"I shope it will be understood by the public that I do not take this stand at all because I happen to be Mr. Ludcouver's representatives, and am bound to promote as far as possible the best interests of my constituency.
"It is quite clear that if the government refuses to deal with the matter until the question of law between it and the Dominion government is settled, Mr. that such a question can be settled for a good many months to come. As the local government has stood by for twelve years and allowed everybody to think that the Dominion government owned this property, it would appear to be a wery unfair thing to offer the island for manufactory there which would give th expect from Mr. Ludgate's enterprise.

Suggested Settlement. "My view is that the province should dispose of the island under such conditions as would protect the general inter-made conditional upon the province finally obtaining the title.

"If this course be adopted and for any reason Mr. Ludgate still abandons his location in Vancouver, no one could charge to the provincial government the doss that would result to the city. In Cotton has found it necessary to express his views to Mr. Garden before the goverument had finally come to any conclusion on the matter. This, of course, includes preservation of timber. We are bound to protect provincial rights, leaving altimate disposition of island, if we establish our claim to it, in consideration of securing best financial results for province, whether from Ludgate or anyone else. This is our plain duty, as provincial government.

thority that the province's right to own and control the island is incapable of support.

Meanwhile we believe that sensible and right-minded British Columbians in general will. If they regard the matter without prejudice, declare that the chief commissioner's declaration, which was briefly telegraphed to this city vesterday, suggests not only a correct principle, but the right procedure. Mr. Cotton holds that if and when the provincial right to the island shall have been sustained, the conditions on which it shall be offered for industrial uses shall be such as shall secure for British Columbia the best available return value. If it should happen under such circumstances that Mr. Ludgate failed to secure a lease of the island—and we do not in mentioning such a possibility imply that this will be the case, for we are, of course, it is ofhered, ignorant of what may happen—that gentleman has surely a strong claim to seek for compensation in the matter in the proper quarter.

Hence we do not believe that any injustice will be done Mr. Ludgate whatever be the ultimate outcome of the present legal embroglio, although he has certainly weakened the moral force of his case he the course of the present legal embroglio, although he has certainly weakened the moral force of his case he the course of the present legal embroglio, although he has certainly weakened the moral force of his case he the course of the present legal embroglio, although he has certainly weakened the main" which he yesterday attempted and in part effected.
