The Romance of New York.

The first impression of New York is that it is "so romantic." Thus, at least, spoke a gentleman who lately returned to it after an absence of several years. As the years had been spent in France, well within the range of Big Bertha and Gotha bombs, and amid the turmoil of the armies of half the world, the word arrested attention, the world, the word arrested attention.

In politics and finance we are already aware of certain cubits added of late to our international stature. But if New York makes an appeal to the imagination, after the manner of Paris and London, that is news, at least to indigenous New Yorkers. If true, it is important news—and not a little disquieting.

Some day, though, we may rejoice in it. Time was when we were sadly self-conscious about the architecture of our city. We said that our impious buildings actually scraped the sky. Then Joseph Pennell came back and drew them as they are. Few visions of this globe are now more splendid to us than lower Manhattan as seen from the Narrows, bathed in sunset. The skyline of the city at twilight as seen from across the North River, or the reflected flushes of dawn as seen from Brooklyn Bridge, stir the senses very deeply, and the imaginations, of those who see with their eyes. And the stars are never more brilliant, more remote and awe-inspiring, than when one looks up from between two buildings such as the prosaically blind tall skyscrapers.

And now it appears that all this is not only picturesque but filled with the spirit of high adventure. Really, we should have known it. That is the feeling that has shone in the eyes of all the returning soldiers who have seen New York for the first time on landing from a transport. In retrospect, at least, that seems to have been the feeling in those young eyes. And we, the local geniuses whom they saw, were all captains of industry, who stood in need of a brisk young man from the west to put our gigantic business right. Yes, to the traveller from the land of Saturday night, as to the traveler from the war zone, our city and ourselves are romantic. The sooner we are reconciled to the fact the better citizens we shall be, and indeed the most justifiably proud—New York Times.

Cured of Eczema.

B. F. Viscount.
Dear Sir,—To-day I can thank God for the day I saw your advertisement in the paper. After suffering from that horrid skin disease for seven years, and having tried doctors and many other remedies that I could hear of, and near, two boxes of your Ointment cured me when all others proved worthless.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

Cocoa is the better for a tiny bit of broken vanilla bean in the pot. A pinch of soda added to fruit when stewing takes off the acidity. Moisten the knife with water whenever you cut very fresh cake. When cutting fresh bread, heat the blade of the knife in hot water.

In Memoriam.

JAMES MILLER.

We deeply regret to record the passing of Mr. James Miller, a highly respected resident of Topsail, which occurred at his home on the evening of Saturday last, July 27th, at the age of 61. Mr. Miller was apparently in the best of health. He had eaten a hearty supper, and having completed his usual full day's work, he lay down on a sofa to rest awhile before retiring. He was chatting brightly to his wife, when he suddenly remarked that he felt strange. Mrs. Miller, seeing the change in him, raised him in her arms, and, thinking it was only a passing faintness, the doctor was called, and all possible done to restore life. But all in vain. At the moment of his speaking, and without the least struggle, the doctor had winged its flight, and for James Miller the things of time had become the eternal verities. He was a man whom Topsail could afford to lose. A man of sterling character, and remarkable industry, his active figure will be greatly missed along the ways wherein lay his appointed tasks. His manner was characterized by a mixture of simplicity, kindness and shrewdness, combined with a dry sense of humor which was most pleasing to all who were privileged to know him. It was often said of Mr. Miller that he did not know how to be tired. Busy as he always was, however, he was never too busy to be the splendid neighbor he undoubtedly was, and his helping hand was always assured wherever a kindly deed was needed. The Methodist community, beside having lost him from his place in church, will also feel the lack financially, for Mr. Miller was a very generous contributor to all church funds. But to his childless widow, who is left almost alone in the world, the sudden blow has fallen most crushingly. There amidst the surroundings of the beautiful little home which they built up together, and where happiness reigned until so lately, her loss and loneliness will be very hard to bear. While he had no family of his own, Mr. Miller did a father's part for many an orphan, and two, who were adopted in early childhood, and to whom he had proven a father indeed, will mourn him deeply as the only father they ever knew. The funeral, on Monday afternoon, was very largely attended. All L.O.A. Lodges on the shore were represented, and preceded the head in a large body. The remains enclosed in a handsome casket, and covered with beautiful flowers, were tenderly laid to rest, the service being conducted by Rev. James Nurse, assisted by Revs. Dr. Fenwick and L. Hussey, after which the ritual service of the L.O.A. of which deceased was a prominent member, was read. And so he sleeps!

S. S. Picnic.

The children of the C. of E. Cathedral and St. Michael's were given their annual picnic yesterday at Hafey's Farm. They were conveyed to the grounds by trucks and cars kindly loaned by their owners and driven by men who are always willing to give a helping hand. After lunch the children engaged in their usual sports until the bugle called them to tea. Just as they were seated His Excellency the Governor, Lady Harris and Miss Harris arrived, after taking tea in the teachers' tent, visited the children sitting at theirs. After tea the sports were resumed and kept up, until the waiting conveyances carried all back to the city, tired but happy; and voting the picnic of 1919 as enjoyable as any ever held by the Cathedral parish. The Committee in charge are sincerely grateful to the C.E.B. band, which tendered its services; to the owners of trucks and cars, and to those who drove them; and to all who in any way contributed to the success of the "treat."

The children of St. Mary's Sunday School had their annual outing at Blackler's field, Mundy's Pond Road, and a happier crowd of pupils could not be found anywhere. Every detail was attended to by the ladies and gentlemen in charge and all possible was done to make the affair an exceptional one. The happy faces of the youngsters testified to their enjoyment and from the beginning of the picnic to the end of the day, the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. At 9 o'clock truck loads of the little ones were brought back to the city, and as they journeyed through the streets, both young and old broke forth into song, an ebullition of high spirits, which was ample evidence that the day had been thoroughly and completely enjoyed.

Successful Dance.

The dance held in the C. C. C. Hall last night in aid of the Corps was well patronized and proved a great success. During the night refreshments were served and all attending thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The C. C. C. Band, under Capt. Bulley, provided a splendid programme of music.

Sammy's Badges.

The shoulder badges which indicate the rank of officers of the American army are intended to represent the various stages in a man's climb to the top of a high tree, a ladder being placed against the trunk to help him reach the lower branches.

The second lieutenant, with one silver bar, has his foot on the first rung of the ladder, and so on up to the captain with three bars. The major, with a gold leaf, has reached the lower branches where the leaves are without-colored, donates the stage where the leaves are fresh and green.

Continuing the climb, a nest is reached, bringing the officer to the rank of colonel with the badge of a silver eagle; and finally, his efforts are crowned with a view of the stars—one being the badge of a brigadier-general and two a major-general.

Germany's Colors.

(From the Lowell Sun.)
It would seem as if Germany might have selected better colors for her new flag than black, red and gold. We observe this because we would think the black would remind her people of the misery and mourning her ruler created for the world, the red would remind them of the menaces of socialism still existent in her confines, and the gold of the reparation money which must be paid to the Allies as the price for allowing Wilhelm to try to be king of the world.
