During the last c last few months the affairs of Canada have been more freely assed in the English newspapers, and a circumstance has occurred which may serve in some measure to open the set y occurred which may serve in some measure to open the system of the public. In the notorious colonization memorial to Lord John Russell, the following, among others, unwarrantable statement is made, "the former Province of Upper Canada was once in default with its public creditors." Our readers would probably like to know when the "once" was. The assertion attracted the attention of some gantleson in Evaluation connected with Canada, and they, in a most praiseworthy manner, set to work to refute the calumny. Mr. Harper, Cashier of the Commercial Bank, Mr. P. Buchanan, and the Hon. J. Dunn, were in London, and the two first named gentleman thwith forwarded to the Colonial Secretary, a communication tion denying the statement, enclosing as evidence of its untruth, a letter from Mr. Dunn, whose experience as Receiver-General enabled him to speak fully on the subject; and a joint letter frem the two well known firms of Glynn, Halifax, Mills, & Co., and Barine Deep week.

From the letter of Mr. Dunn we "I was for twenty-four years, and up to the Union of the aces of Upper and Lower Canada, the Receiver General the Upper Province, and the only circumstance on which be statement can, as I conceive, be founded, so far from showing that the Province of Canada ever was in default with its Public creditor, will prove that on the only occasion on which such a mistor. such a misortune was apprehended, it was not from a want of good faith or of power on the part of the Province to meet its engage. gements, but from the sudden failure of the Agents in Lon-

Pon the receipt of the intelligence of that event, I came ingland, with the hope that, as Receiver General of the viace, and from the influence of my connections here, an adequate arrangement would be effected for preventing any discredit to the Province, or inconvenience to the public creditor, from the loss of the large sums in the hands of the London Agents, pointed.

The reply from Downing Street is highly satisfactory. ter thanking the parties for calling attention to the statement, it says :-

"His Lordship, however, now avails himself of the opportu nity you have afforded him of stating that he can, from the sources of knowledge at his own command, confirm your assertion that there is no incident in the history of the United Province, or of either of the Provinces when separate, which would justify the charge that any default had ever occurred in the payment of any debts due to any person in respect to money lent on the public faith of either of the Canadian Provinces. "On the contrary, he believes that faith has been invariably kept by the Canadian Legislature, with all such public creditors, with the most scrupulous exactness."

The refutation is complete, and will be more widely circulated than the "Memorial," besides being based on much better authority. Altogether the affair will have done us good. We want something now and then to draw attention this way .-British Canadian.

GOVERNMENT SCHEME OF EDUCATION.

(From the British Canadian.) The effect of the plan will be, that every denomination of Christians will have their schools under the superintendence of their own people and clergy, receiving the assistance of Government in the shape of a share of the appropriation, on satisfying the proper authorities of the efficiency of their schools and teachers, and that some religion, embracing the learning of the Holy Scriptures, is taught by them. It has been ably contended, and with much sound reason, that the Government of a country possessing an Established Church cannot, with propriety, assist in the education, religious and secular, of the dissenting denominations. The strong fact stares one in the face that such a policy is assisting and encouraging dissent. Who then might have been expected to offer opposition to the Government scheme? The clergy and laity of the Established Church, if any body, we should be led to imagine, as the compromise on behalf of the whole community, is the greatest.—Such is not the case, however. The Church supports the scheme, and has thrown its weight and influence into the scale, in aid of the Whig Government. The crying necessity for improved education as applied to all the people, and a desire to resist no plan which should promise so desirable an end, have dictated this course. The scheme is opposed by the dissenters, at all events, by a certain very noisy portion of them, at the head of whom is a Mr. Baines, an itinerant maker of long specches, professedly against Government interference on the subject, but in fact against educating the people. The dissen-The effect of the plan will be, that every denomination of speeches, professedly against Government interference on the subject, but in fact against educating the people. MARK OF RESPECT. - On the evening of Tuesday last, a Well-deserved token of esteem and respect was paid to Mr. James Watkins, on his resignation of the foremanship of the British Colonist office, by the compositors and pressmen of this city.—

