

selves, and believe a fable without understanding it. They neither credit the missionaries nor their word.' But now you may say of me that such is my condition, that my faith is not sincere nor grounded on conviction. O Jesus! I trust alone in thy blood! On thee alone is my hope! O my Saviour, be gracious to me! Strengthen me, establish me, that I may never grow weary of thy service. To the world I will look no more. I am dead to the world. Take me to thy heaven, my God, that I may rejoice forever there! I pray for my brethren who are yet without thee—for the orphans whose fathers I have destroyed. You, whom I have injured, forgive me. If you had the wish to hear this from my mouth, you are now gratified. I cannot say more. I acknowledge my sins, I renounce my evil works, and I declare that my full confidence is placed in Jesus alone."

From that time, Khoabane did all he could to become a blessing to the people to whom he was, before his conversion, a curse; and now, the pious wife, whom he once despised and cruelly persecuted, because she was a christian, is the object of his love, and shares with her husband the peace of pardon, and the joy of God's salvation.—[Juv. Miss. Mag.]
