

LIVES ARE LOST AS FIRES SWEEP OVER WIDE AREA

Two Burned to Death in Philadelphia Apartment House Blaze.

DAMAGES ARE HIGH

Associated Press Despatch.
Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 22.—Two persons were burned to death early today in a fire which destroyed an apartment house at 737 North 32nd street. The victims have not been identified.
Several persons were rescued by firemen and it was believed that all had escaped safely.
Search of the ruins, however, revealed two charred bodies so badly burned that it was impossible to determine whether they were men or women.
Firemen were hampered in fighting the blaze by the bitter cold weather. The property loss was estimated at $20,000.

WOMAN MEETS DEATH

Associated Press Despatch.
Lyndonville, Vt., Jan. 22.—One woman was killed and a number of persons were injured in a fire which virtually wiped out the business section of this village early today. The loss is estimated at about $500,000.
Mrs. Victoria Stone, an aged woman, who lived in an apartment on the third floor of one of the burned buildings, lost her life when she jumped from a window. Occupants of other apartments driven out in a low-zero temperature and a high wind suffered severely from exposure and several sustained bad burns. Others were hurt when they jumped from windows.
The flames spread quickly in both directions and before they were controlled with the aid of apparatus sent here from St. Johnsbury, seven miles distant, they had razed six business buildings and the Hotel Lyndon.

FIREMAN DROPS DEAD.

Associated Press Despatch.
New York, Jan. 22.—Fire Lieut. Donovan dropped dead last night from cold while fighting a three-alarm fire which destroyed a garment factory at Queen's. Two children were rescued by patrolmen. Warnken when the blaze was spread by a high wind to a nearby tenement.

PATIENTS RESCUED.

Canadian Press Despatch.
Toronto, Jan. 22.—It is given out today that several women patients in maternity cases, were rescued from their beds by nurses and sisters and carried to safety into other wards, following a fire that was discovered making headway in the northeast wing of St. Joseph's Catholic Hospital here yesterday afternoon.
Fire from an overheated chimney was making its way up through the walls to the main floor, where it was discovered and quickly extinguished by the fire department. Meantime the patients were transferred to another part of the building. There was no suggestion of panic.

INDIANS PRESENT CLAIMS FOR LAND

Canadian Chiefs Taking Part in Conference Being Held Near Syracuse, N. Y.

Associated Press Despatch.
Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Canadian chiefs are taking part in a conference in the long house of the Six Nations of the Mohawk confederacy at which claims of the confederacy to billions of dollars' worth of land are being discussed. The conference, which is being held behind closed doors, will continue several days, and is a continuation of the meeting of June, broken up by disagreement among the tribes. Among the Indian leaders at the session are Chief Mitchell Two Ax of the Caughnawaga Mohawks from Caughnawaga, Que.; Chief Peters of the St. Regis Mohawks reservation, Que., and Chief Jacko from the St. Regis Mohawks.
The land claim, which is the object of the council of the confederacy, grew out of a report made a year ago by the Indian commission of New York State.

O. M. L. DIRECTION SIGN IS LARGER THIS YEAR

League Plans To Erect More Than 8,000 in Eastern Part of Province.

The new Ontario Motor League standard road sign is somewhat larger than the old one. The side-marginal, "O. M. L." has been eliminated and the Ontario Motor League appears under the direction arrow. Over eight thousand of these signs will be erected in the western section of the province this year. The name of the city or town appears in black on the side of the broad yellow arrow.
Though Ontario is the best "signed" province in the Dominion, the Motor League is far from satisfied with the adequacy of the direction sign-posting, and more road signs will be erected this year than in any previous year. By the end of 1924 the Ontario Motor League will have erected over 8,000 signs on the roads of the province.

TOTAL COST $4,100.
Correcting a misunderstanding at last night's city council session, City Clerk Sam Baker announced that the cost for printing the city council minutes in 1923 was $1,500 and the voters' list $2,600, total of $4,100.

Former Stable Boy Called To Direct British Affairs

from his followers. Often he has been mistrusted by them. He was like Eugene O'Neill's stoker. He "didn't belong." He was an intellectual and they were not sure of him.
His conversion to Labor was more accidental than anything else. The son of a hard-working agricultural laborer, he has his mother to thank chiefly for his present position of power. Her origin is apparently more or less obscure, but she herself must have come of good parentage because she instilled in her son a desire for learning and education that was entirely contrary to what might have been expected of the son of an agricultural worker at that time. The positions that he held during early years were mostly clerical, and he studied while he worked. For a time he was a school teacher. His great ambition was to be a lawyer. But when he applied to the bar he was given "the cold shoulder." The son of an ordinary laborer seeking to be a lawyer? It was an unheard-of thing. So he had to give up his desire.
This experience was the cause of a complete change in his life. It embittered him toward the upper classes. He became interested in socialism. In a short time he was converted by it, and soon after that came his emergence from the rank and file of the radicals as one of the most promising among the younger generation of socialists.
Born at Lissiemouth, in Elginshire, Scotland, in 1856, he was still a Liberal in 1888. But the dough was beginning to leaven. That same year he became private secretary to Thomas Lough, M.P., and in that way gained a knowledge of parliamentary affairs which has served him in good stead throughout the remainder of his career.