On the next day, at noon, an Inquest was held before Mr. Bosworth, coroner, and a jury, consisting partly of residents in Galt (who had gone down to the spot to testify their sympathy with the afflicted parents) and the remainder of gentlemen from the registry of the compositors and pressmen of this city.—

Upon hearing the circumstances, the practical printers of the city, being desirous of bearing testimony to Mr. W.'s courteous and upright behaviour towards them, forwarded him the following requisition :-

Toronto, May 15, 1847. SIR,-We, the undersigned, respectfully request that you will be pleased to favour us with your presence at a Supper, on the evening of Tuesday next, at the North American Hotel.— The reasons which induce us to make this request are, that, having relinquished your situation in the office of the British Colonist, we desire to take the above method in order to express our approbation of your conduct as a foreman, our respect for you as a man, and our admiration of the manner in which you have always endeavoured to uphold the rights and interests of To Mr. James Watkins.

FIRE.—About 4 o'clock yesterday (Sunday) morning, the alarm of fire was given, which was found to proceed from the work shop (a waggon maker's) in the rear of a small tavern (the Tyrone Arms), on Adelaide Street, near Yonge Street. Owing to the extraordinary efforts of the Fire Companies, the flames were speedily got under, and further danger averted.—
The fire originated in the very midst of a closely built block of small wooden tenements, all occupied by small families; so that but for the praiseworthy exertions of the firemen—to whom the public owe a lasting debt of gratitude—the whole block might have been reduced to ashes. It is considered that the fire was the work of an incendiary; and one if not two persons, have been apprehended on suspicion. - Herald. HOME DISTRICT ASSIZES .- The trial of Stephen Turney, for the murder of McPhilips, in Markham, in November, took place on Tuesday last, and occupied the Court during the greater part of the day. The case for the Crown was conducted by the learned Attorney-General in his usual clear and efficient manner. In his address to the jury he stated very plainly and concisely the nature of the evidence he intended to adduce of the prisoner's guilt. The evidence is what is called circumstantial, but consisting of such a train of circumstances, and proved by independent testimony, agreeing in all respects, and so consistent, that Mr. Draper urged it was more conclusive than, in many cases, direct evidence would be. A witness might, for the purpose of screening himself, or for other reasons, be induced to swear, untruly, that he saw an act committed by another; but a variety of circumstances, proved by various means, and unanswered, could not (it was argued) tell a falsehood. It ap unanswered, could not (it was argued) tell a falschood. It appears that at the time the murder was committed, and an investigation took place, this man (Turney) was not suspected, and was actually met on the road, between this city and the village of Markham, by the officers on their way out to the scene of the crime. It was afterwards considered somehat strange, that this man residing near the store where deceased was murdered, and in the habit of seeing him frequently, should be taking the discovery to the control of the co ing no active part in assisting to discover the murderer, and, suspicion being roused, it was discovered that he had been seen king Firm, of which Mr. Glynn was a member, and the interest."

the money. This was not done, but while in gaol, shortly after his comittal for trial, the prisoner made a voluntary statement, in which he represented himself as accessory to the crime, and naming another as the principal. On examination the latter proved an alibi, to the complete satisfaction of the magistrates, and was discharged. This no doubt told against the prisoner; and his previous character was not in his favour. The defence was conducted by G. Duggan, Esquire. The learned Chief Justice summed up the evidence very fully, and commented upon its peculiar bearings upon the case. The real danger is, in leaving a probability, that some one else, and not the prisoner has committed the crime. If any such probability existed in this case, there was every opportunity afforded for its being made appavent, and it was not.

The murder was most atrocious and cold-blooded, having

We trust he will be punished as heavily as the law will permit, and that the affair will have the effect of suppressing his den, as well as warning his gentlemen (?) customers against encouraging similar establishments.— British

It consisted of what was given by a woman who saw the child fall into the creek,—of the person who took the body out of the water,— and of others who testified that the spot where he fell into the water was unsafe, unfenced, and dangerous, and ought no longer to be permitted to remain so; and that if the waste gate on the dam had been down on that day, as it ought to have been, the body could not have been carried into the river, and life might have been saved. The body was identified by the clothes. The jury returned a verdict "that the body now before us is that of Robert, son of Mr. R.
