HOMER STARTS SHORT VEHIC RALLY IN NINTH

ETHICS' RALLY IN NINTH FALLS A BIT SHORT

Emmer's Homer With Two On Pulled Flint To Within Two Runs, But Carmen Relieves Wheeler and Gets Third Out—Larry Doyle of Leafs Present.

Emmer's homer through the elms toward right field in the ninth, with two on, and two more singles, forced Buzz to replace Wheeler with Carmen to get the third man out. The move was eminently successful despite the fact that Ted Andersen resorted to some strategy himself by putting Conway, a southpaw batter, in to face Carmen, in the first of the ninth. The fresh mixture lobbed over by Lefty was too much for Conway, who whiffed, the first game with the Vehics going to the locals by a 6-4 score.

The going was sticky all the way through from the rain and until they got used to squeezing them tight there were indications of a pile of boots.

Larry Doyle, manager of the Toronto Leafs, was in the stands, looking over the collection. By a strange trick of fate, or a stray ball, VanDyke in whose direction he was probably casting an approving eye, made his second error of the season when he dropped Dugray's easy fly in the fourth.

Louis Shettler who used to perform here in the days of the old Canadian League, faced Wheeler to start the pastime. After the first inning, he had nicked him for three runs in the first frame, but he was getting the better of the argument until Wheeler struck a string of left-handed batsmen in the aforementioned ninth.

Old Boots Here.

Successive boots by Morgan put VanDyke and Calbert on in the first frame. VanDyke gave Doyle something to look at when Kuhn knocked a choice at the ball to the plate. Crichlow's able to left brought Calbert and Kuhn in.

Wheeler found the ball slippery the second time. After walking Gray and hitting two, Hunter singled and the London hurler hit Morgan and right on top of that Wotell, forcing in a run. Gray was an easy out retiring the first. Wheeler went along splendidly after that, allowing but four hits until he wobbled in the third.

In the third, Shay's sacrifice fly to centre scored Kuhn who had been hit, and the London first-sacker pulled down the first home run of the season.

Two more came in the sixth, when Larry hit to left, stole second and was sacrificed to third by Stutz and VanDyke was hurt going into second on a puffing expedition, but continued his battery on third, where he was stranded.

Wheeler routed two via the strikeout in the eighth and was travelling too speed with everything in good order. Kuhn to start the ninth, which London first-sacker pulled down on his own hand. Ted Andersen injected a walk. Doyle Gray didn't have a very hard either to get first in the same way. Wheeler had two and one on Emmer when he whanged the next out to right-centre, and the next out to right-centre, and the next out to right-centre.

A hard-hit fly to VanDyke, but under slung and went to third on Morgan's single to the same spot in left, and the third base runner was out. The third base runner was out. The third base runner was out.

JUST BETWEEN US

(BY SEE S. GEE)

There'll be thousands of Canadians boosting strongly for Georges Carpentier to separate Jack Dempsey, on July 2, as far from his title as he was from patriotic endeavor during the war. Not so much because Georges is French as because his early ring career is all bound up with that part of France, Canadiana know best, and which saw them in their most hopeful moods and their highest achievements—the region of the Pas De Calais. Georges' first championship was the title of Bethune, a town which spelled to thousands of Canadians from the end of 1915 to the end of 1918, a slight reprieve from the uncertainty indescribable of the line, a few miles away to the east. It seemed like Paris, Monte Carlo and Blighty all rolled into one, to the mud-stained or dust-laden Canadian lads, who managed a journey there from nearby billets. "Omelette and arm," and if M'sieur was thirsty, some "ving blmk" for le bon "Can-yan soldier." Even Collette, attired in the inevitable black, with a gaudy can of color here and there, and in her cheeks; with the bright eyes that taught to laugh to the accompaniment of "C'est la guerre," appeared as a vision learned to laugh in dainty femininity, and brought laugh lines to corners of eyes and mouths which were unconsciously drawn from seeing and hearing too much "up there." A "crump" from the direction of Plugstreet probably dropped on the square at intervals, but this was rest—Bethune and what was a crump now and then?

Georges, sitting in his little garden, could look across the winding Souchez from where he lived, into La Collette, which was the centre of one of those huge "400-yard penetrations," as an aftermath of Hill 70, but which in intensity and lives per yard exacted a bigger tribute than many of the big advances the next year, measured as they were in kilometres instead of yards.

Georges, in the early part of his training, could and probably did don running togs and for his jaunt take in the bit of territory which occupied the personal attention of the whole Canadian army and a quarter of Fritz for the last two years, from Vimy on. The Arras-Vimy road was but a stone's throw from the suburb of Lievin, in which Carpentier lived. Jogging down here, Georges passed over a spur of Notre Dame de Lorette, and along the whole base of Vimy Ridge, along which the Canadians fought their spearhead April 9. Then down into peaceful, medieval Arras and out along the Arras-Cambrai road, past Vis-en-Artois, from which the Canadians flung their spearhead April 9, to the Droocourt-Queant switch of the concrete-buttressed Hindenburg line, smashing it and the fondest delusions of the German general staff. A distance of 30 kilometres perhaps! The French fighter could do it quite easily and ride back.

All this, Georges brings to the mind's eye of those Canucks who muddled through along with the rest of the muddling for four long years, and that's why he'll have their moral support, no matter what the posters say about the Frenchman's frailty, his unimpressive record and his silken wardrobe.

