THE SALOON KEEPER'S SIGN.

It is the fashion among dealers in all kinds of goods to exhibit the result of the use of their goods. The merchant places in his window finely decorated figures, showing the effects of his laces, silks and pretty ornaments. The grocer hangs up the happy pictures of "Mellin' Food Babies" and tired housekeepers rejoicing in some labor-saving soap. The shoemaker has pictures showing the gloss given to old shoes by some excellent shoe polish, and so on. In all the different kinds of business, men proudly display samples of their goods or the results of their use. The saloon keeper, however, has no desire to decorate his window in this way. He can have no pride in the work done inside. Yet, if you look near his door, very often a real live figure, the poor, ragged, shivering, little form of the child of one of the patrons of his shop, will plainly advertise his work for him. It is an example of the kind of child-life the dealer in wines and liquors will make for the little ones of his customers. These bare-footed, ragged figures standing near the bar-room doors are, alas, the life-pictures which advertise the grog-shop's work, the manufacture of a business made legal by so-called Christian governments!

In presenting this issue of our paper to the public we do so without any excuse, as we deem the financial affairs of this Province fully justify us in curtailing expenses.
