FROM JOS T. JACKSON, ESQ.

Town Plot, King's, Aug. 15th, 1885.

In answer to your circular of the 3rd inst., I beg to say that after having interviewed several fruit growers and others interested in farming in this locality, I beg to report as follows:—

Hay-crop full average, superior quality and harvested in splendid condition. Oats large acreage sown—well filled and harvested, or being harvested very satisfactorily. But little wheat sown, but yielding more largely than for several years. Small fruits quite good. Garden vegetables generally superior. Orchard fruit much below the average in quantity. Potatoes seldom ever promised as well as they do this season.

The present season so far, in Indiana, is the most productive in the history of the State. The grass and hay crop, the most important of the products, is immense and all that could be desired. The corn crop, second in importance, is magnificent, the recent hot weather with the propitious rains have given it boom by which it promises to excel in this State any previous year by several millions of bushels. The wheat crop, although comparatively light in quantity, is of good quality, and exceeds all anticipated estimates, with enough and to spare. The oat crop is the largest ever grown in the State by one fifth, and the potato crop, the most indispensable to the human family, will be of such proportions that we could feed the world. Mother Earth is certainly doing her full share to bring about good times and make happy those who tickle her bosom. These facts in connection with the auspicious omens in the rooms of the Board of Agriculture in the shape of business connected with the State Fair, to commence September 28th, give assurance of another grand success.

The last Indiana State Fair was the best agricultural exhibition in the U. S.
