Moses Cate Hits the Weather.

Moses Oates has hit the wenther.

Moses Oates has hit the semi-centennia weather correctly. He predicted in The World the following area of weather for the week: "A few hot days, two cool nights, and probably two days on which rain would fail. One day will be rather rainy. Another will have one or two slight showers." That's it, exactly, so far.

Paris, July 4.—The fire which broke out in the village of Bertischwyi destroyed the entire town, leaving the inhabitants, which carried was blowing at the time, which carried sparks to a neighboring village, ignititing Gaw hotel. sparks to a neighboring village, ignititing several houses; but the energy of the villagers prevented the destruction of their PESTH, July 4.—At the election to-day at Kecskemet ior members of the Hungarian diet serious riots occurred. The military suppresed them. Herr Ray, member of the lower house, was arrested.

Another Scourge in France. MARSEILLES, July 4. - The intense heat aggravates the cholera. An outbreak of smallpox has occurred at Vigan. Seventeen deaths are reported.

Glad to Hear It. London, July 4.-The attorney general holds that colonial lawyers have the same standing in English courts as English barthe town May 1, 1884. The queer part of the affair is that the young gentleman stoutly denies that he was married. His story is that on the evening of May 1 he received an invite from the young lady to come to the house and spend the evening, and, when there, he met for the first time a slight showers." That's it, exactly, so far. Hot weather will return, according to his predictions, but not be steady till near the middle of the month, when a long and terrific spell of heat, such as has not been surpassed for years, will begin and last for ten days or more.

A Week's Fallure in Business.

St. Catharines, July 4. — Yesterday the chief of police received information that the man Hayes, alias Courtenay, against whom a charge of assault was laid some time ago, was in a house on Welland avenue. Constables Calvert, Roszel and Haslin were detailed to capture him, and on nearing his hiding place saw him escape through a window and make a bee line for the new canal. They followed sharply, and when Hayes reached the canal bank he jumped in and swam across near the cemetery. Constable Haslin, who was close behind, also took the water with a flying leap, and as each man landed on the other side they stripped off their pantaloons and had a race. Hayes, however, managed to reach a piece of woods, where at present Haslin and Roszel are hunting for him. Constable Calvert, who had to return to the city brought back the fugitives pants at a trophy. Haslin was supplied with a dry pair of pants, and in all probability they will capture the improvised Highlander, who must be in a bad trim to stand the musquitoes. Haslin were detailed to capture him and

A Toronto Man Killed at Tara.
TARA, July 4.—The boiler in McGee's sawmill, three miles east of here, exploded this afternoon. The building was entirely demolished, not a stick or board being left standing. The engineer, William Walker, was killed and D. Bennett and another workman were seriously injured. Walker was a stranger here and the whereabouts of his friends are not known, but he is believed to have belonged near Toronto. A Rise in Potatoes and Hay.

OTTAWA, July 4:- There is a sudden rise in potatoes in this locality. Ten days ago they were only from 60c. to 70c. per bag. To-day they are selling for $1.50. Hay is as high as $16 per ton.

COLBORNE, July 4.-Alexander Gregor, living two and a half miles northwest of here, committed suicide this morning by hanging. He was 87 years of age. No cause ascribed. QUEBEC, July 4 .- County Megantic nominations took place yesterday for the Board of Trade at Wingham. WINGHAM, July 4 .- A board of trade was yesterday organized at this place. Wingham is prospering very favorably and hopes to have direct connections with To-ronto at no distant date.

To the Editor of The World.

SIR: Thursday by a creditable spirit of olerance was quietly given up the U. E. loyalists as the day of their especial prominence in the semi-centennial cele bration. But it by no means follows that the majority of Torontonians or of Canadians endorse or admire the course which led to the loyalists taking refuge in this country, where they have made good citizens and done much to hasten the development of the country. Probably many descendants of the loyalists are of the same opinion on this point as the large majority of the Canadians. The rebellion of 1776 was a wholly justifiable one, a glorious one not withstanding the intolerance and sometimes genuine meanness of spirit of some of the revolutionists, which led to the loyalists leaving the country when they might have been retained and gradually brought to acquiesce in the new order of things, but no cause, however good, but is marred by some excesses and some meannesses. The U.E. loyalists should celebrate nothing. They should keep quiet about their share in the revolution—in fact, they have reason to be ashamed of their ancestors of that stormy time. It was the British pluck of the colonists that made them rebel; it was the absence of that British love of liberty that gave the loyalists that little glory which they arrogate to themselves, apparently unconscious of the part their fathers played as traitors this country, where they have made good loyalists that little glory which they arrogate to themselves, apparently unconscious of the part their fathers played as traitors to British freedom. At the very least, their course was poor-spirited and blundering. The real loyalists to British tradition and British instinct were the rebels. The only British things the leyalists ever claim is British betings. only British things the levalists ever claim is British obstinacy. If their descendents choose to glory thus, and assume airs about it, they may be allowed to do so; it hurts nobody. But if they imagine the vast majority of fellow citizens look upon them with anything but mingled pity, amusement and mild contempt, they are very greatly mistaken. The more independent descendants of the loyalists do not beest of their descent, they are rathe not boast of their descent—they are rathe ashamed of it. British Connection. Toronto, July 4, 1884.

An Opinion About U. E. Loyalists. From the London Advertiser.

It is well therefore to temper our ad miration for the old U. E. loyalists by a calm consideration of the actual facts connected with their conduct both in the American colonies and in Canada; and while we give them all the praise they deserve, let us hesitate before we set them up as models of patriotis m and good citizenship.
