

Nature's Greatest Washers

The sea washes the world—Pears' Soap washes its inhabitants!

For over a century, Pears' has been making its way round the world. Ask for it in your local store; it is there! From the Cape to Cairo, in the bazaars of India, throughout Australia, Canada, the U.S., and South America Pears' has made its way with civilization,—on merits!

Pears' Soap is transparent because it is pure; it is the most economical soap because it wears but does not waste. It cleanses and purifies the skin and freshens up body and mind.

Pears'

is not heavily scented. Its delicate perfume comes from pure natural ingredients; the difference is important,—it means again that Pears' soap is pure.

Modern Magic.

Whatever worn-out faiths and beliefs we are shedding in these advanced times, it is obvious that old superstitions are not amongst them. The sternness of war takes on a particularly medieval hue when it includes the arrival of the old-fashioned love philtre and the resurrection of the Sphistophelian aristocracy.

One learns that in Bond Street and Regent Street it is possible to purchase a potion or a charm guaranteed to do all the work of the little blind god, and people are paying extravagant sums for the same.

These philtres, which originally had an enormous sale to men and women like among the Moorish priests, were recently a charming compound of its of the beloved object's clothes, hair, and even the earth they had trodden upon.

Other varieties would include roots of plants, precious stones, a swallow's or a dove's heart, while the brains of an ass, a viper's tongue, and similar contributions from selected animal anatomies had each their special virtue.

A particularly excellent philtre was supposed to be a chemical preparation of human blood, but one which was "not fit to be made common."

To-day there is a craze for moonstones, the meaning of which is supposed to counteract the evil influences of the lunar planet. Tormentill root is imagined to have the virtue of restoring lost affection. Tubes of mercury are carried as a preventive against rheumatism. Yellow beads to keep away bronchitis, and glass beads of every kind bring each of them their attendant good fortune.

The superstition which clings to the meaning of beads is of ancient origin. The custom of wearing an amber necklace was immensely common, and is not yet extinct among old women in our country. The amber, when heated, sends forth an agreeable perfume. In olden times it was the present made by a mother to her daughter on her wedding eve.

Alum beads, esteemed to be an efficacious charm against the evil eye, were largely worn by children, and in a town of Suffolk there is said to have dwelt a witch who possessed a pair of ebony beads, stated to have come from the Holy Land, and to have been sanctified at Rome. To her there repaired many a mother when her child was sick, in the hope that through the prayers of the ebony beads would be conjured away the evil spirits.

Colonel Charles Young, the only negro officer to attain that rank in the American army's history, has just been appointed military attaché to Liberia. Colonel Young spent his war period training recruits.

Four Husbands, and All Living.

BROOKLYN GIRL DID NOT KNOW IT WAS WRONG TO HAVE MORE THAN ONE AND SHE LOVES THE LAST BEST.

NEW YORK, January 12.—Prototyping that she did not know it was illegal to have more than one husband at a time, Mrs. Edna Leslie, 33 years of age, was arraigned in Brooklyn Saturday on the charge of having had four in the last seven years. She admitted that all of them were alive, and that she never troubled herself to get a divorce from any of them. John Leslie, who owns a freight boat, was the last of the line and she declared she loved him best of all.

"I never thought I'd see any of my husbands again," the woman told the court, "and did not think it was against the law to marry so many men. I'm sorry if I have broken the law."

Mrs. Leslie was held in $1,000 bail on a charge of bigamy.

FOOLED AGAIN.

They said this good old world would end, December seven-teen; and fireworks of a 11 kinds would lend their grandeur to the scene. I'd have to see this best of globes dissolve beneath my feet, yet I put on ascension robes with resignation sweet. "If, with the balance of the race I have to loop the loops, I'll do it with a smiling face," I said, to frightened groups. Resigned to seeing things explode, or pass in living fire, I gave away my chaste abode, my corkscrew and my lyre. I threw away my cherished pipe, a box of good cigars; "because," I said, "the time is ripe for me to climb the stars. I won't have use for worldly things, I'll care not for long green, when I have donned my shining wings, December seven-teen." The fatal morning came at last, and found me in my room; the skies with clouds were overcast, as though with threat of doom. All day I waited for the crash of planets overturned, and passed up smokes and missed my hash, and for the climax yearned. I'm trying to regain the junk I lightly gave away; once more my fingers go kerplunk upon the harp all day. My faith in prophets, once so strong, is in the soup tureen, since I was bilked with all that throng, December seven-teen.

