The Habit of Talk.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

There are some marks of the true lover of talk. They do not reveal themselves to each other. They do not seek to learn anything about each other's views. Often neither listen to the other. They simply talk for the joy of talking, of keeping their jaws moving and their ears filled with the sound of their own voices.

Almost Everyone Talks to Sales-people.

Another trick of the victim of the talk habit is his volubility to people who serve him in one capacity or another and who cannot get away from him. The feminine talker talks to her maid or her washerwoman. The masculine talks to the newsboy, the waiter at the restaurant, the conductor, etc. Both sexes talk to sales-people. I often pity these people for the amount of uninteresting talk they have to listen to. The exhilaration of buying loosens tongues not naturally loose, and when you add the naturally loose to those, heaven help the sales-folks. Just yesterday I overheard a woman who had been buying something saying to the salesman, "Yes, I've always loved that color ever since I was a kiddie." Now what on earth did he care about that?

A good dish of intelligent talk is one of the most delightful things in the world.

But a continual dribble of thoughtless talk is the opposite.

As someone has well put it: "Wise men talk because they have something to say; fools because they would like to say something."

This is to certify that I have used MINARD'S LINIMENT in my family for years, and consider it the best liniment on the market. I have found it excellent for horse flesh.

He begins with the weather—that blessed standby of all who have the habit of talk—and soon he glides smoothly into allied subjects. If his seat companion is someone who does not care for talk he is either brutal or bored, according to his temperament. But if the seat mate also has the habit of talk (and there are sufficient of this brotherhood to make a meeting very likely) the talk rambles on through the course of their journey. Scarcely, if ever, do they

New Military Truck is at Home in Water.

Amphibious automobiles are not altogether unfamiliar contrivances, but land-and-water motor trucks designed primarily for military purposes are far from usual. Such a machine has been developed, and the October number of Popular Mechanics Magazine contains photographs and a description of it. There is reason to believe that it will in time see the battle fields of France. It has behaved well in recent tests and inspired considerable confidence in the minds of those who have seen it perform. While carrying a dozen passengers, the car has been driven into rivers and lakes and cruised the same as a motor boat. For scouting parties and others operating in advance of an army, it is thought that the car should prove immensely useful, especially in view of the fact that the enemy in retreating, never leaves bridges standing.

Household Notes.

If you have trouble with the milk curdling when you put it on to boil, try adding a pinch of bicarbonate of soda to each quart of milk before putting it on the stove.

To make a cat stay in a new home, rub its forepaws with butter, a proceeding that is said to destroy the scent of the old home. This is an old English custom.

No meal need be "balanced" but the three meals of each day should be—that is, should have one part protein, three parts fat, and six parts carbohydrates.

A new method of removing ink stains on linen is as follows: Cut a ripe tomato in half and rub the ink stain vigorously with the tomato. The stain will disappear when the linen is washed.

Waistcoats of white tique are fashionable. They are especially good with black serge frocks. The drooping hat of creamy leg-horn never goes out of favor for garden party and bridesmaids wear.

Two Brothers Sentenced To-day for Attempted Burglary.

Albert Linegar and his brother William, aged 21 and 17 years respectively, who were caught in the act of attempting to burglarize the grocery store of Mr. T. J. Edens on Duckworth Street, were sentenced to-day by Judge Morris.

On the night of August 7th last they left their homes on the Backmarsh Road filled up with the unconsidered and foolish idea of committing crime, in the nature of theft. For the carrying out of their plans they had provided themselves with tools of various kinds and in fact had equipment to meet any emergency. Thinking the eastern section of the town the safest operating grounds they first visited the premises of Mr. Edens and began to force an entrance through a door at the rear of the store. They were boring holes through the door with two instruments when suddenly they heard footsteps. They were those of street watchman Skiffington, who was making his rounds. But the burglars took no chances and fled quickly leaving their attempt behind, as they intended to return to finish their task or finish themselves, which they did. Shortly after they returned and operated more noiselessly and were working overtime in endeavouring to make an aperture large enough to permit their entering the store when Watchman Skiffington again hove in sight and this time unfortunately for the burglars, who tried to make a getaway. One of them succeeded, the younger fellow, but Skiffington held on to the other fellow like a leech until assistance came from the police. After this prisoner was locked up the younger Linegar unwittingly called at the police station enquiring about his brother, and he too was taken into custody.

The following day both prisoners were remanded and to-day were arraigned before Judge Morris, having elected to be tried summarily, waiting the option of going before the Supreme Court. Mr. F. J. Summers, K.C., Deputy Minister of Justice, represented the prosecution, and Mr. W. J. Higgins, on behalf of the accused, pleaded guilty and pointed out some extenuating circumstances for mitigation of punishment. He said it was the first offence of the accused, who were of respectable parentage and did not have to steal, but that it was a crazy notion got into their heads to get money to fit up motor boat. The learned counsel also stated that the younger brother had been the victim of the other, although an accessory in the crime, and particularly pleaded for leniency in his case. The Judge intimated that all the circumstances of the case were made known to him at the preliminary inquiry and he was aware that the crimes, though serious, were not done with wilful malice. After taking everything into consideration he sentenced the eldest one to six months imprisonment with hard labor, and the younger brother to three months without hard labor, the term to begin from the date of his arrest.