The si-kology of baseball crowds, always interesting for an observer, is about as interesting over at Tecumseh Park these days as are the games. There have been times during the present winning streak of the Tribe, when more than half the crowd in the stands were actually wishing for the visitors to win. And yet if the Tribe drop one game, this same half will leave the park gates, strongly criticizing the plays that made it possible for the locals to lose. However, it's hard to get a happy medium team, with about seven of the London players hitting well over the 300 mark.

It has been known for some time that the Kitchener club was wobbling financially, and the disclosure of conditions was bound to come soon. However, the citizens of that town are alive to the necessity of Mint League ball, and they will rally in with the ducks necessary to carry on.

The fact that 125 carloads of lumber went into the building of the arena on Boyle's 30 acres may eventually prove to be as interesting as the fight.

Even the higher education is going to extend to fight referees in the near future. Now they only have to learn to count to ten, but if more foreign fighters come along they'll have to learn to count in their languages.

Italian and Yiddish will probably be the first on the list, judging by the nationality of a good number of the fighters looking for matches these days, or running out of them according to the ups and downs of the fighting trade.

However, maybe the reason Ertle wasn't forced to learn French was because the New Jersey commission didn't figure it would be Georges who would be listening to the counting.

Rickard has posted his $500,000 guarantee. The only guarantee that the fans in the $5 seats will have of seeing the fight will be to take a good pair of strong opera glasses along.

Jim Corbett hasn't made a prediction yet. The wise bettors are waiting until he chooses his man, and then they'll choose theirs, but it won't be the same fighter.

GOLF PROFESSIONALS ENTER. New York June 27.—Receipt of the entries of Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, British professionals, for the national open golf championship tournament at Columbia Country Club, Washington, D. C., July 19-22, was announced today by W. D. Vanerpool, secretary of the United States Golf Association. Included in the 24 entries received thus far are those of H. Kirkwood, Australian champion, and J. Victor, east of Australia.

HYMAN TROPHY. This trophy is the objective of the main event at the Elmwood's big Dominion Day Tourney. It is one of the handsomest pieces of silverware up for competition among the bowlers and is attracting more bowlers each year.

Col. Mayes of Canada Defeated by South African in Straight Sets.

WIMBLEDON, June 27.—Francis T. Hunter, the United States tennis star, reached the semi-final in the British tour tennis tournament here tonight by defeating Major Cecil Campbell, the Irish champion of 1909, by 6-2, 7-5, 3-6, 6-4. He next will meet B. L. C. Norton, champion of South Africa, who entered the semi-finals round today by eliminating Col. Mayes of Canada by 4-6, 6-2, 6-2.

Mrs. Mollie Eburnest Mallory, the United States singles champion, was not so fortunate as Hunter. She went down to defeat at the hands of Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California, 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

The cooler weather today proved a great boon to the players, several of whom showed marked exhaustion as a result of the recent heat wave.

Manuel Alonso, the Spanish champion, defeated the leading English hope, Major Kingscott, 6-1, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2. Kingscott's defeat was the surprise of the day, as he had generally been regarded as the likeliest challenger of William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, the world's champion, who himself in the newspapers of London expressed that opinion.

Tilden and Mrs. Mallory, together with Arnold Jones of Providence, R. I., and Miss Edith Stigour of Boston, were eliminated today from the mixed doubles, the former pair by Max Woosnam and Miss F. N. Howkins of England, by 2-6, 6-3, 9-7, and the latter pair by Rama Swami of India and Mrs. O'Neill of England, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

In the fifth round of the women's singles, Mrs. Peadar of England defeated Mrs. McNair, also of England, by 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Financial Assistance Must Come Before Pay Day Can Roll Around For Kitchener Beavers Any More

KITCHENER, June 27.—Unless funds are forthcoming immediately to wipe out the indebtedness of the Kitchener baseball club organized ball in this city will be a thing of the past within the next two weeks.

Money to the amount of $2,300 was borrowed from the bank for the last pay day and the next one is on July 2. Whether or not the club continues after that depends entirely upon the merchants and manufacturers of Kitchener who will be called upon to make donations to the club to hold the franchise in this city.

The club's liabilities since entering the M.O. League which they did with $600 have been added to until now they are $9,134.

Businessmen of the city met with the directors of the ball club today when the situation was threshed out. The meeting was addressed by President Harry Tolton and Judge Clements, president of the Saginaw club. President Tolton pointed out that the club should be owned and operated by the citizens, as it was impossible to make money out of a ball club. In this he was backed up by Judge Clements. Several businessmen promised the club not only their moral but financial assistance, as well, and on the suggestion of Rev. Langford, a committee was appointed to approach the businessmen in the city with a view to having the franchise retained.

It was pointed out that Kitchener can never again enter organized ball until the liabilities are wiped out, and those present came to the conclusion that baseball was an essential to the life of Kitchener. F. E. Routley, manager of the Ball Telephone Company, was appointed the chairman of the committee, which consists of H. Lincoln, E. W. Clement, P. J. Wilkinson, J. McCallum, P. Heeney, H. Krug, R. Shantz, I. Art, W. Mills, J. Pop, Williams, H. Tolton, J. Cochrane, Tom Seagram, P. Kuntz, W. Allen, P. Pearce, W. M. O. Lochard and Geo. Lang, Jr.

The suggestion is that about 100 businessmen be asked to contribute $100 annual to the club which would insure the club, like others, in making ends meet as Kitchener has not the population to make ball pay.