A Brass Bed in the Marquesas.

An amusing tale is told of the coming of the first brass bed in Atona, Atona is one of the Marquesas islands, a place of coconut palms, and people who are still ornamentally tattooed and who used to be cannibals before the missionaries arrived and taught them better. But no missionary had ever disembarked a brass bed on the beach of Atona; it came with the luggage of a curious traveler who had seen the island from the deck of a steamer, and felt an impulse to live there a while and see what it was like. He could not depart, he says, "without penetrating into those abrupt and melancholy depths of forest, without endeavoring, though ever so feebly, to stir the cold brow of legend and tale, fast disappearing under stupor and forgetfulness." And so one day the boat brought him ashore, and the people welcomed him, marveling at the sight of the "golden bed" and nearly overcome with delight at the prospect of the springs under the mattress. They took turns bounding on it, while he drove an easy bargain with the possessor of a house for the use of the domicile in return for leasing the "golden bed" with the owner when he departed. Then, the bargain concluded, the wife of the chief who owned the house had the unique privilege of sitting on the bed, happily bouncing up and down, till it was lifted on the tattooed shoulders of four Marquesans and marched with honor to its destination.

Mainly About People.

It is reported that the women members of Russia's Bolsheviki and the wives of leaders try to outshine the former aristocracy in sumptuous living. The unchallenged leader is Madame Andreyeff whom Maxim Gorky introduced to New York in 1906 as his lawful wife but who was not accepted as such. She is said to be even more clever than in those days but fat beyond words.

Former Sergeant William Sandlin of Hyden, Ky., who has been appointed special escort for the return of American soldier dead from overseas, ranks next to Sergeant York in his war exploits. He killed 24 Germans and wounded and captured as many more. In one day he alone put out of action three machine gun nests. He has been decorated by France, Belgium and the United States.

All London is talking a great deal about a Mrs. Mabel Walerm as being the "first woman to publicly boast of being a pipe smoker." She has made a collection of briars and calabashes. She averages four pipes a day and a cigar in the evening with her husband over a game of chess. Mrs. Walerm is a woman of fine physique and has been smoking since she was 14.

Maria Antonio is a Brazilian of nine years of age. She is already wonderful as a pianist, and if she continues as she has begun may be expected to become the greatest female pianist the world has ever had. The child is not forced in any way and only practices when in the mood, and yet at that spends several hours daily at the keys. She has left New York for Paris to take special musical courses.

Sidney Kingsman, now touring the United States, is a cattle king who owns 48,000 miles of Australia. A tract almost exactly the area of New York. He doesn't know the number of his cattle. Forty years ago he was a driver at 25 shillings a week, and now he has more than that number of millions. This is his first real vacation in his lifetime.

Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent English scientist and psychic, now on a visit to America, has long been associated with the English Society for Physical Research, and is foremost among the scientific investigators who strive to answer the questions of the age. He is recognized as one of the world's greatest scientists, having among other noted accomplishments paved the way for the wireless telegraph with his laboratory investigations.

J. M. Bowman, New York's most famous hotel man, has bought the great London residence of the Duke of Devonshire, and on that site will erect the largest hotel in London. It will be built on the lines of the Commodore Hotel in New York.

Miss Evelyn Mueller, of Astoria, is pronounced by physicians the most perfect physical type among the hundreds of thousands of New York working girls. She does office work for eight hours each day, and swims, does gymnasium work, dances, skates during her off hours, and on Sundays takes long hikes. She is now in her 33rd year. She doesn't permit rain to interfere with her walks.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle since the war has given his whole time and brain activities to spiritualism, "which promises to become a common knowledge shared by the whole human race." He does not believe the dead are really dead, and he insists that communication between the dead and living is possible.

When John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln" was on the stage at Washington, after a great deal of coaxing Uncle Joe Cannon was induced to go. Cannon was a candidate for county district attorney in Illinois on the ticket with Lincoln and Hamlin in 1861. The ex-speaker said he would stay "two minutes" just to oblige. He was there at the finish.

Colonel Henry Watterston, "Marco Henry," veteran Democrat and veteran editor, was an admirer of Cleveland and is opposed to Wilson, the only other Democratic president since the Civil War. His father was a Democratic Congressman and took his politics, like his liquor, straight. The colonel was in the Southern army, a rebel. Probably no man in the United States has met more prominent men personally.
