JAPAN'S SMALL STANDING ARMY

Less Than 200,000 Men Under Arms-Chinese Naval Activity

SHANGHAI, Oct. 21.—In calculating SHANGHAI, Oct. 21.—In calculating the size of a national army, it is hardy possible to get beyond approximate igures. Hence a calculation of the trength of the Japanese army just produced must be received on that basis, but without any suspicion that the wanders far from the truth. Integed, the surfacely tresponsible for the , the authority responsible for the stics vouches that the actual statistics vouches that the actual numbers are in excess of those given. Taking the figures as they are pre-sented, it would appear the number of men actually under arms, or, in other words, serving with the colors,

Naval Education Yet evidence is sufficient to show that China is as energetic as its temperament will permit in bringing both its army and its navy to more modern standards of efficiency. With regard to the navy, Prince Su and his commissioners have plans for the formation of a nucleus navy, which embrace reform in naval education, encouragement of ship-building and arms manufacture, and the improvement of communications and coast defences; and Prince Tsai Hsun and Admiral Sah, commissioners, are said to have decided on the
