

Dug Out of the Sands.

HEROD'S COURT DISCOVERED.

The old court of Herod the Great has recently been dug out of the sands of the early two thousand years. Here was decried the massacre of the innocents back in the days before the New Testament was written. Here was the famous dance of Salome performed and the head of John the Baptist produced on a silver. At this court was reported the discovery of the wise men and from it emanated the murderous search for the infant Christ. For nearly two thousand years, while the Hun swept out the civilization of Rome, while the picturesque chivalry of crusading days gave place to the intrigues of the middle ages and they in turn retired before the polished dandyism of two centuries back, while Napoleon swept the world and fell, while Wilhelm of Germany essayed his dream of conquest and failed—while all this colorful panorama flickered across the scenes of time, only the dim, empty sands drifted deeper and deeper over Herod's Court. Truly if there be sermons in stones the ancient pillars of Herod's palace should speak significantly to the world of disarmament problems and Irish problems and international black-erings to-day.—Sydney Record.

C. L. B. Cadets

Thursday's parade was satisfactory. Col. R. F. Goodridge, O.C., Rev. Captain Clayton, Captain H. A. Outbridge, Alex. Morris, Frank Miles and Norman Henry (in mufti) Lieut. Mott, Harold and Lance Hayward, Fred Reid, A. B. Parlin, Gen. Hunt and E. G. Ash, with Major Williams being on duty. All ranks were glad to see the newly appointed Adjutant, Major R. H. Tait, M.C., on parade in his C.L.B. uniform. Major Tait took charge of the Battalion and the lads showed up quite smartly under his command. The Battalion was put through the physical and manual also under the command of the Colonel to the musical strains of Bandmaster Morris's veterans.

Repairs have already started on the Armoury Building. Scaffolding of the Band being Architect and the Clerk of the Banks with Old Comrade James King as foreman carpenter and Sergt-Major Hennebury as his assistant. The scaffolding has been erected on the West side and claspboard is being repaired. The roof and western front need a thorough overhauling to make the building comfortable and weather proof. Contractor Burridge has been given the contract for building the chimney, one to heat the Quartermaster's office, Officers Mess and West End of Gymnasium, whilst a smaller one will heat the A. and F. Company rooms where the lads congregate and use as a club room. The building needs painting but finances are slim and this will have to remain over till next year.

The Brigade needs funds badly to meet the expense of repairs and a special committee is meeting to arrange a series of Brigade Sports, Concerts, etc., on anniversary week in November. It is hoped to have a Brigade affair every night for the week in aid of funds. The Officers do not like asking for financial help in the way of subscriptions, but would welcome any voluntary assistance. The C.L.B. Ladies' Auxiliary under their President, Mrs. W. B. Fraser, are also showing great signs of activity and promise to be of great financial assistance in their effort to raise the funds needed. "Unity is strength," shall be the motto until an objective is accomplished. They will shortly hold a Brigade drive. Brigade week opens up on St. Martin's Day, November eleventh, (the Brigade's thirtieth birthday) with a big torch light parade, followed at 8 a.m. by a special service of Holy Communion in St. Mary's Church, Southside, on Sunday, and a Church Parade to St. Thomas's Church in the afternoon. On Monday, November fourteenth, a grand dance. On Tuesday, a Mammoth Gymnasium display, with music. On Wednesday, a Card Tournament. On Thursday, inspection and Drill Exhibition. Friday night a big Band Concert. By Captain Morris's musical artists. On Saturday an "At Home" with a short lecture on the "History of the Brigade in Newfoundland." On Sunday, November twentieth, a special thanksgiving service in the Cathedral.

The Officers' Mess had a short meeting last night, the Colonel presided. A few matters were decided in reference to the Brigade finances and the arrangements for Brigade Week in November. Major Williams on behalf of all ranks of the Battalion, warmly welcomed Major R. H. Tait, M.C., as a ing last night, the Colonel presided. A few matters were decided in reference to the Brigade finances and the arrangements for Brigade Week in November. Major Williams on behalf of all ranks of the Battalion, warmly welcomed Major R. H. Tait, M.C., as a new member and Adjutant of the Battalion. Major Tait's experience overseas will be invaluable to the Executive and to Brigade discipline generally, and the C.L.B. is delighted to have the benefit of his services. The Major replied in a neat speech and promised to "do his bit" as far as he could to help maintain the standard of efficiency. Lieut. R. G. Ash opened the Brigade School last night in good shape. The school is well equipped for business and lots of room for more pupils. The Colonel has announced that he hopes to visit Heart's Content and Bay Roberts Companies in January and hold an official inspection of these units. President Ern Chate, the "Big Chief" of the Old Comrades Lodge presided over a well attended meeting of his department last night in the "Old Comrades Room." The department has taken on a new lease of life and things there are "on the boom." The "Old Boys" are like Johnny Walker, still going strong!

Fads and Fashions.

Frosted bands of self-material are the sole trimming of a white crepe frock. The skirt of a sports suit of king's blue flannel stripe ends in huge scallops. There is a great vogue for embroidery in Byzantine designs in gold, silver and red. Dewdrops in the form of crystal beads are sprinkled all over a gown of apicot crepe. A golden-brown baby-lamb fur is attached the full length of a wrap or coramuel duvety. A black-and-gold brocade evening gown is trimmed with the ever-popular monkey fur. A henna gown of velvet brocade chiffon is charming with its rich silver tissue brocade. Very wide sleeves of crepe de chine are stuffed at the bottom with rows of shiny silk beads.