Enters Socialist Struggle.

He had always been fond of writing for the general public. The subject that he chose was socialism. Socialism had not been introduced in England in a political measure when he came up to London, although Keir Hardie and George Bernard Shaw were trying hard to make headway in that direction.
Young MacDonald threw himself into the struggle with the same dogged perseverance that has always characterized his doings.
Within a comparatively short time he had made a name for himself in socialist circles. He joined the Independent Labor party and sat for a time on the Fabian executive committee.

In 1896 he entered politics in earnest and receiving the Labor nomination for Southampton, was badly defeated.

The next year he gained a certain amount of prestige in the upper levels by marrying Margaret Gladstone, niece of the late Lord Kelvin. She was a splendid woman and helped him in his aims by herself taking a leading part in social uplift and public welfare work.

Running in Leicester in 1900 on an anti-South African War platform, he received a lead by coming out at the foot of the polls. But he was not discouraged.
The same year he was chosen secretary of the labor representation committee. Subsequently he served faithfully and effectively as Labor Whip. From 1901 to 1904 he was a member of the Progressive party of the London City Council. He met with success in Leicester in 1906, and from then until 1909 held the position of chairman of the Independent Labor party.

Denounced as Traitor.

All this time he had kept on with his writing. He edited a periodical known as the "Socialist Library," and was responsible for a book entitled "Socialism and Society."
The great war proved his temporary undoing. It came on in 1914. He had always been opposed to war. His stand against the South African conflict brought about disaster to his political hopes in Leicester. Consistent as he has always been with his firm principles, he did not attempt to hedge when war was declared on Aug. 4. He came out bluntly and bitterly against Sir Edward Grey and those who were in power with him at the time. He hailed it as an unnecessary war. His pronouncements went even further than being merely pacific. They were pro-German.

And the British public quickly rose up against him. Not only did they denounce him as a pacifist, but as a traitor. It was too much for some of his Labor followers to sanction. They turned from him. And Germany hailed him as a "friend of the fatherland."

Among other things he had denounced the capitalistic and militaristic press. John Bull came back at him in characteristic fashion. They dug up a birth certificate that branded him as the illegitimate offspring of a Scottish servant girl and whether true or false it hurt him badly. He was expelled from patriotic societies and deprived of most of his club memberships.

Lloyd George Stuck to Him.

It is a remarkable thing that through all this wave of condemnation Lloyd George stuck by him.
"Mr. MacDonald is one of my greatest personal friends," he once said when asked about it. "Neither he is for the war or against the war, nor one word will fall from my lips against him." And he held to this promise.

Then came the famous khaki election of 1918. MacDonald went with him to his riding of Leicester and contested it. But he was hopelessly overwhelmed.

After that he decided to travel. The situation might clear up somewhat during his absence. So he went to India and the other British Dominions except Canada. While away he made a careful study of labor problems and questions of imperial importance—knowledge which has since proved invaluable to him.

When he came back the people still remembered him. He was defeated by the Liberal candidate in Woolwich in 1921. But he refused to be daunted. He tried again at the next elections, and this time was returned to parliament as the representative of Aberavon. Persistence went out for him and things have been going his way slowly but surely ever since.

MacDonald's record has been aptly described as that of a politician who has always had his eye on the main chance, and who, except for the period of the war, has always called his chances shrewdly.

Detests Bolshevism.

He is not a Bolshevik in any sense of the word. Soviet tyranny is distasteful to him. He has drawn a very clear and definite distinction between communism and socialism. The former he construes as a system by which the state owns the man-power as well as the instruments of production. But with socialism, men remain free and unfettered.

The newspapers have been wont to refer to him as a man entirely devoid of personal magnetism, but if it lacks personal magnetism, he certainly has a philosophy that is human. His answer to a question asked him once by the Yorkshire Evening News clearly demonstrates this fact.

"Where shall we turn for joy?" they inquired in a sudden fit of pessimism.
Ramsay MacDonald's answer was this:
"A good walking stick, a pipe and any weather, are enough; a pocket treasure like 'The Open Road' adds luxury to the elements. But the greatest joy of all is the joy of working so that all the people may possess the circumstances and the capacity to be full of joy themselves. Don't talk to me of a cheerless life. What he intends to do now that the reins of power have been so dramatically placed in his hands, he himself has written about.
"The war has left us too emotional," he wrote recently, "too confident that will and force can perform miracles. We need to return to calm, common sense policies that will firm principles. We need to use it and tackle its problems objectively."

PREMIER STANLEY BALDWIN, who, upon receiving the no-confidence decision of the British house, handed his resignation to King George.

OPPORTUNITIES ARE OVERLOOKED

Port Huron Editor Points Out Possibilities in St. Clair District.

