IN THE TOILS; But Happiness Comes at Last.

CHAPTER XXI.
HAPPINESS AT LAST.

"I fear for Adrienne," he said. "A barrier seems to have come between us!" He moved to the door as he spoke. "The earl," he said; "shall I tell him, after what has occurred?"

Katrine nodded.

"Yes," she said gravely.

"You are right," he said. "There shall be no more concealment in this home."

It was a hard and bitter task, and Charlie quailed a little as he stood before the door of the earl's apartment. It was not of himself that he thought, but of the old man's pride in Olive; of his pride and his love. They were now to receive a deadly wound. A little further down the corridor was Olive's room. He walked down to it and hesitated wistfully, but he feared to go to her; he was like a man stumbling in the dark.

He turned back and knocked at the earl's sitting room.

"Come in," answered the earl's voice, and Charlie opened the door.

For a moment he stood, speechless. The earl was sitting in his old armchair, with his arm round Olive, who was kneeling at his feet with her face hidden in her hands.

At Charlie's entrance the earl raised his face; it was white and working, and the proud gray eyes were softened with tears.

As he saw his son, he put his hand on the head bowed upon his knee, as if to soothe—or protect her—it were difficult to say which; but Olive, looking up, shrank closer to him and away from her husband, trembling like a leaf.

The earl put up his white hand. "No need," he said; "I know all. She has told me. It was her duty, and she has done it."

Charlie looked at the trembling figure, so beautiful in its abundance of remorse and repentance, and he held out his arms.

"Adrienne," he said, with emotion,

"why do you shrink from me—why not come to me?"

She sobbed, and looked at him with great, loving eyes.

"I am not worthy," she cried, with a great sob. "I have deceived and shamed you—I am not worthy."

"All that is past and forgiven," he pleaded.

She looked up from him to the proud, haughty face of the old man—appealingly, entreatingly—as if her fate hung up on his decision.

He put his hand upon her arm softly, and said:

"Go to your husband, my child."

The next moment she was sobbing upon her husband's breast.

"Have I heard this, and that, and the other?" said Fitzgerald impatiently, as he lay back in the smoking room of his club. "Of course I have, and so has all the rest of the world. What does it matter whether Lady Heatherdene's maiden name was Mary Jones or Jenny Brown? She is the most beautiful woman—the most courted, the most popular woman in society; and that is answer enough to all the silly, baseless rumors that were ever circulated by people who have no brains for better work. And what's this about Hastley Derrick?"

He continued; "what mystery is there about it? He has an apoplectic or paralytic fit, and leaves England for the benefit of his health. Now, what on earth is there to chatter about in that? What!—he and Lady Heatherdene were very thick? Of course they were. Isn't any one of us glad to be seen with her? Doesn't it cover us with glory and honor for weeks after to be seen by her side? And is there any one who can say she makes any distinction? Why, she'll sit and talk for half an hour with you, even!" he added, with great contempt, to the young gentleman who had been hinting that there was some mystery in the Heatherdene family.

"And what's this about Katrine Haldine?"

"She is married," said some one; "I know that as a fact."

"So do I," retorted Fitz, "because I saw her husband die three nights ago. I stood by his bedside with her, and therefore, I know that he is dead. And suppose that she didn't care to proclaim her marriage to the world; that's her business. I don't think she has asked any one to marry her. It seems to me as if the world concerned itself a great deal more in Katrine Haldine's affairs than she does in the world's. No; there are two women that we know whom scandal and calumny can never injure, and they are Lady Heatherdene and Katrine Haldine. And why?" he demanded. The Honorable Fitz taking his cigar from his mouth and looking round. "Because goodness and purity are written on their faces, and shine forth in their lives. They are above calumny."

And Fitz was right.

The past, terrible as it was, casts no shadow upon the lives of Charlie and Olive Heatherdene and Katrine Haldine.

Their happiness springs from a source which the world at large cannot assail: a heart of pure, unselfish love.

THE END.

A Terrible Disclosure;
OR,
What Fools Men Are!

CHAPTER I.

He looked down for a moment; then raised his eyes and met her gaze steadily.

"I am afraid not," he said, with a sigh. "I do not know that any one could help me."

