King John's Treasure.

Speculation as to the possible recovery of lost treasure will be revived by the discovery that a fragment believed to be part of the hoard lost by King Iohn nearly 700 years ago has been found.

The king lost the ancient regalia of England, many Norman jewels, the crown of King Alfred, and other valuables in his disastrous journey from King's Lynn across the Wash. Late in 1905 a Wisbach publican, who was digging for clams at Gedney Drove End, on the border of the Wash, found a mud-encrusted cup about 3 inches high.

It appeared to be valueless, but he took it home. Last week a builder, who was doing repairs in the publican's house, noticed the old cup and bought it for a shilling. Next day he cleaned the cup and saw that it was handsomely chased and that it appeared to be of silver.

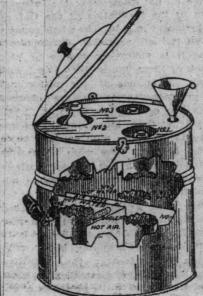

He showed it to a jeweler, who offered
