNED.

SANTIAGO, Chili, Nov. 19.

The German steamer Karnak was to-day declared by Chilean authorities to be an auxiliary transport. She was at once notified that she must remain anchored in the harbor of Antofagasta until the end of the war.

More Fires.

Fires provoke immediate sympathy for the sufferer and also thankfulness for personal escape. Another thought should be whether one is personally and sufficiently protected? An insurance policy with Percis Johnson would provide for you this desired security at small expense. Have you enough insurance?