URGES DEVELOPMENT

Special to The Advertiser.

Sarnia, Jan. 21.—"Municipalities in the St. Clair River district have been in existence about 100 years and have let that period slip by without trying to sell their advantages," said J. Ottaway, well-known Port Huron editor, speaking at the weekly meeting of the luncheon club at the chamber of commerce today. Three objectives were cited by the speaker, the expansion of the river, the river area, summer resort developments, and industrial development of the St. Clair River district, including Sarnia and Port Huron were alike.

Back From States.

Provincial Constable W. C. Oliver brought back from Flint, Mich., today, Leonard Hetu, 18, said to be wanted at Meaford on a charge of incest. Oliver received the warrant from Meaford on January 16, and succeeded in locating the wanted man Saturday.

Bissell—McRae.

A quiet wedding took place Saturday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McRae, fourth line of Sarnia township, when their eldest daughter, Mamie Francis, was united in marriage to Kenneth, son of Mrs. Sarah Bissell, London road, Sarnia township. The bride wore a dress of satin crepe and carried a bouquet of carnations. The groom was attended by his brother, Elmer Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. Bissell left for a short honeymoon at Niagara Falls.

Word was received today of the sudden death last night of Miss Lena McDonald at the family residence on the sixth line of Moore township near Brigidon. Miss McDonald was aged about 60 years, and had been in poor health for a year. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Jack McDonald, one sister, Margaret at home, and five brothers, John of Saginaw, William of Edmonton, Donald of Camanche, James and Alex at home.

MISS McNAUGHTON IS NOW ABLE TO WALK

Physician States She Is On the Way to Complete Recovery.

Miss Viola McNaughton's condition has shown such great improvement during the past two weeks that she was allowed to walk around for a short time yesterday. Her physician stated today that she was well on her way to complete recovery.

Doctors at Victoria Hospital expect Miss McNaughton will be able to take her place on the witness stand when Clarence Topping, confessed murderer of Geraldine Durston, comes up for trial before Mr. Justice Riddell in February.

ASKS FOR SPACE.

While the city council has only ordered increased covered accommodation on the market, an application has already reached the city hall for space; the writer being a resident of London Township.

INSPECTOR IS ILL.

That the winter colds are no respecter of persons is shown by the fact that Chief Inspector V. K. Greer of the public schools, is confined to his home with cold, as are many of the school children of the city.

Inspects Her New Quarters

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Jan. 22.—Isabel MacDonald, the 22-year-old daughter of the new prime minister, who since her father is a widower will manage his official residence at No. 10 Downing street and will visit this forenoon the old building set aside for the prime minister's working and living quarters. She was shown through the rambling structure, comprising a labyrinth of hallways, offices and living apartments, making a careful if not extended survey.

"I found it rather complicated," she said afterward when asked her impressions of her future home, "but I think I shall like it."

LIQUOR PACT GETS INDORSATION OF ALL DOMINIONS

British-American Treaty Only Awaits Signature of the New Parliament.

RECIPROCAL RIGHTS

Associated Press Despatch.
London, Jan. 22.—The British dominions have unanimously approved the draft of the liquor treaty between Great Britain and the United States which was submitted to them by the British government. The draft thus approved had been agreed upon by the London and Washington governments.

The document now only awaits signature and ratification by the new parliament. It is not expected it will meet with any serious opposition. The treaty is a brief businesslike document, confined to a half dozen terse clauses. The area within which the United States vessels are to have the reciprocal right to bring to United States ports legitimate alcoholic stores under seal when intended for eastbound consumption. Short British passenger vessels are to have the reciprocal right to bring to United States ports legitimate alcoholic stores under seal when intended for eastbound consumption. The treaty will be signed by Lord Curzon or his successor in the ministry for foreign affairs. The point will probably be decided tomorrow.

ST. MATTHEWS CHURCH HAS SPLENDID REPORT

All Branches of Work Have Flourished During the Year.

All departments of St. Matthew's Church were reported in a flourishing condition at last night's annual meeting, but particular mention was made of the church school, under the superintendency of J. H. Hichins, and of the Junior W. A. composed of girls mostly between eight and ten, that contributed over $100 to missions.

St. Matthew's had a large increase in membership during 1923, as 267 are now on the church rolls. The synod budget was oversubscribed and local funds were splendidly supported.

Officers elected include D. C. Messeroll, as rector's warden, and R. Harvey, as people's warden. R. T. Wright and A. H. Whitlow were named lay delegates to the synod, with J. McLeod and George Ley as alternates. Miss Jean Francis serves as secretary clerk.
The mission board consists of H. F. Barton, W. Matthew and H. Holme, and the following sidesmen were named: V. Rogers, Fred Hichins, E. Byrnes, R. L. Diel and George Ley.

Votes of thanks were passed to all officers, and Mrs. Ed. Cripps, head of the Junior W. A., came in for special mention.

The meeting expressed its appreciation of their rector, Rev. T. J. Charlton, by a unanimously carried vote of thanks.