"And yet—do you not remember the fable of the lion and the mouse—the mouse who nibbled the strands of the net and so gave liberty to the lion who had once given life to the mouse; I wish I could be your mouse."

His heart beat. Something within him whispered strongly, "Do not tell her!" and yet he craved so for her sympathy.

moist and sympathetic—if they were not!—with gentle pressure of the white hand upon his, with soft, murmured expressions of surprise and pity! His heart seemed to go out of him. He did not notice that, as half forgetting that he had a listener, he spoke of his love, his passionate love, for Lela, Edith Drayton's face grew paler, or, if he noticed it, he ascribed it to her intense interest; he did not remark the gradual tightening of the beautifully curved lips, the intense pressure of the white fingers on the fan; he could not hear her heart as it throbbed with the wild rage and passion of an imprisoned and tortured animal. He knew—guessed nothing of this; he saw before him only a beautiful woman whose tender heart was moved by the story of his unhappiness and doubt and fear, and so he told the story to the end.

And when he had finished she put out her hand and let it rest on his arm. From the other end of the room they could see nothing of this.

"I am so—so sorry!" she whispered, "and I am so glad you have told me! But you must not be cast down! You will be sure to find her, and—and all will end happily."

He caught at the consolation as a drowning man clutches at a straw.

"You are very good to me!" he said, and his strong voice trembled.

"You have been very good to me in confiding in me, and proving that I did not presume when I said that you would let me be your friend."

"I feel that you are a true friend!" he said. "I—he paused—"I have never had a woman, a beautiful woman—you are not offended?"

She smiled faintly and shook her head.

"A woman for a friend. It will comfort me during these hours of suspense to remember that I have told you! I am very grateful, very!" and in his impetuous way he held out his hand.

Her own white, soft one closed over it, and held it.

"Tell me!" she said. "You say that she is very beautiful? What makes us all, the weakest and the strongest of us, take a delight in torturing ourselves? What I have almost forgotten what she was like. She is very beautiful!"

"Very; I think she is the loveliest creature I have ever seen," he answered, manlike, thoughtlessly, blunderingly.

Her eyelids drooped.

(To be continued.)

HOW THE TROUBLE STARTS

If more people knew how Rheumatism and kindred ills started there would be infinitely less suffering.

It should be a matter of popular knowledge that the blood stream completes the circulation of the body in approximately three minutes, gathering up waste matters. It is the function of the Kidneys to remove these impurities or poisons from the blood and eliminate them from the body. Should there be any derangement of the Kidney action the poisons are not eliminated but are carried around again in the blood stream, to accumulate slowly and occasion sickness and distress. Then follow pains in the back, in the region of the Kidneys, Rheumatism, constant headaches, and the many complaints arising from derangements of the Kidneys or Bladder. First, the Kidneys must be put in order and until these organs are healed and regulated no real health is possible. Gin Pills contain the medicinal and tonic properties that the Kidneys require.

You can get Gin Pills at all dealers—50c a box or 6 boxes for $2.50, or a sample will be sent free upon request to the National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto, or to the U.S. address, 202 Main St., Buffalo, N.Y. 142

HAIG SAYS "NO RETIREMENT!"

LONDON, April 12.

Field Marshal Haig, in a special order of the day addressed to all ranks of the British army in France and Flanders, says: "Three weeks ago to-day the enemy began his terrific attacks against us on a fifty-mile front. His objects are to separate us from the French, to take the Channel ports and to destroy our army. In spite of throwing already one hundred and six divisions into the battle and enduring the most reckless sacrifice of human life, he has yet made little progress towards his goals. We owe this to the determined fighting and self-sacrifice of our troops. Words fail me to express the admiration which I feel for the splendid resistance offered by all ranks of our army under the most trying circumstances. Many among you are now going to the front, to take the Channel ports and to destroy our army. In spite of throwing already one hundred and six divisions into the battle and enduring the most reckless sacrifice of human life, he has yet made little progress towards his goals. We owe this to the determined fighting and self-sacrifice of our troops. Words fail me to express the admiration which I feel for the splendid resistance offered by all ranks of our army under the most trying circumstances. Many among you are now going to the front, to take the Channel ports and to destroy our army. In spite of throwing already one hundred and six divisions into the battle and enduring the most reckless sacrifice of human life, he has yet made little progress towards his goals.
