PROPOSED TO KILL CAPT. COOK

This Part of Plot in United States to Foment Revolution in India

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Dr. Frederick A. Cook, Arctic explorer, and a crew of nineteen sailors were among those marked for assassination by the leaders of a revolution in India to embarrass Great Britain during the war, according to testimony given by Sukumar Chatterji, a Hindu priest, in Judge Landis' court yesterday at the session of the trial of Gustav H. Jacobsen, a wealthy Chicago real estate dealer, and his three co-defendants, charged with the conspiracy.

He said that wholesale murder and the kidnapping of numerous persons was part of the programme outlined. This part of the plot, Chatterji said, was revealed to him in Manila by George Paul Boehm, one of the defendants.

Boehm said that he had planned to kill Captain Cook and his crew who were to make an expedition in the vicinity of the Himalaya mountains, said the witness. "Boehm was to assume the name of Captain Cook and the other men in our party were to assume names of the other sailors who were to be killed. I protested. It was Boehm's plan to go through India under the guise of the explorer and foment a revolt among the natives against Great Britain."

HOOVER MAY ORDER RATIONING OF CANDY

If Consumption of Sweets is Not Cut Down Economy May Be Made Compulsory

Warns of Sugar Shortage—Food Administrator Also Asks That the Public Refuse to Pay Exorbitant Prices

Washington, Oct. 17.—Warning that there would be a temporary shortage of sugar in the eastern and southern states and that consumers must co-operate to meet conditions, was given last night by Herbert C. Hoover, food administrator. Unless the consumption of candy and sweets is cut down at least one-third, he said, it might be necessary to place these articles on a rationing basis.

Mr. Hoover said prices should not go up to the consumer, and under agreements made with the industry New York should buy its sugar at a retail price of eight cents. He asks consumers to join in refusing to pay exorbitant prices. Retailers are requested to sell only in small quantities to consumers. A recent appeal made for sugar conservation, Mr. Hoover said, had not been met generally. He again requested the public to aid him in his effort to supply America and still maintain shipments to France, where renewed supplies were necessary.

Mr. Hoover's statement read in part: "There will be a temporary shortage in the supply of sugar to the area north of Savannah, and east of Pittsburgh during the latter part of October and the month of November pending the arrival in the market of new sugar. The beet sugar factories in the Western States are rapidly coming into action, and, together with the Hawaiian production, will be able in a short time to take care of the sugar supply in the area west of the territory above referred to."

"The price of beet sugar and Hawaiian sugar has been fixed by contract at 7.25 cents, Atlantic and Pacific seaboard basis, from the factories. Allowing for freight differentials and handling charges, the retail prices should not exceed eight cents, San Francisco; 8 1/2 cents, Denver; 8 1/4 cents, Chicago; 8 1/10 cents, St. Louis; 9 cents, New Orleans, and 8 1/16 cents, Pittsburgh."

"The shortage of sugar in the north-eastern states is due to two causes. First, the failure of the American public outside many loyal homes to reduce their consumption of candy and sweets. The consumption of sugar on the constant and insistent appeals that have been made by the food administration since June, and secondly, to the unusual exports made to France, in order that we might maintain to them their ration, which has now been reduced to one pound per month per person. The consumption of sugar in the United States is, even now, over ten pounds per month per person, and a saving of one-third of the candy and sweet, drink consumption would have saved the situation now confronting the eastern states."

"Finally, all of the cane sugar in the hands of the refiners and the producers has now been distributed to the jobbers and retailers at 10 cents per pound. During the last two months, on upon a basis that should reach the consumer in the neighborhood of nine cents per pound. Therefore, if by virtue of the shortage in the eastern states, the price of sugar should increase, it is only proof that it has been increased at the hands of the handling trades—not at the hands of either the producer or the refiner."

"The food administration asks the public not to pay more for sugar during the present shortage than it has been paying during the last thirty days. When the supply of beet sugar reaches the Atlantic seaboard, it should be available upon a less basis than the can prices above mentioned."

"Furthermore, the food administration requests that all jobbers in the west, as well as in the east, should distribute their sugar with care amongst the retailers in much reduced quantities, and that the retailers, in turn, should refuse to sell but a very limited quantity to any one customer. We also trust that jobbers will not allow their sugar to any retailer who advances the price."

"A remedial contribution can be made if the American people will at once reduce their consumption of candy and sweets. Many of the country have responded to the appeals for voluntary reduction, and unless we can secure a wider and immediate reduction of the sugar consumption in candy, ice cream and sweet drinks, it will be necessary next year to curtail the supplies to these industries, as has been done all over Europe."

IMPORTANT CONFERENCE AT BOSTON YESTERDAY

Boston, Oct. 18.—A conference described by Governor McCall as probably one of the most important held in this section since the entrance of this country into the war, took place at the state house today. New England governors, senators, congressmen and heads of public safety committees participated. Governor McCall said that in addition to questions of food and fuel, to be discussed, he would bring up the unsolved problem of the sugar shortage established as a port of storage and shipment for war supplies.

TOOK SCENES IN TRENCHES

D. W. Griffith Returns with Moving Picture Views of Warfare

David W. Griffith, an American motion picture director, who has been in France for seven months taking scenes of real warfare at the front returned this week to an Atlantic port, accompanied by the sisters Dorothy and Lillian Gish, who took part in a realistic drama that will be produced in the United States.

"Thanks to the assistance of the British officers," Mr. Griffith said, "we caught actual scenes in the first line trenches and the surrounding panoramas which was often a view forty miles long and ten to fifteen miles deep. By the aid of the new French lenses, with their fourteen-inch depths, one is able to show a charge along a two or three miles front and also to picture the grim work in the mud-holes called trenches close enough to depict men actually wounded at their work, while others are tossing hand grenades over the ridge at the enemy's lines fifty yards away."

"There were numbers of Americans fighting in the Canadian ranks and in the French army. On one occasion near Ypres a shell burst close beside one of our big cameras and it nearly killed it. Another shell which fell a little distance away killed eleven men who were mending a hole in the road."

With regard to the life in the trenches, Mr. Griffith said: "The soldiers do not get used to it. They bear it because there is no other place to go. When a barrage is moving slowly across a field you have to watch and see if it is coming your way. If you lose your head and become nervous it means that you run into the curtain of fire and are killed instantly."

The Misses Gish said that they were not nearly so affected by the artillery fire at the front as they were in London during the six air raids which occurred in one week. The hotel where they were staying was struck three times, but not badly damaged.
